EAST RAISIN.

Orange Blossoms and Happy New Year

New Year's day was rendered memorable at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Holdridge by the marriage of their daughter Ella to Mr. Archie Boyd. At about noon the guests began to assemble and at 12:30 the house was well filled with about one hundred persons. The rooms were darkened and the lighted lamps, together with the profuse floral decorations, gave them an exceedingly neat and tasty appearance. At the appointed hour the wedding march was struck up and the party marched into the room taking their position under a large wedding bell composed of evergreens and flowers. After the ceremony was completed, and the couple had received the kind wishes and congratulations of their numerous friends, the guests were served with refreshments; after which the bridal pair, amid a host of "good-bye's", left to take the afternoon train for the east. After a short visit at Rochester and vicinity they will return and take up their permanent residence on the old farm where twenty-one years ago this date Mr. and Mrs. Holdridge were united in marriage. To-day they celebrate that event in a manner well fitting the occasion, and henceforth New Year's day will possess a new and rare significance.

HOLLOWAY.

The literary society met as usual on Saturday evening, but the holiday season has presented too many attractions for the members and the attendance was very small. The new president, Frank Rogers, was inaugurated and new committees were appointed. The next meeting will possess several new and interesting features and will merit a larger attendance.

Rev. Mr. Hunt has tendered his resignation as the pastor of our church. He and his family will leave for Fenton this week, where his services have been engaged for the present year.

Tom Bennett has resigned his position as telegraph operator and goes into Canada. Phon Sutton, of Ridgeway takes his place.

Hoxie & Co. did their first casting in their new shop on last Thursday.

Prof. Billmeyer and wife of Ann Arbor are spending the holidays among their friends here.

C. W. Arner returned to Toledo on Monday to take up his new position in C. H. Howard & Co's. commission house.

Mr. Jerome Green, who has been quite sick for several weeks past is around again.

Some musical angel has sounded his trump and the resurrection of the Rabin cornet band will unmercifully take place.

On New Year's eve, the Sunday school gave a concert and cantata, consisting of recitations by the children and music by the school. Mr. Frank Rogers delivered an oration on the History of the Reformation which was finely rendered and well received. Mr. Hunt, and others, also made some suitable remarks, at the close of which the Superintendent dismissed the school with a Happy New Year's wish.

ADDISON.

Christmas, New Year, all the long pleasant holidays, have come and passed on to history, and this little dot of a country ville, with just as much dramatic interest as did those the novelist has so many times tried to describe. Yes, the last oyster has disappeared, the last much prized gift carefully put away, and the mind turns again to the music and the [illegible] other year. In doing so let us—. Well, we were about to suggest resolutions, purposes, etc., as applying to the future, but the thought of past inconsistences on our own part suggest something like modesty, hence we desist.

The present prospects for future prosperity appear good at this place.—The new machinery for manufacturing patent flour at the grist mill is nearly ready to be put in operation.

Messrs. Younglove & LaBarr's steam saw mill is now fully equipped for work, while Mr. E. M. Wilson's poultry shipping establishment has handled over six thousand dollars worth of fowls this season, and affords employment for a large number of persons. These recently established industries in connection with the impetus the proposed railroad will naturally impart to the place, suffice to revive the long latent hope that Addison might yet be able to cope with other of her more favored sisters whose location and natural surroundings are less favored than are hers.

Applicants to labor on the new road are arriving daily, and much interest is evinced by our citizens in the enterprise. Dirt will begin to fly at an early date.

WEST TECUMSEH.

By Local Telegraph Line:

Father time has doffed his old suit, procured a new one and starts out again for another year's journey.

Mrs. Kate Torbon, of Madison, is visiting in the neighborhood.

A candidate for dress goods arrived last week at John Carson's. She will board there for the present.

Mr. Myron Bowen, of Menton, Wexford county, a resident of this vicinity 36 years ago, is visiting at his brother's, N. K. Bowen, and nephews', R. J. W. & J. F. N. Bowen.

Manager Bowen, of the local telegraph line, is busy now days putting in new instruments and giving lessons to new students. The company is doing well under his management.

Mr. Asa Crane and Myron Pierce, of Adrian, were running foxes hereabouts yesterday.

EAST TECUMSEH.

The Literaries are getting to be so interesting as to draw crowded houses. The one last Saturday evening was the best of the season. A good programme was carried out, and the debate on the question of "Foreign Emigration" was hotly contested on both sides. The negative won the question by a decided majority. The following is a list of the officers for the next quarter: Pres., A. G. Hall; Vice President, Jas. H. Aten; Sec'y, Miranda Robertson; Treasurer, Mrs. J. T. Boyce; Chairman Executive Committee, E. E. Hall. Programme for next meeting: Music, by Choir; Rec., Florence Merritt; Select Reading, Grant Garlinghouse; Dec., Harry Hendershot; Music, Misses, Miranda Robertson and Nellie Boyce; Rec., Rinda Benedict; Reading, Nellie Boyce; Dec., Albert Boyce; Splinters and Chips, J. H. Aten; Music, by the Choir; Question—Resolved, that the pulpit has done more to enlighten mankind than the press; affirmative—C. W. Culbertson, B. F. DePuy, A. S. Murphy; negative—Philip Kehoe, R. R. Hall, J. T. Boyce.

Mrs. Fannie Weed, nee Culbertson, and husband are spending a few days with friends in this vicinity.

Roswell Raymond and wife, formerly of Raisin, but now of Romulus, Wayne county, are visiting friends in Raisin and vicinity.

Philip DePuy, who has been on the sick list for some time, has so far recovered as to be able to ride to Clinton and pay his taxes.

CLINTON.

Charles Everts has just completed valuable improvements on his house.

Miss Lou Howland, of Albion, is spending a few days in Clinton, the guest of her cousin, Estella Lawrence.

We understand she goes from here to the young ladies' Seminary, at Monroe.

The programme at the Blue Ribbon meeting, last Sabbath, was a good one, and was attentively listened to by a large audience.

The Episcopal social, Monday evening, was held at the residence of Jacob Smith, two miles west of the village, and proved a large and happy New Year's gathering.

Mrs. S. E. Clark's health is such as to make it impossible for her to attend to the millinery business, in consequence of which that establishment is closed, awaiting a successor. A grand chance for some good milliner.

Every New Year brings Mrs. Felton $140 in gold, to help her on in the happiness of the occasion.

Carpenter Brewster again greets us with those genial smiles, after having paid his friends in Northern Michigan a short visit.

Ed. Clark has been quite busy for a few days, shipping apples to Chicago.

D. H. Silvers closes his clothing store in Clinton on Saturday next, and moves the remaining goods to Manchester.

S. W. Demuth and wife spent New Year's at the lakes. It is reported that Sell took his gun with him. Did he? Perhaps he shot those counts he turned in on the big hunt.

Manchester celebrated New Year's with a masquerade ball, and several young men from this village attended. Rumor says Clinton should keep quiet hereafter about the Tecumseh novelty company.

Dr. Strong was here for a few days last week, shaking hands with old friends, and speaking good-bye, preparatory to going to Cairo, Southern Illinois.

Dr. Burroughs is moving into the house formerly occupied by William Fleming, belonging to E. W. Freese.

Rev. O. W. Winton, of Milan, was in town one day last week, having made a flying visit to the home of Mrs. Winton, (Uncle Robert McCollins), west of this place.

Kelsey, the spring-tooth man, of Manchester, was in town Tuesday. He reports spring-drag business dull, and chickens on the rise.

Miss Mary Rich has returned from her visit north.

We are glad to see our old friend Roswell Randall out again, after his severe illness.

"That Boy," at Town Hall, Tuesday evening, was a real jovial chap, and produced a volume of interest for a large and appreciative audience. The verdict, as far as we could learn, was, may he come again and tell us of "That Boy's Sister."

The roads are splendid hereabouts, and this accounts for the large gatherings at the socials that are held in the country now. The M. E. social at Van Howell's, Wednesday evening, was a success in every particular.

C. P. Bancroft and wife, of Napoleon, are the guest of Don Palmer.

Dr. W. B. Banks and wife returned yesterday from Detroit.

Dame Rumor says that blossoms are almost in full bloom in this village. Perhaps it is not so. We saw her anxiously drinking down "That Boy's" past, present and future, Tuesday evening, and she may have changed her mind. If not, we will speak again next week. K.

A new idea embraced in Ely's Cream Balm. Catarrh is cured by causing discharge and cleansing, not by drying up. The application is easy and agreeable. Price 50 cents. Apply into nostrils with little finger.

From B. F. Lispenard, A. M., [illegible] Bank, N. J.: I have been troubled with Catarrh so badly for several years that it seriously affected my voice. I tried Dr. ——'s remedy without the slightest relief. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm did the work. My voice is fully restored and my head feels better than for years. B. F. LISPENARD.

Ely's Cream Balm has given perfect satisfaction. I would recommend it to every one suffering from Catarrh, Cold in the Head, Hay Fever, and as being one of the best medicines I have ever dealt or sold.

Tom-Cats and Mashers.

A tom-cat sat on a back-yard fence
With an aching heart and a soul intense,
Rigged out in a style in every sense
Immense.

He sat alone in his faultless attire,
And his bosom burned with a sacred fire
As he warbled out an [illegible] lonely desire—
Maria.

He was musing upon his lonely lot,
And he said to himself, "She cometh not,
What a terrible heartache I have got—
Great Scott!

"How terribly lonesome I feel! How queer
To be sitting alone with nobody near—
Oh! how much I wish Maria was here—
Mon Dieu!

"The thought of it fills me with horrible dismay—
I should smile, I should blush, I should wait,
I should shout,
Just suppose some fellow had cut me out—
Me-out!

"Ah, there she comes now soft as a rat,"
But alas, he'd mistaken the soft pit-a-pat,
His Maria was only a brother tom-cat—
"How's that?"

Thought Tom No. 1 of Tom No. 2,
But No. 2 bounced him without mon-ceado,
And suddenly both departed from view—
Now mew.

Oh, ill fared it then for Tom No 1,
For as soon as the enemy's work was done,
Of all his fine raiment he left him none—
Such fun!

Now all you young mashers who dress with such care,
The hearts of the guileless to slave and ensnare,
You'd better remember this tale and beware—
Take care.

JOY AT LAST.

"My darling—my little Pansy, the time has come."

"Oh, John, you must not go! I cannot let you; I cannot bear it," sobbed Pansy, with heart-breaking violence, and clinging to him in an agony of grief. "Oh, do not go—do not go!"

"Why, Pansy, my darling, my brave little wife, what has come over you?" he exclaimed, much touched and impressed with the violence of her grief. "It is so short a time—only six months. And think——"

"But I do not care for the money," she interrupted, lifting her face, that each moment grew more drawn and pallid in its misery. "My soul is filled with some horrible foreboding. Oh, John, do not leave me. We are happy, and have more than enough to live on; leave this old uncle to dispose of his money elsewhere. Oh, John——"

"Pansy," he exclaimed almost sternly, "you do wrong to talk so. I go to win the money for you and baby. It is my love for you that takes me on this dreary voyage, and makes me willing to spend six drearier months with a sick whimsical old man. My darling, I will suffer more than you; but when I come back I place you in the luxury you left to become my wife. Be brave and cheerful, darling; kiss me good-bye with your own sweet smile, and do not let me see tears at the last."

She said no more. A dumb despair seemed to have taken possession of her, and in their parting caress she only clung to him for a brief moment as if soul and body would be rent asunder the next moment. Then someone—she did not know who—guided her over the gang-plank and placed her baby in her arms.

Quickly her eyes, dry now, and strained in their misery, sought out one dear face among the many thronging the deck. She saw his eyes glistening with tears and his lips moving; but in the shouts and ringing of bells, the groans of the huge ship, dashing great waves in its efforts to start, she could hear nothing.

Slowly it moved out and away. A wide seething gulf lay between them, and he could only see her start to her feet and hold the baby out. Then, as the distance increased, he saw a man step to her side, and apparently support her.

"Lend me your glass—just a moment—for God's sake!" he exclaimed to some one near. Then, lifting it and drawing that beloved face and form nearer, he saw that she was leaning back against some boxes, with her sweet face colorless, and with closed eyes, supported by a grey-haired gentleman of familiar aspect. Several were around her, and some woman held little Lillian; and just as he noticed this, the grey-haired man lifted and turned his face toward the retreating steamer. It was Gordon Leslie, his millionaire employer.

A few days later the Herald contained this brief dispatch:

"Ocean steamer Adelaide, bound for Liverpool, five days out, wrecked. All on board supposed lost. Particulars tomorrow."

And to-morrow had confirmed the report.

Pansy was a widow—baby Lillian was fatherless.

A month before, John Eldridge had received, from a wealthy eccentric old uncle in England, the following letter:

"JOHN.—I am lonely—I am going to die. I have no heir. Come and [illegible] six months—though I think I will die before that time—and I will leave my money to you. You by rights ought to have it. Your father was my favorite brother, and was with me when I made much of it. If you are married, leave your wife at home. It would not be pleasant for her here; besides, I want all your time to do my reading and writing, in payment for which I will give you two hundred a month to send her, or to keep yourself if you are still single. Answer at once.—Your uncle,

"RANDOLPH ELDRIDGE."

And for Pansy's sake John had written back,

"I will come."

He was proud, and sensitive, and poor, and when Pansy became his wife she renounced a home and life of luxury.

Now he could give it all back to her, could see her freed from the cares and worries of a poor man's wife, could see her lovely, radiant, and happy, in the joys and pleasures that once had been hers. And would he not do it?

* * * * *

Night was coming slowly on. A bitterly cold wind swept round every corner and found a thousand ways of creeping into a poor rickety tenement-room where, on the floor beside a straw pallet, a frail girlish figure crouched, her arms encircling something, and one pitiful moan after another crossing her pallid lips.

"Oh God, do not take her! Leave her to me, or let me die with her. Oh, I am too weak to pray, the words choke me. Oh, my baby, my baby; do not die and leave me all alone!"

The pinched little face on her arm lighted with no response. The dear baby's eyes did not open, and as her cry had sunk with a despairing cry, a loud knock almost demolished the shattery door, which was speedily pushed open, admitting a man and a woman.

"This is Mrs. Eldridge, sir," the latter said.

"Mrs. Eldridge—good God, you are mistaken!" exclaimed the gentleman, falling back a step and taking in, with one glance, the small room, fireless, bare, and windy, the pallet and the kneeling figure.

"Yes, it is; and she's fainted or something!" cried the woman, hurrying by him, and touching Pansy's shoulder.

She had indeed fainted, and with one lift of her strong arms Mrs. Ross laid her on the pallet, with her pale pinched face upturned, and proceeded to vigorously rub the lifeless hands.

"You say you are a friend of the lady's sir?" she said, turning to the stranger, who stood apparently stupefied. "So I'll make bold to tell you the truth. She's a-dyin' out of pure hunger, weakness, and a-grievin' for the little sick baby. I'm going to fetch a doctor and get some wine and things, I'll have 'em carried down to my room, third floor front, where it's warm."

"Yes, I will at once—dying of hunger—my God!" exclaimed the stranger, disappearing as if no haste could be great enough.

So it was that when Pansy awakened, her first thought was that God had heard her prayer and taken both herself and baby to heaven.

Certain it was that she was warm, oh, so warm. Kind faces bent over her, her hands were in some one's tender clasp, and there was a little gurgling sound like baby's precious laugh.

For one wild, delicious moment she thought they were in heaven. It was John who held her hands, it was baby's laugh she heard. They were together, never, never to be again separated.

Then reason slowly came to banish the delirious joy. One face after another became familiar. The room found its place in her memory. Then she saw another face, and with a startled flash of recognition spoke his name:

"Mr. Leslie!"

"Mrs. Eldridge," he answered.

"Oh," she exclaimed, seizing the hand he held out. "How good it seems to see you; how it makes me think——"

But there she broke into choking sobs and buried her face in the pillow.

"Don't cry, dear; just see here," exclaimed Mrs. Ross, and with the quick instinct of one who knows mother-love, she held to Pansy little Lillian, who in truth was laughing—warmth and food had driven death away from his coveted prey. And as Pansy snatched her baby, with her grief turned to joy, Mrs. Ross hurried into the next room, so that the friends might have a chance to talk to each other.

"Why did you run away?" were Gordon Leslie's words.

"I did not run away," answered Pansy in some surprise. "I simply went because I had to. When—when everything was changed so, I could not afford to live there. I had to work."

"You work!" he exclaimed. "And your father worth thousands!"

"My father cast me off," she said simply. "I loved and married a poor man, and I have never been sorry."

"But your husband earned a good salary in my bank; he must have left you something when he left."

"Excuse my asking—I want to be your friend—what has brought you to this strait?" exclaimed Mr. Leslie, rising and walking about the room in great agitation.

"One misfortune after another," she answered sadly.

"A week after I first moved the house was burned, and Lillian and I lost everything, besides some money I had just drawn from the bank.

"It was a severe loss, and ate deeply into my small account.

"Then, when I found work, I suppose I worked too hard, for I fell very ill, and for three months had to be nursed, besides paying the doctor, and having some one to take care of Lillian.

"After that I was so long weak I could not work, and it takes money to live, you know."

There she broke down, sobbing pitifully, and coming to the lounge he laid his hand on her sunny head, over which so many clouds had passed, and tenderly said:

"Poor child! poor child!"

Coming from him, gray haired and nearly twice her years, it seemed fatherly loving, and was inexpressibly comforting to Pansy's aching heart.

She did not dream of the love and longing in his heart to take her in his arms, to comfort and protect her, to tell her never to worry or grieve again, but be his wife, give him the right to love and shield her, and to learn to love him if she could.

No, she did not guess, nor did he speak it then.

But two months later, when, through his influence, she [illegible] paying work, and her frail strength again rebelled, he went to her, resolved that he would save her precious life and make her his own.

"Be my wife," he said, stretching out his arms to her with a praverful vehemence. "Let me save you. Give me the right to love and care for you, for you are dearer to me than my own life."

"I—I your wife?" she cried, shrinking back in her chair and putting out one hand as if to ward him off. "Oh no, Mr. Leslie, you do not mean it—you do not love me—you do not——"

"But I do," he interrupted vehemently. "When that love was wrong, I knew that it was in my heart. Since I have felt the right to cherish it, it has filled my whole life. Listen to me. Oh, Pansy——"

"Hush!" she cried, starting up with a cry of pain. "That was his name to me. No one else ever called me so. Oh, Mr. Leslie, say no more to me. My heart, my life—aye, all but what I live for, my child—is buried in the ocean with my husband. But for my child I would pray to die; for her I must live."

"Yes, for her you must live," he interrupted her. "And for her sake listen to me. I do not expect you to love me—I know too well how you love, once given, is deathless. But you do not hate me. Give me liking, respect, and esteem, and the right to love you and save your life for your child's sake and mine, and I will be content.

"If you refuse, think of the wrong you do her. But a few weeks more of this life and your frail strength will be gone. Your child will be fatherless, motherless, homeless, and in her babyhood.

"Can you view that picture, knowing its certainty, and consent to it?"

With a shuddering moan she sank back in her chair.

How well she knew the bitter truth of what he said.

A gurgling laugh from Lillian, in the next room, started her to her feet again as if in wild desperation.

"But it would not be right," she wailed suddenly. "I do not love you—I can never love you. Oh, Mr. Leslie, in mercy's name take back what you have said."

He understood her. Knew how love for her child was urging her to accept a love she could never return.

For answer he held out his arms and only repeated:

"For her sake."

"Go away," cried Pansy suddenly, almost fiercely. "Give me time—a week—and perhaps Heaven will tell me what to do. Don't come until I send for you—promise me."

"I promise," he said, and, taking her hands, kissed each, and said once more:

"Be merciful to us both."

Then after he was gone, Pansy sank down on her knees with her hands lifted and agonisingly prayed:

"Help me, guide me, oh, Father in heaven. I am as one blind; lead me, have mercy on me!"

Even as she prayed her answer came. Lillian pushed open the door, and, with her pretty toddling tumbling walk, reached her kneeling mother, and over her bowed head flapped a paper.

"Mamma, tut; mamma, tut," she cooed.

"God help me, this must be my answer." Pansy moaned, rising and taking the child in her feeble arms.

"Mamma, tut; mamma tut," persisted Lillian, flapping the paper.

"Yes, darling, yes," answered Pansy, reaching for the scissors. "Mamma will cut pretty kitty for Lillian—see!"

But what Lillian saw was something startling indeed! The scissors paused in the first slash, and in a moment, fell nerveless, then a scream thrillingly clear echoed through the house, as Pansy started to her feet, made one tottering step and fell, one name having echoed across her lips: "John! John!"

For in the very paper Lillian brought was the following:

"PANSY,—God grant that this may meet your eye. Where are you? My escape was miraculous. I have written, searched, and advertised, and am almost wild with despair. I try this in a frenzy of failing hope. I have been in New York over two months. Am at our old address. JOHN ELDRIDGE."

Before life returned to Pansy, her husband did. She was in his arms when she awakened, and, with a faint, joyous cry, she swooned again.

But joy seldom kills, nor can such sacred joy be described. So we will only listen to his story, told some hours after, in the presence of Mr. Leslie.

"The storm came in the night," he said. "It was as brief as destructive. I saw that everything was going to be lost, and lashed myself to a table. I was carried off by the waves and remained conscious for three days; then hunger and exhaustion overcome me.

"An outward bound vessel saw and hauled me in, as good as dead, when I next knew anything I was helpless in a seaport town and strangers. They said I had been there over a week.

"I telegraphed at once to you and Uncle Randolph, receiving an immediate reply from him, but nothing from you. I tried again and again, and then alarm threw me into a terrible relapse.

"I was ill three months; then Uncle Randolph sent on two physicians and had me removed to his house. The journey gave me another relapse, and another fever followed. I hung on the very verge of death for two months, then began to mend, and at the end of two more started to come home. I fainted before reaching the steamer, and was taken back.

"When at last I was strong enough to come, I could find no trace or clue of you. I went to Buffalo and saw your parents, and, Pansy darling, they are wild with grief, and have retracted all their bitter words.

"I spoke of going at once to Mr. Leslie, but our landlady at once said that she knew nothing of you, and had called repeatedly to know if she had learned anything. I intended to go and see him any way on his own account, but kept putting it off, as heart and brain were so full of other things.

"To-day I put in the personal, and this afternoon went round to see him. You may imagine our meeting. He has told me everything, darling, and——"

There he paused, choked with emotion, and Mr. Leslie, hurriedly rising, took a hand of each, and said agitatedly:

"From the bottom of my heart I say, 'God bless you both.' Think of me sometimes in your joy——"

But there he also broke down, and with a hurried pressure to each hand, went away; and John Eldridge, gathering his child and his wife, so frail and feeble, into his arms, kissed them repeatedly, with the fervent exclamation:

"Please God, you will never know want again. I have come back a rich man, and all that love and money can do to win roses and health back will be done, my darling."

The Persian Rose.

Pyrethrum rose, the insecticide plant, is perfectly hardy in this climate, and may be raised as easily as the conflower or mayweed. The value of the powder made from the flower as an insecticide can hardly be estimated, since it is sure death to many of our most destructive pests, and yet utterly harmless to human beings and the larger animals.

"I believe that mine will be the [illegible] of Abel," said a devoted wife to her husband one day. "How so?" inquired the husband. "Because Abel was killed by a club, and your club will kill me if you continue to go to it every night."

Placing the adjective: Clara (looking at the bonnets, etc.): "Don't you think they are very handsome?" Amy (whose thoughts are on the other side of the street); "Very, 'specially the one with the black mustache."

Scientific Notes.

Pure thorium, so far as M. Nelson's experiments go, shows a specific gravity very nearly 11.00 and an atomic volume of 21.1.

Typhoid fever in Paris seems to bear a pretty constant relation to the sanitary conditions of the dwellings occupied by the afflicted.

Honey, after it is clarified, Herr E. Myhus has discovered, can be kept from fermenting or losing its flavor by adding to it about 1 per cent. of formic acid.

Wines made from the wild oranges of Florida are alleged to have greatly prized therapeutic properties. The manufacture of these beverages is very simple.

As to the convulsing nature of curare M. County states that it is not only a paralyzing but also primarily a convulsing poison. Nor is it merely a peripheric poison: it to a certain degree affects also the nerve centers.

Ether spray, in the practice of Dr. McColgannan, has not only immediately relieved facial neuralgia, but has effected a permanent cure. The intense cold produced is considered to have acted on the affected nerve so as to have produced a complete change in the nutrition and its action.

Dugong-oil, which is yielded by an herbivorous cetacean of the waters of Australia and the Eastern Archipelago, has all the medical qualities of cod-liver oil, without the repulsive taste and odor and the tendency to decay. The dose is the same in quantity as cod-liver-oil.

According to Mr. H. C. Hovey, each female oyster is estimated to contain from 1,000,000 to 10,000,000 eggs, of which not a tenth can be said to be vitalized in the course of nature. But he is of opinion that by a proper system of oyster-farming fully one-half of the young may be matured to that stage when they can take care of themselves. "Seed oysters" are between 1 and 2 years old, and those known as "saddle rocks" require four years to attain their high commercial value.

Feats of an Athlete.

Abner C. McIlrath, who kept a famous hotel for thirty-six years six miles from Cleveland on Euclid avenue, has been gathered to his stalwart fathers. He was a mighty fex hunter and a remarkable athlete. Six feet six inches and a half tall, his average weight was about 264 pounds, but yet he is said to have frequently on foot run down foxes. He once lifted with his hands from the ground an iron slaft weighing 1,700 pounds, which would be equal to lifting double that weight were he harnessed with straps to weights and allowed to lift under the best advantage. Two men would hold a string two inches above his head, and he would step back two or three steps and jump over it without touching it, making the leap about six feet nine inches in height. He has been known, rather than to lead his horses around to the other side of the barn, to put his long arms under a horse and lift it up to the floor of the barn, which happened to be three or four feet above the ground. In Buffalo he once wrestled with and threw with ease Charlie Freenan, the "American giant," who afterward in England defeated the "Tipton Slasher" in a prize fight. Another feat of the old tavern-keeper was his chase on horseback of a fox one December over frozen Lake Erie far from sight of land. He lived to the age of seventy years, having been a paralytic for the last four years of life as a result of exposure during a fox hunt. He was borne to his grave Saturday by six of his tall sons, four of whom are six feet four and a half inches high and the other two just six feet, and whose combined weight is 1,305 pounds.

An Intoxicating Fur Cloak.

A French lady, calling herself the Baroness de Saint Estrapade, who lately appeared before the Correctional Tribunal of the Seine on a charge of ivresse manifeste—in brutal English drunk and disorderly—succeeded in convincing the President of that court that the wearing of a fur cloak may produce an eccentricity of behavior as deceptive in its way as that produced by too liberal a consumption of salmon. Some time ago, she informed the court, she read in a journal that the surest way of preserving furs from the ravages of moths was to stow them away in an empty spirit-cask. She accordingly bought one a month or two ago, and to its safe keeping she confided her fur cloak. A week ago, having to breakfast at Noel's, and the day being very cold, she put on this garment; when, as she declares, once out of doors, the combined effect of the cold and the alcoholic fumes emanating from the cloak made her giddy, and produced all the appearances of intoxication. The "agent" who took her [illegible] proved that "she smelt of alcohol at fifteen paces"—a piece of testimony rather in her favor than otherwise; and her bonne deposed to the purchase of the cask and its employment as a wardrobe. The Judge, after remarking that if every lady adopted this line of defense to the particular charge brought against the Baroness, conviction would be impossible, acquitted her.—St. James's Gazette.

The Comet and the Pah-Utes.

Chief Winnemucca, of the Nevada Piutes, is dead. He was a great personage among the Indians, and the medicine men of his tribe say that devils made uncommonly persistent and clever efforts to capture his soul. They were seen sneaking about the neighborhood, assuming the forms of various beasts, and trying to get inside the mystic circle which was drawn around the dying man's couch, and they might have succeeded had not the comet been sent to light up and frustrate their evil designs. Winnemucca died when the comet was at its brightest, and it is now bearing away his soul to the realms of bliss.

A carpenter in Newport, R. I., who had put on a pair of house doors with the glass portion at the bottom, said to the indignant and protesting wife of the owner: "That is the very latest Queen Ann style, ma'am."

A Police Court at Cairo.

The prefect and his deputy were arrayed in black coats and trousers, white waistcoats, and patent boots. But they sat, as their predecessors sat a thousand years ago, cross-legged on the divan. Litigants came up without formality, kissed their knees or their hands, according to rank or favor, bent, with hands folded in their sleeves, to declare the grievance volubly, answered a brief, harsh question, and took the verdict helplessly. Cases lasted on an average two minutes each, as near as I could time it. And all the while men came and went in the little room, talking mostly in high, quarrelsome tones. Coffee passed about. If anyone present was struck with an observation he offered it casually, and his worship listened. After delivering judgment, always preceded by a grunt of general dissatisfaction, he clapped his hand, and a soldier rushed in at full gallop, holding up his sword. Forthwith the parties retired to discuss matters warmly outside in full hearing of the court. A matrimonial difficulty referred to the authorities lasted but four minutes by the watch. A thin, peaking man looked the husband, while the wife, so far as one could judge by eyes and nose, was very pretty. The gentleman told his tale, the purport of which I could not gather. The lady turned red to the tip of her little nose and her eyes flashed. She took up her parable vehemently and sternly. The prefect asked further explanations of the husband, who turned very pale. He found nothing effective to reply; his worship pronounced in a single phrase, the galloping soldier appeared, and off went the pair. I asked of an official who spoke English if the man was going to prison. "No," said he, "he go home." It must be admitted there is something to be urged for a system which can deal with domestic troubles in his superior way.—London Standard.

Disappointed in the Governor.

Soon after the entrance of the train containing the great commoner a countryman was sighted on the rear end of the back car, prominently perched on top of the bumper gazing with a look of mingled admiration and awe into the face of Henry Grady, who was making his exit through the doorway. After a minute and gratifying survey of the noble physique of the Apollo of the local press, he lost all consciousness of his humble station and gave way to the heroic promptings of a patriotic spirit. He ventured: "Governor, can I have the honor of shakin' hands with you, seein' as I've come a good ways to do it and might not never have the chance of approachin you agin?" "Certainly, sir; but I am not the Governor—here he comes, now." "Is that him?" "That is Governor Stephens." "Well, I'll be derned." "What did you remark?" "I'd hearn he was a prodigy; but if that's the biggest man they could trump up for Governor of Georgy, I think we'd better leave the State, for the country's doggeneratin'." "We don't estimate a statesman by his physical development; it's the brain. The Governor has the greatest brain in Georgia." "I don't care nothin' about brain. But the idea of a man bein' Governor that's got to be carried around like a bundle o' clothes."

Tame Sheep.

One of the prime secrets of success in sheep breeding is to have quiet, tame animals. This is true in all branches of breeding, and no truer of any than in sheep breeding. A wild flock of sheep will not be as profitable as a tame flock of the same natural quality. In order to have the sheep tame they should always be treated in the kindest manner, and considerably petted when that is practical. If a flockmaster begins early with the lambs, handling them often, and be particularly careful never to scare them, he will stand a pretty good chance of having a tame flock; but it is scarcely necessary to say that he must see to it that they are not harassed by anybody or anything. If there is a dog on the premises, keep him from interfering with the sheep, if you have to kill him. The flock is worth much more than the dog. Hired help must be taught to go among the sheep gently.—Give them good care, kind treatment, and protect them from annoyances of the character we have named, and the result will be a tame and quiet flock, if it has any natural merit in it.

How to be Beautiful.

A celebrated beauty, whose complexion at 60 was rather fresher than that of our women at 30, told a New York correspondent of The Washington Critic her secret this summer, and it was divided into two parts. First, she never used a washrag or towel on her face, but washed it with her hands, rinsing it off with a soft sponge. She used clear water in the morning, but white castile soap or very warm water at night, and after wiping it on a soft towel she would take a flesh-brush and rub her cheeks, chin, and forehead. Second, if she was going to be up late at night she always slept as many hours in the day as she expected to be awake beyond her usual time. She finished her little sermon on beauty preservation by saying: "Soft water and sound sleep keep off wrinkles and spots, and girls should give more attention to this than they do, for

A Roguish Bird.

The blue jay is the boldest and most mischievous of wild birds. Near Knoxville, Tenn., recently, one was seen to fly a number of times to a high picket fence to attract a pair of kittens playing on the lawn. The kittens finally mounted the fence and began a cautious approach from picket to picket. The jay let the first get to within eighteen inches, then hopped over between the two. The second kitten approached; the bird hopped over it. It turned, and the jay hopped back and between. The first kitten approached, and the jay hopped back over it, and so kept it up till one kitten got disgusted and left, and the other followed soon after. Once or twice after the jay tried to inveigle the kittens to another frolic, but failed.

"Why did you hide, Johnny?" said one boy to another. "I hide to save my hide," replied the other, as he hiced away to a secure spot.

Indianapolis, Ind.

Mr. A. Kiefer—Dear Sir: My wife has for several years been a great sufferer from periodical attacks of Neuralgia in the head. Several of the most eminent physicians had been called upon to treat her but they could only give temporary relief.

About two years ago she commenced using the Taxarine, and I am gratified to say, since then she has had no recurrence of those terrible pains. I attribute her restoration to health entirely to the use of Taxarine, and in conclusion would say to all who suffer that excruciating of all pains to give Taxarine a trial. Yours etc. I. Ship.

Jealousy.

Some poet has said that "All torments of the damned we find is only thee, Oh, Jealousy, thou tyrant of the mind." This is grandly sweeping and magnificently inaccurate. Any sufferer from Indigestion knows to the contrary. Indigestion, the villian of the tragedy played upon the gastric juices of the stomach can, and does double discount the horrors of jealousy. Jealousy is often an attendant upon the later, and when indigestion is removed, this jaundiced companion of a deranged liver flies. Taraxine is the best known remedy extant for impaired digestion, deranged liver, and diseases of the bowels and kidneys.

A good and sufficient reason is what every man ought to have for his conduct. If we cannot have quite that, then let us have the next thing to it, namely, a reason which is perfectly satisfactory to ourselves. For instance, "Close up, boys; close up!" said a colonel to his regiment. "If the enemy were to fire on you when you are straggling along that way, they wouldn't kill a single man of you. Close up!"

"For what are we created?" cried a female lecturer on beginning her speech. "For what are we created?" in a louder key. "I say doctor," continued the confused woman, "that I don't know how to excuse my stupidity. I gave him the wrong medicine."

A little girl came very near to her mother one morning, saying, "Which is the worst, mamma, to tell a lie or steal?" The mother, taken by surprise, replied that both were so bad she couldn't tell which was the worse. "Well," said the little one, "I've been thinking a good deal about it, and I've concluded it's worse to lie than to steal. If you steal a thing you can take it back less you've eaten it; and if you've eaten it you can pay for it. But"—and there was a look of awe in the little face—"a lie is forever."

Sir Andrew Agnew having for some time been pestered by an impertinent intruder, it was one day remarked to the baronet that this man no longer appeared in his company, and he was asked how he contrived to get rid of him. "By my faith! but he was forced to take it," answered Sir Andrew; "for as the fellow would not go out by the door, I threw him out of the window."

"Yes, sir, except a rumor around town that you had robbed the bank of $50,000 and sailed for Europe."

"How shall the American savage be civilized?" is a question asked by a writer in the Atlantic Monthly. There are many ways. Teach him that it is improper to eat with his knife, and that colored napkins should be used at the fruit end of the meal, and not during the opening chorus. Teach him not to arrive at a reception until 9 o'clock, and never to appear in a swallow-tail during the afternoon. Tell him that it is bad form to drink beer before and absinthe after dinner. Also send him to dancing-school, compel him to avoid pie, and have him instructed in the art of walking in the English style. Then bang his hair, and put a pair of eyeglasses and a white silk hat on him, and you have your Indian as thoroughly civilized as is the average white man. —Puck.

Too much pepper: One of the most prominent preachers tells the following anecdote as a fact whenever he hears a story too incredible for belief: "A very wicked man became converted, and in course of time it came his turn to pray in class meeting. Not being used to speaking in public, of course he was very much embarrassed. This is the subject of his prayer: 'Oh, Lord, Thou Giver of all good things, look down with pity on poor people. You are rich and can spare them plenty to eat while on earth. Send every one of them a full barrel of flour, plenty of lard and a side of bacon, a ham or so and a pound of butter. Send each one of your starving, hungry creatures a barrel of sugar, a barrel of salt, a barrel of pepper—oh, hell, that's too much pepper. Amen.'" —Centerville (Md.) Record.

Courtship Among the Zunis.

Writing of life among the Zuni Indians, Frank H. Cushing, of the Smithsonian institute, says:—There were two unmarried members of the house; a nephew and an adopted girl. The nephew was an over-grown, heavy-faced, thick-lipped, yellow-haired, blue-eyed blonde,—a specimen of the tribal albinism, a dandy and the darling of the white-haired "Old Ten." One day, after I had presented the latter with a pane of ruined negative glass, she ventured to compare her favorite with me. My flattering acknowledgments of this compliment made decided winnings of the old woman's hitherto restrained affections. The governor spared this youth no more than the others. With characteristic irony, he called him "The Family Milkman," or "The Night Bird," the latter term referring to his eyes, "which," the governor usually addded, "wiggled like those of an owl in strong sunlight." The maiden was jolly, pretty, and coquettish—the belle of "Riverside street." Her lovers were many, but soon, of the long row who waited under the moonlit eaves, only one was admitted—the governor's younger brother, my sympathetic friend. There was but one room in the house in which the two could hope to be left to themselves—mine. Here they came night after night. They paid no attention to the onely Me-lik in his hammock, but sat opposite in the darkness on the low adobe bench, hour after hour, stroking each other's hands, giggling and cooing in low tones, just like so many of my own people of the same age, only in a different language. An occasional smack, followed by feminine indignation, taught me the meaning of "Stop that!" in Zuni, and the peculiarities of the Pueblo kiss. If the blissful pair remained too late, the slab-door would rumble on its wooden hinges, and the governor, preceded by a lighted torch of cedar splints, would stalk in, and, as near as I could make out, rate the young man soundly for his want of respect to the Washingtona Me-li-kana, whereupon the pair would vanish, the maiden giggling and the young man cursing.

Sounds Like Old Times.

A seedy-looking fellow dropped into the city editor's room, and, failing to borrow a half-dollar, he begged to narrate his experience. "I used to be an officer of the State, I did. I was sheriff, and member of the Legislature, and constable, and clerk of the courts, and judge, and a candidate time and again, and had a high old frolic, I did." "I don't believe it," said the city editor. "Why don't you?" "Because I have a letter here which says you are a thief and a liar, and a scoundrel and a villain, and a traducer, and a perjurer, and a defaulter and a bowdlerer, and a brawler, and a lover of all that is vile and wicked, and dishonest, and abhorrent to decent people, and a—" "Ah, ha! stranger, go on and read that all over again, and read it loud. It sounds like old times. It brings back the days when I ran for office. It reads like an editorial in an opposition paper, and brings again to my memory that blessed period when I felt like I was somebody and life was worth living. O, glorious hours of the past, will ye ever come back to me?" and the tears rolled down his cheeks as the city editor pronounced again the magic words, and then gave him a quarter to sober up with.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Dr. Little, of the Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia, has performed the wonderful operation of grafting a rabbit's eye upon the eye of a man. The patient had his eyes scalded by accident two winters ago, blinding both. The operation was intended to ease the lids of the least injured eye from the ball, to which it had become fastened by the burn. The rabbit and the man were both chloroformed, the fastened eyelid of the patient was soon loosened and the needed part of the rabbit's eye taken from the animal and placed under the eyelid of the man. When the rabbit's eye has duly made itself at home in its new location, it is expected that another operation will restore sight to the amended orb.

Household Decoration.

Cut glass again figures prominently in attractive table ware.

Slender chains are now employed to loop back window draperies.

Satin lamp-shades are adorned with dragons and other hideous beasts.

Fringed napkins are preferred for the tea service, instead of a salver, at tea.

Floral decorations for the table are rapidly going out of style for dinner parties.

Mirrors are entirely out of date in a drawing room, unless they act as the background of a cabinet.

Chiffoniers are not as high as formerly, and are made in woods to correspond with the usual furniture.

There is a great fancy at present for wicker-work chairs, which are either gilt, red, blue or tan color.

New upholstery for drawing-rooms shows very little, wood-work, the chairs and lounges being entirely covered with upholstery.

Tidies are to be superseded by small squares of lace or muslin, or even darker material, securely fastened into the back of the chair.

Little crochet boats, with silken sails, have taken the place of the little fluted paper dishes in which fruits were formerly served at fashionable luncheons.

The most stylish carpets and those for which there is the greatest demand are in dark shades and have small figures, and the more intricate the design the better.

Very pretty small screens for tables have panels of white silk, with a wreath of flowers done in colored silks on one side and a moonlight scene painted on the other.

For a useful home rug, purchase a sheepskin and wash it thoroughly in boiling soap-suds, and when dry comb carefully, and an excellent rug is made for the foot of the stairs, the fireplace, etc.

Large rooms, so fashion decrees, shall no longer be lighted with center chandeliers, but by means of upright pillars placed in the corners of the room, from which innumerable gas lights gleam.

A "handy" for a gentleman's room, which is intended for brushes, combs, razors, etc., has the foundation of ecru or light-blue kid, embroidered in outline with some humorous design and the straps of contrasting color so arranged as to form special places for the article to be put in it. Perfumery bottles and medicine flasks may also be kept in the "handy."

Pretty baskets, which are nice for serving large fruit at dinner or luncheon, are easily made. Take four pieces of card-board and cover with any material preferred, and on each piece work or paint the flower of the fruit which the basket will contain. Fasten the pieces together by a knotted cord so arranged as to look like tiny twigs. Over the fruit throw a square of delicate macrame lace.

Life in the Army.

It is mere holiday work in the service of the European nations compared with ours; they have long periods of rest, with large bodies of their troops of all arms quartered in fine cities, in splendid barracks, where they are almost in as full enjoyment of all the good things of life as the citizens, while with us our lives, in a measure, are passed cut off from almost everything that enhances life to the most humble. In my personal experience I have been eleven years straight without a single day from active duty. I have not been in New York city for twenty years, and not further East than Washington since 1866. I have been stationed at posts where we were from 250 to 400 miles from a railroad, and at one of which we did not taste even so common a vegetable as potatoes for six months, beef, bacon, bread, coffee and tea being our constant diet from Christmas to Christmas. My Captain and myself once paid $15 for one barrel of potatoes, and divided them for our family use, all of us being absolutely starved for a potato. Eggs are $1 a dozen. Butter not to be had at even $1 a pound, and everything else in the same ratio. I could give you many such incidents regarding the social life of our army officers on the "frontier," and the official life was one everlasting go scouting—scouting—scouting — Winter and Summer, Spring and Fall. My dear sir, there is not one person in ten thousand of our population knows anything about the hardships and self-denials which our little army undergoes, and many think it is all holiday work, wearing fine clothes and living on the fat of the land. The life of a line officer on the frontier is enough to wear out any man in twenty years' active and continuous service. Yet the country needs it, and patriots do it—for, after all, what is the reward? I am sure it is not a big thing financially, and it does seem hard that we have to pray and beseech so hard for what we do get. Look at what Congress did last session in the face of a prayer sent them by three-fourths of the army officers asking for a little relief—and very little at that? We are worse off than we were before. Retirement at the age of 64, with a limited retired list, is no boon at all, and the very branch of the service that needs it most gets the least. I mean the "line."—Cor. Army and Navy Journal.

A few months ago the discovery by Koch that tubercles were caused by a living parasite called a bacillus was confidently announced. Now comes the Chicago Medical Journal with the statement that it will soon publish an article by H. D. Schmidt, a distinguished microscopist of New Orleans, who claims that the bacillus is not an organized body, but a fat crystal. Dr. Schmidt declares that he can produce artificially every form of Koch's bacillus. He reached his conclusions by employing the so-called Baum[illegible] process of soaking sections of [illegible]culous lung in a 30 per cent. solution of caustic potash. This produced minute deposits of red in tissue and sputa, thus facilitating the work of observation.

Cast Away in the Pacific.

The Adventures of a Bark's Crew Who Passed Twenty-Five days in Open Boats.

The latest report of a marine disaster is that gathered from the surveyors of the abandoned British bark Brookville, brought to this port by the steamer Mexico, which arrived from Mazatlan. The castaways consisted of John Long, the master; Robert Thomas the first officer; and fifteen hands. They were taken in at Cape Lucas, which they reached on the 26th of September, after having been twenty-five days at sea in two open boats. From James Wilson, able-seaman, who formed one of the crew of the mate's boat, the following story of the adventures after the crew had left the bark has been obtained:

"I got into the longboat with First Officer Brown. The boats kept together till we arrived at Santa Rosa Island. All we had was a biscuit and a half, and a pint of water each. On the island we found plenty of water, and we drank so much of it that it made us sick. There were no animals there; only a thick growth of prickly pears. In the night large turtles came up on the beach, and we caught these and got eggs, and boiled the prickly pears. There was plenty of fish and birds, which we also captured and ate. We boiled the turtle meat and eggs and put them in the boat, and on the 13th, I think it was, sir, we started for the mainland. The turtle eggs and meat kept for three or four days without salt. After we were out two days we parted from the captain's boat, as she sailed faster than ours, and 'pon my word we felt lonesome, as you understand, sir. We thought, because she was an old boat, that she was gone to Davy Jones' locker. The mate, after the turtle meat gave out, only allowed us a biscuit and a half a day. We had to pull during the twelve days' trip a good deal, and it was dreary work, lad, on an empty stomach. I was sick a good deal o' the time, and many times when the night was dark I gave up the whole of us as lost. I almost wished myself back with the two cats we had left on Santa Rosa Island, or rather who had left us there to take after the birds.

"On the day after we sighted land we were completely out of provisions, I think, when the mate sighted a big turtle lying asleep on the top of the water. He ordered the boat steered right toward him, and Peter Williams the sailmaker, stood in the bow and caught him very handily and landed him in the boat. Then there was nothing to cook him in; but hungry men, sir, soon find a way. We just cut him up and cooked him in his own shell. Very handy, eh? That's the kind of game to catch—the sort that brings a stove on its back." And for the first time during the recital the shipwrecked sailor laughed immoderately at his own joke. "A little while after, in the night time I think, we sighted a steamer and made signals with rockets, but she put out her lights and left us. The next afternoon we sighted the schooner. Lotus to the leeward of us. We boarded her. The captain, a man with a big beard, treated us very kindly and gave us provisions. Before we left the schooner a boat came out full of Mexicans from the Custom House, and we went ashore with them."

For the Family Scrap Book.

Ripe tomatoes will remove ink or other stains from the hands.

Kerosene will soften leather hardened by water, and render it as pliable as new.

To heal cut fingers with rapidity wrap them in a cloth saturated with alum-water.

To keep tinware nice and bright scour it every two or three weeks with finely-sifted coal ashes.

To clean willow furniture use salt and water, and apply with a coarse brush, and dry thoroughly.

Machine grease may be removed from wash goods by dipping the fabric in cold rain-water and soda.

To remove tar rub thoroughly with clean lard, and then wash with soap and warm water. This may be applied to either the hands or clothing.

Kitchen tables may be made as white as snow if washed with hard soap and wood ashes. Floors look best scrubbed with cold water, soap and wood ashes.

Tea stains and many fruit stains may be removed with boiling water; pour the water through the stain in order to prevent it from spreading through the material.

To make good starch, mix with cold water and add boiling water until it thickens; then add a dessert spoon of sugar and a small piece of butter. This makes a stiff and glossy finish equal to new.

A few drops of hartshorn put into a little water will clean a hair brush nicely. If very dirty, use a little soap also. After cleaning rinse in clear water, tie a string around the handle, and hang it up to dry.

To remove the stains of French shoe-polish, either from woolen or cotton goods, wash the spot with tallow soap and let it stand an hour or so then wash in clean water and afterward proceed as with any soiled article.

Eggs may be kept in good order for six months by dipping them into warm tallow, and after they cool packing them in saw dust; cover with sawdust and make as nearly air-tight as possible, and put away in a dry, cool place.

The people of Knoxville, Tennessee, have set a good example to Southern communities which have long been cursed by the spirit which holds human life cheap. They have organized a Law and Order Society for the special purpose of enforcing the law against murder, and have appealed to the local authorities for their active and moral support. Just in proportion as the determination thus evinced becomes general throughout the South will that part of the country lose the disgraceful notoriety which crimes against life have given it.

A Hartford clergyman, the Rev. M. D. Buell, has been preaching against the evils of cigarette smoking. He took for his text the passage, "Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth," and, to illustrate his discourse, exhibited and dissected a mammoth cigarette.

PATENTS

CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT?

Send a rough sketch or if you can a model of your invention to GEORGE E. LEMON, Washington, D. C., and a Preliminary Examination will be made of all United States patents of the same class of inventions and you will be advised whether or not a patent can be obtained.

YOUR FEES REMAIN IN THE HANDS OF THE GOVERNMENT UNTIL YOU ARE ADVISED THAT A PATENT CAN BE OBTAINED. IN ALL CASES WHERE EXAMINATION IS MADE, NO CHARGE IS MADE.

What will a Patent Cost?

If you are advised that your invention is patentable, send $20 to pay Government application fee of $15, and $5 for the drawings required by the Government. This is payable when application is made, and is all of the expense unless a patent is allowed. When allowed, the attorney's fee ($25) and the final Government fee ($20) is payable. Thus you know beforehand, to a certainty, whether you are going to get a patent or not, and no attorney's fee is charged unless you desire a patent. An attorney whose fee depends on his success in obtaining a Patent will not advise you that your invention is patentable, unless it really is patentable, so far as his best judgment can aid in determining the question; hence, you can rely on the advise given after a preliminary examination is had. Designs, Patents and the Registration of Labels, Trade Marks and Re-issues secured. Caveats prepared and filed. Applications to revivor of Rejected, Abandoned, or Forfeited Cases may be. Very often valuable inventions are saved in these classes of cases. If you have undertaken to secure your own patent and failed, a skillful handling of the case may lead to success. Send me a written request addressed to the Commissioner of Patents that he recognize GEORGE E. LEMON, of Washington, D.C., as your attorney in the case, giving the title of the invention and about the date of filing your application. In [illegible] cases this will cost you nothing. Searches made for title to inventions, in fact any information relating to Patents promptly furnished. Copies of Patents mailed at the regular Government rates, (25c. each.) Remember this office has been in successful operation since 1865 and you therefore reap the benefits of experience, besides reference can be given to actual clients in almost every county in the U. S. Pamphlet relating to Patents free upon request.

Why wouldn't Jonathan J. Woodman, of Van Buren county, represent this state with credit in the U. S. Senate? He would certainly be a great improvement upon the present incumbent who hails from Lake Michigan's shore.

The Commercial and Gazette newspapers of Cincinnati have been consolidated. Deacon Richard Smith and Field Marshal Halstead have both been provided for in the new combination, but what will become of Deacon Smith's wicked partners? Is it possible that this plan has been adopted as a last resort to lay the wicked partners on the shelf?

Print the pension list. The names of all pensioners should be published in the county of their residence. No honest pensioner can object to this, and the practice would soon eliminate bogus pensioners from the rolls. Uncle Sam must do full justice to the deserving soldier, but he should not be robbed by imposters. Print the pension list.

In a resume of the senatorial candidates, with their prospects, the Evening News says of Mr. Willetts:

The candidacy of Hon. Edwin Willitts, without being championed by any particular clique or locality, is in perhaps the best shape of any of the dark horses. He has friends who are for him first, last and all the time, but like himself they are too modest to rush him to the front. In all the senatorial talk and clatter, however, Mr. Willitts invariably turns up as the second choice of legislators generally, and he is the one candidate against whom nothing is urged as to character, ability, location or alliances.

The opposition to the re-election of Senator Ferry is assuming alarming and dangerous proportions. When the contest appeared to rest between Ferry and Hubbell public sentiment undoubtedly favored the former, not so much on account of Ferry's qualifications as the fact that he was vastly superior to Hubbell. Latterly, however, the sentiment has been growing among the best Republican leaders and newspapers that Michigan has within her borders many far better men then either Ferry or Hubbell to represent her in the U. S. Senate.—Should a caucus be held early in the session Ferry will probably carry off the prize. Otherwise his chances for succeeding himself seem very slim.

Gambetta, the distinguished French statesman is no more. On the 27th of November last he received a wound while carelessly handling a revolver, from which it was not dreamed that any serious results could follow. He soon became worse, blood poisoning finally set in and he died in the last hour of the closing year. His sudden death created intense excitement throughout the city of Paris. Already the deceased statesman is spoken of as a great leader, the dictator of France, and the coming president. Although Gambetta's illness has been prolonged and his condition daily watched in deep suspense by despairing friends, few even of his most intimate friends anticipated so sudden an end. His career was a brilliant and striking one, in a country noted for brilliant careers. What effect his death will have on the future destiny of France time alone can determine.

The Pendleton civil service bill passed the Senate last week with only five opposing votes. This bill provides for the appointment of a commission of three, who shall assist the president in preparing and carrying into effect suitable rules for the enforcement of the provisions of the act. It aims to place, to the farthest degree, civil service appointments on a thorough basis of competency as may be established by examining boards; it prohibits any employe of the government directly or indirectly soliciting, receiving, or handling political assessments; and inhibits persons using intoxicating beverages from governmental employ. There is a disposition manifested in some quarters to belittle the bill and treat it as a sham because it does not accomplish enough. The bill is not perfect, certainly, but it is a step in the right direction, and after it has received a fair trial its defects can be easily remedied. Political reforms are generally accomplished by gradual approach, and the Senate, in this instance at least, has shown a disposition to heed the lesson of the late elections.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

DECEMBER 26.—The Board of Supervisors met, according to adjournment, at 2 p. m., at Dean's Opera House, Adrian.

The board was called to order by Chairman Lowe, and upon roll call by County Clerk Hunter, all were found to be present except Messrs. Bixby, Dreher and James.

On motion of Sup. Pratt, the members of the board of election canvassers were allowed the same mileage per diem as is received by the supervisors.

Supervisor Hill stated that drain No. 234, Palmyra, was completed, and as there was enough money on hand to pay for the job, moved to refer the matter to the committee on drains. Carried.

On motion of Sup. Dewey the chair was authorized to appoint a committee to canvass the vote on the court house question.

The bonds of Thomas M. Hunter, as register in chancery and county clerk, were referred to the judiciary committee.

County Surveyor Blair was authorized to purchase a suitable book in which to keep a record of the county surveys.

All claims now in the hands of the county clerk were referred to the committee on claims.

The board then adjourned until 9 a. m., 27th.

DECEMBER 27—MORNING SESSION.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. All the members present except Supt. Bixby. The session was short, and the time was mostly occupied in discussing drain matters and county orders.

The chair appointed a commi[illegible] canvass the court house vote, c[illegible]ing of Sups. Bradner, Hill, Hark[illegible] Burger and Parsons.

Sup. Shepherd presented the usual resolutions in regard to allowing the deputy county clerk's salary, which was passed by a unanimous vote.

Sup. Hill offered a resolution empowering the county to select a suitable person to act as watchman at the county buildings, at a salary not to exceed $40 per month. Passed.

The bond of the county treasurer-elect being presented, on motion, was referred to the judiciary committee.

The regular order was here completed and a motion to adjourn was offered, but before it was acted upon, Mr. Joseph Bennett, township drain commissioner of Seneca, asked permission to lay before the board a grievance in regard to county drain No. 80, which was granted.

After a short discussion, the grievance was referred to the committee on drains.

Sup. Love offered a resolution that the clerk be directed to draw an order on the treasurer for $67.13, payable to the township treasurer of Franklin, to be paid out of money belonging to drains Nos. 237 and 238, of Franklin. The resolution was passed, and the board then adjourned until afternoon.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Board met at 2 o'clock. All the members present except Sup. Burger.

The business of the meeting was commenced by the grievance of Drain Commissioner Bragg, of Deerfield, being heard, which was that he was unable to get his orders honored, and thus could not proceed with the work of digging and repairing drains. Referred to the drain committee.

A resolution was offered and passed that the treasurer-elect execute a bond to the county in the sum of $100,000, for the faithful performance of the duties of his office.

Sup. Parsons, from the judiciary committee, reported back that the bonds of County Clerk Hunter and Treasurer-elect Hoag were executed in due form, and moved their acceptance. The motion prevailed.

Dr. E. Mann, of Ohio, appeared before the board and made a statement in regard to a bill which he had presented at the last session for medical attendance to a woman in Fairfield, some time in March last. It appears the woman was a township charge, and it was impossible at the time for the township physician to attend her. He (Dr. Mann) had been called, and had cared for her to the best of his ability, bringing her safely through her illness, and he thought his bill, which was about $27, ought to be allowed. Sup. Pratt, of Fairfield, corroborated the statement of Dr. Mann, and moved that the vote by which the bill had been rejected should be rescinded. The motion prevailed, and another motion that the bill be allowed was tabled until the morning session.

The chairman of the committee on claims and accounts reported favorably on a number of claims for juror and witness services, and other services, which were allowed.

A report from the drain committee in regard to the payment of amounts owing different parties for work on drains Nos. 234, 238, 13, 140, and 227, was accepted. And that completed the work of the afternoon session, the board adjourning.

DECEMBER 28—MORNING SESSION.

The roll call showed but three or four members present.

The reading of the journal for the two preceding days occupied some time, and after the completion of the journal, the special order of yesterday, the allowance of Dr. Mann's bill for medical attendance to a pauper in Fairfield, was taken up. This bill proved to be a bone of contention, over which the board wrangled for a considerable length of time, and finally, after motions for its allowance, amendments to said motions, counter motions, and sundry recommendations, the claim was referred to the township superintendent of Fairfield.

Sup. Dewey offered a resolution authorizing the county treasurer to draw $1,000 from the contingent fund of the county to meet current expenses. The resolution was carried.

The committee on sheriff's accounts reported that they had examined, and found correct, the sheriff's claims, and recommended their allowance. The report was accepted and adopted.

The committee on claims and accounts reported a large number of claims for sundry services, and the report was accepted and adopted.

The chairman of the committee appointed to canvass the vote on the question relative to the court house tax, reported the official figures of the vote, which gives a majority of 2,609 for the tax.

Various printing bills were reported, and referred to the proper committee, which completed the work of the morning session.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The board reassembled promptly at 2 o'clock, with every supervisor in attendance.

Supervisor Holdridge offered the following preamble and resolution:

WHEREAS, By the provisions of act No. 186, session laws of 1879, a two-thirds vote of all the members of the supervisors-elect is necessary to authorize the appointment of a probate register; and

WHEREAS, The appointment of probate register for Lenawee county has never been authorized by the board of supervisors of Lenawee county:

Resolved, That the increase of salary from $600 to $900 is illegal and unauthorized.

Resolved, That the county treasurer be and hereby is instructed to pay to the probate register henceforth at the rate of $600 per year, and no more.

On motion of Sup. Wagener, the matter was made a special order for 9 o'clock a. m. to-morrow.

A number of accounts, reported by the committee of claims were allowed.

Mr. Luke, from the committee on drains, reported that the complaint of the drain commissioner of Seneca had been taken under consideration, and they would refer him to a resolution passed by this board authorizing township drain commissioners to complete unfinished portions of county drains. Also, that the county treasurer be authorized to pay all outstanding drain orders.

The last clause of this report was made the subject of a lengthy discussion, some of the members taking the ground that the payment of these drain orders from the county contingent fund would be utterly illegal, and others affirming that the best way to dispose of them was to have the orders paid by the treasurer.

On motion of Sup. Pratt, that portion of the report pertaining to drain orders was stricken from the report by a vote of 13 to 12.

The rest of the report was adopted, and the board adjourned.

DECEMBER 29—AFTERNOON SESSION.

The afternoon session of the board proved to be fully as interesting as that of the morning. A full board was present, and the session opened with a motion from Sup. Bixby, that the resolution in regard to probate register's salary, which had been tabled, be taken up.

Sup. Swaney thought such a course was a trifle premature, but the motion receiving the requisite support, was carried.

Sup. Pratt offered a resolution, which was passed, that the subject matter be postponed until to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock, and that Judge Geddes be invited to appear before the board, and make some statement in regard to the necessary work to be done in his office, the amount of help required, and the amount of work each officer is required to perform.

After a few claims were allowed, and some routine business transacted, the board adjourned until 9 o'clock Saturday morning.

DECEMBER 30—MORNING SESSION.

The board assembled promptly at 8½ o'clock a. m.

The first matter disposed of was a resolution that when the board adjourn it be until the 19th of March next.

Sup. Harknesss offered the following:

WHEREAS, in the opinion of this board, a probate register is required in this county.

Resolved, That the judge of probate be and is hereby empowered to appoint such register as provided for by Act 186 of the Session Laws of 1879.

The tenor of this resolution was discussed by several supervisors, and when finally put to the vote, it failed to receive the requisite two-thirds vote.

The committee on treasurer's accounts reported that they had examined such accounts and found them correct. The report was accepted and adopted.

The clerk was instructed to draw up a few drain orders, and, the hour of nine having arrived, the board took a recess to await the appearance of Judge Geddes before taking up the special order. In a few minutes the board resumed its sitting, and Sup. Dewey moved the adoption of the report of the judiciary committee in regard to the matter of probate register.

The board continued to talk on this matter for two or three hours, without eliciting any new points, although considerable feeling was manifested by one or two of the members. The final outcome of the matter was that a resolution by Sup. Bixby, which, after being served as almost every resolution presented on this subject for the last two days had been treated, by being amended, counter amended, certain portions stricken out, and other conditions inserted, was passed. The resolution, as passed, provides that the board of supervisors shall authorize the judge of probate to employ a probate register, and that his salary shall be $750 per year; also that the judge be allowed a clerk who shall receive compensation at the rate of twenty cents per folio for copying done.

The passage of this bill completed the work of the session, and the board adjourned.

WE feel that we are doing our readers a personal favor in calling their attention to the advertisement of the American Peerless Dictionary, which will be found elsewhere in this paper. The very high price of Webster's Dictionary, heretofore from $12 to $15, has prevented many from possessing a copy, although there is nothing so useful to any one who reads, as a Dictionary. This is the age, however, in which the purchasing power of a dollar is magnified to an extent little dreamed of by our forefathers, or even Webster, during the thirty years in which he was engaged in compiling his Dictionary, and the result is to be seen in the announcement to which we call attention. We have only to add that the firm of H. C. Wilkinson & Co. have the very best reputation among publishers, and the mercantile agencies quote them as being among the most enterprising, honest and solid business men of New York.

"FENCE-board advertisements," observed an old farmer, "are well enough as landscape adornments, but if you are desirous of purchasing an article it is easier and more convenient to look through the columns of a newspaper to see who has it for sale, than to hook up a team and drive around the country and read fences."

FOR the benefit of the ladies we would say that if you wish your silver or silver plate to remain to an indefinite time as bright as new, put a lump of camphor gum done up in a paper in the case where you keep your silver. Where this is done, time or the atmosphere will not cause it to become dim. The same is true in regard to jewelry of every kind.

Hudson Gazette: Oscar Clarke, of Rollin, came to town with his three-legged sheep and established a museum in front of the Gazette office, where many curious eyes scanned his living curiosity. The sheep is nearly three years old, is as sound as can be, and despite his limited understanding, can get along as lively as any of the wooly quadrupeds he associates with on Mr. Clark's farm.

Now, as the New Year is upon us, would it not be a good idea to "turn over a new leaf" and try to live a life in the future of which we and our friends need not be ashamed? Nearly, if not wholly, every person has one or more blemishes upon his or her character, and would it not be better, as we begin the new year, to completely clear ourselves, as far as possible, of all faults and vices? Let us all in the future, try hard to lead exemplary and true lives.

Clinton News: That the Masonic fraternity of Clinton know how to entertain their friends with true Masonic hospitality will be attested by all who were present at their festival Wednesday evening. The attendance was large, the commodious and pleasant lodge room being well filled with Masons, their wives and children and many others, and all seemed to greatly enjoy the occasion. Over 150 persons partook of the supper. Truly, it is a pleasant thing for brothers to dwell together in harmony.

THE Adrian Times has a law suit on its hands. Willis Merritt has begun an action of libel against that paper for the article which appeared Dec. 16th reflecting upon his professional management of the Lowe insurance matter.

WE received an invitation to be present at the marriage of Alice K. Fairfield to Edwin L. Hough, at Muskegon, on the 3rd inst. In lieu of a personal visit we extend our hearty congratulations. Ed's business success is a guarantee that his matrimonial venture will prove equally successful.

A DELIGHTED reception was tendered to Dr. J. H. Vincent and son last Thursday at the M. E. parsonage, by the C. L. S. C. and invited friends. Hand shaking and well wishing abounded. Dr. Vincent expressed himself as greatly pleased with the large "circle" and delighted with our beautiful city and its people.

LAST Friday evening, Mr. and Mrs. James Cairnes gave a party to a few of their friends in Adrian and Tecumseh. It would be useless for us to attempt to give the names of all the guests present, but suffice it to say that "a great time was at hand." The supper was A No. 1, every one enjoyed themselves as they would like to, and the clock went round many times before all went home.

Removal.

On Friday, Jan. 5th, Dr. and Mrs. Peters will remove to Blissfield. The Doctor has purchased the drug business of Bartholomew Bros., at Blissfield, and will move his family to Blissfield. Dr. Peters has lived in Tecumseh for the last eighteen years, has built up a good practice here, built a nice property on Pottawatamie street, and been in many ways a great help to the town. Last year he was in New York city, graduated at the Medical College there, and spent much of his time in the various hospitals. We regret very much to have the Doctor leave our town, but wish him success in his new enterprise, and congratulate the people of Blissfield. His son, Wallace, who has been for some time at Cleveland, Ohio, will go with him and be employed in the store. The Doctor will practice, as well as attend to the drug business.

A New Year's Visit.

One of the pleasantest New Year's visits we ever enjoyed was at the residence of Washington Jackson, in the village of Ridgeway, this county. The company consisted of father, mother, brothers, sisters and friends, who came from Macon to give him a happy surprise. As we arrived there, we found large, warm hearts to greet us, and pleasant words to cheer us. After meeting with friends, new and old, and spending some hours in pleasant and profitable conversation, we partook of a bountiful dinner, prepared by Mrs. J. Having retired again to the parlor, Mr. Jackson, in behalf of his brothers and sisters, presented to the aged parents some fine tokens of love and respect. The gratitude of the parents was beyond expression. A few verses of the fifth chapter of St. Matthew were then read and prayer offered, after which we all joined in singing "Shall we Meet Beyond the River?" and the company separated, returning to their several homes with happy hearts.

MISS ANNIE COTTRELL, a former teacher in our public schools, made a short call on some of her old friends last Thursday evening. During the past two years she has been in the Battle Creek schools, under Prof. Spencer. She stopped here while on her way to Panesville, Ohio, where she takes a position as superintendent of the schools. Her friends here will no doubt be pleased to learn of her success.

Adrian Record: Queer eccentricities sometimes take possession of legal minds. Yesterday, while meditating on a Supreme court decision, Seth Bean, Esq., was led to contemplate a new devise for a mouse trap and his success was marvelous. The attorney placed some large horse chestnuts in his pockets to do duty as bait and soon caught a mouse when it had accomplished about two-thirds of the journey up his pantaloons leg. Seth is enthusiastic over the success of his device, but thinks the sport is a little too exciting for a man of his temperment. Patent applied for.

Adrian Press: Sunday morning Jake Lonaburger, switchman, met his death in a most shocking manner. He was missed soon after drawing a car up from the water tanks, and on going back, he was found dead, his body being severed entirely, just across the abdomen. It is thought that he must have in some way slipped and fell, and the car passed directly over him. He has for three years been day switchman, and Saturday night for the first time went on as night switchman.—He is a German about 27 years of age, and leaves a wife and two children in deepest grief and sorrow.

THE fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob McNeil was celebrated at their home, in the township of Clinton, on Dec. 27th. A goodly number of friends and relatives were present to make glad the event. Altogether, the occasion was a very enjoyable one. The tokens of friendship and good will were numerous and valuable. The company, having passed a very pleasant afternoon and evening and partaken of the good cheer provided for the occasion, took their departure, each feeling better for the good time and things enjoyed, and hoping, no doubt, that the anniversaries of their marriage may be thus happily kept in remembrance for many years to come.

Ypsilanti Sentinel: The Supreme Court of this State has sustained the Sunday saloon closing law to its fullest extent. In the case of Weislegel, of Albion, it was not pretended that liquor was sold, nor is it necessary to prove this! The opening of the door of a saloon, on Sunday, if nothing more than cleaning the floor, is held to be a violation of the law. It is hard to see how an enactment can be made more stringent, and yet we venture to say there will be very few convictions under it. Side doors, back doors, and intricate passages will still afford opportunities for Sunday drinking, and more liquor will be consumed than those dark ways were prohibited and saloons were required to stand wide open, so that every body might see who drank.

There are two much needed amendments to the State Drain Law. The first requiring that the necessity for the construction of any and all drains under the law shall be determined by a jury the same as in the case of establishing or discontinuing of highways, instead of leaving it to the drain commissioner, who has a direct bribe of two or three dollars a day before him to influence his judgment in deciding on the application for a drain. The second requiring the owner or owners of land through which a township or county drain runs, and the overseer of highways in each road district where such drain runs in or along the highway, between the first day of August and the first day of October in each and every year, to cut or cause to be be cut and removed from such ditch or drain, all grass, weeds, brush or other obstruction. So long as such ditch is recognized and maintained as a public water course, with proper penalties for neglect or refusal so to do.

THE ECHO.

The Echo is the weekly edition of the Detroit Evening News. It has just entered upon its fifth year, and both in popularity and circulation has been a decided success. It is of the same size as the News, contains little or no advertising, and is filled from the first column to the last with the very choicest matter that can be procured. All the best items, paragraphs and articles are culled from the daily; a synopsis of each week's news is carefully prepared for it; its market reports, while brief, are very complete and reliable, and nearly a whole page of each issue is devoted to choice original or selected stories—something superior, on the average, to the ordinary newspaper tales. Altogether it is a little gem of a paper, and at the price is without question the cheapest of the kind in the country. Single copies, 75 cents; 3 copies for $2, 6 for $3.

The Toledo & Ann Arbor R. R.

Governor Ashley told a Detroit Evening News reporter last week that the intention of his company was to extend the road from South Lyon via Durand, Corunna, Owosso or Ovid to Alma or St. Louis, a distance of 150 miles from Toledo. The ultimate destination of the road is Frankfort, on Lake Michigan, which would make its total length 285 miles, but the management are concentrating their efforts for the present upon the extension to Alma or St. Louis, where they will take a rest and deliberate upon the line northwest from that point. President Ashley is of the opinion that when his road reaches St. Louis or Alma, whichever point is decided upon as the temporary northern terminus, it cannot fail to be of vast importance to Detroit, as it will connect at Durand or Owosso with the Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee and become a feeder for that line, contributing the business of the section it traverses, which is naturally tributary to Detroit.

M. C. R. R.—Appointments.

A circular signed by H. B. Ledyard, general manager of the Michigan Central railroad, has just been issued, which says:

This company having assumed the management of the Canada Southern railway, the jurisdiction of the heads of the different departments is extended over that road. The following appointments have been made, taking effect this date:

E. C. Brown, general superintendent of the line west of Detroit river. Office, Detroit, Mich.

W. P. Taylor, general superintendent of the line east of Detroit river, including the Michigan, Midland and Canada railroad. Office, Buffalo, N. Y.

Wm. H. Perry, general eastern freight agent, in charge of the local traffic of the Canada Southern railway, with such other duties as may be assigned to him by the general freight agent. Office, Buffalo, N. Y.

W. H. Hurlburt, eastern passenger agent. Office, Buffalo, N. Y.

R. J. Pelton, assistant auditor and assistant cashier. Office, St. Thomas, Ontario.

A. F. Howland, assistant to the purchasing agent. Office, St. Thomas, Ontario.

FARMERS' CLUB.

Dec. 29th the Farmer's Social Club met at John Schreder's. The attendance was very large, showing that the interest in the meetings is good. The program was finely arranged and well carried out. The declamation by Joe Platt was good, and the recitation by Ida Rector was finely recited. The song by F. V. Horton carried the older members, in memory, back to days of "Auld Lang Syne."

The discussion upon the road question was very animated. Some very ably advocated that each township should comprise but one road district under the control of one commissioner. Others as ably advocated the present system, and thought the greatest trouble was that men did not work upon the road with the same interest that they did on the farm, but sat in the shade too much and loafed around. They were so equally divided it was impossible to tell which side had the most adherents until a vote was taken which resulted in a majority [illegible] in favor of the change.

The Club adjourned to meet at the Hon. Edwin Morris's, Esq., inviting the Commissioner of Highways there to send us venerable seeds. The Club received two large packages which were distributed among the members last evening.

The next meeting will be held Friday evening, Jan. 12th, at Uncle John Rector's.

Another Card to the People of Tecumseh and Vicinity about Sewing Machines.

Mr. Coller says I have not been in the sewing machine business 12 years, which is a fact beyond controversy.—Nevertheless I am in it now and come to stay, and don't scare worth a cent. It appeared to the public doubtless that Mr. Coller's offer to give away machines is a bit of liberality not to be surpassed. I will say right here, however, that to every one presented with a New Home machine by Mr. Coller, I will follow suit and present his next customer, (upon satisfactory evidence that Mr. Coller carried out his promise in good faith,) with a New Home, and throw in a series of elegant cards representing 5 acts in a French juvenile comic opera, gotten up regardless of expense, or will make a discount of $4.00 on his lowest cash price. Mr. Coller says I insinuate that he is out of his territory. I affirm it on authority of a letter of the 21st ult., received from E. W. Trout, general agent representing the New Home company, in which he says "I wrote Mr. Coller not to offer for sale any New Homes in the territory formerly occupied by Mr. Landgraf."—The letter is too long for publication but can be seen at my office. One of the 27 late sales paraded in two issues of the HERALD, I learn from good authority, was an exchange made for two old machines about a year ago, and declined at this office. How many more of the 27 are like unto it none but Mr. Coller knows. If you want a machine, call at my rooms and examine or drop me a card and I will send you a New Home, Domestic, White, Crown, Victor, American, Singer or Wilson on trial. All machines warranted for five years. Buy a machine where you do your trading, for in case anything should get out of repair you can report at the office and have it attended to. I can make it to your advantage to buy of me rather than of outside parties.

Parties in this state who are interested in the Green patent drive well suits are advised that the United States supreme court has reaffirmed the validity of the patents, on an appeal case from the United States court at Indianapolis. The state grange is, however, still fighting the patent in the United States court for the western district of Michigan.

Detecting Counterfeits.

It is a good rule in receiving bank notes to carefully examine the general appearance of the note, the geometrical lathe work, shading of the letters, ruling engine work, vignettes, and solid print, carefully noting whether they compare with standard work. The ink, printing and paper must be considered. The charter number appears on all bank notes issued since 1875. All national bank notes are signed by F. E. Spinner, Treasurer, prior to 1875. All genuine notes of the United States Treasury bear check letters, A, B, C, or D, and are numbered consecutively, commencing with 1, thus: A is 1; B is 2; C 3 and D 4; or a number, which is divided by 4, will show the number to be even.

Genuine bank notes are usually printed on paper of good quality, though varying much in thickness—some being quite thin. It is not impossible for counterfeiters to procure a good quality of paper, yet counterfeits usually have a smooth greasy touch, while the genuine note has not, but will cleave to the fingers. The paper, though important in question, is not infallible, and it will not do to rely too much upon the quality. All notes in the United States are now printed on fibre paper, the fibre consisting of silk threads which are in and form a part of the substance. The government are now also manufacturing the note paper, having two silk threads which extend the whole length of the note, one a red, the other blue, which are discernible by holding the note to the light. These the counterfeiter has endeavored to imitate by drawing two parallel lines on the surface. This will be found in the counterfeit United States silver certificates.

Water and sky, when done with the ruling engine, cannot be successfully imitated. It is rare to see fine vignettes on counterfeit notes, yet many very dangerous imitations have been produced. But, however perfect, a counterfeit cannot be the same as the original or genuine.

Then there is the geometrical lathe work. All designs, such as circles, ovals, squares, etc., and upon which the denomination is usually placed, composed of a net-work of fine lines crossing each other at such angles and distances as to produce the desired effect is called the geometrical lathe, a wonderful as well as beautiful machine. The patterns produced by the lathe are of every conceivable variety of form and shape. The fine lines is the characteristic of this description of engraving and in the genuine note can be traced throughout the design, never breaking or losing itself in another line, or having any irregularity whatever. The line is usually white, on black or green ground, or sometimes red, but may be a black, green or red on white. In the counterfeit engraving the design is engraved upon the plate and fails in various ways. First, it is impossible to produce the perfect line as in the genuine, and the effect to the eye will be more or less dull or sunken in appearance as well as having a scratchy look. The design will also be darker or light in spots, as the lines are sometimes heavier and sometimes lighter, as well as the spaces between are sometimes wide and again near together, being irregular in size and sometimes broken. Second, it is impossible for the counterfeiter to produce 2 designs exactly alike. As the counterfeit is engraved by hand and separately it is impossible to produce 2 exactly alike. On examinaton of the genuine bill the designs of the geometrical lathe work will show the beautiful clear raised impression produced by the correct and regular lines in the engraving. Sometimes the whole face of a note except the vignettes and dies will be tinted. The tint is composed of fine curved or looped lines running across the whole face of the bill.

Genuine bank notes are always printed with great care. The plate is covered with ink, which is then carefully wiped off, except what remains in the lines of the engraving. The engraving is then taken with a powerful press.—Should any irregularity appear on the note it is immediately canceled, and not issued. Thus all genuine notes have a clear and beautiful impression, which is very unusual for a counterfeit. The ink used in bank-note printing gives a clear impression, without any smutty appearance. The green ink and also that used for the numbering of United States notes, is with great difficulty produced by the counterfeiters. The ink usually used by them for printing counterfeits has a heavy, dull look; while the numbering has a bricky appearance.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

A Great City's Growth.

Last year 26,170 new houses, covering a length of eighty-six miles, were built in the metropolitan police area of London, which now contains 4,788,657 persons, the largest number, probably, ever packed within fifteen miles of a common center. Out of this multitude twenty-three children and 154 adults were entirely lost. Their disappearance [illegible] of London, upon which but little light is thrown by the fact that fifty-four bodies of persons found dead and unknown were buried before identification. There were three times as many people killed in the streets of London in 1881 as it cost to storm Arabi's position at Tel-el-Kebir, and ten times as many wounded, the figures being, killed 252, wounded 3,400. There were 800 fires, 274 suicides, 11 murders, and only three convictions; 470 burglaries and only 91 convictions.

Herr von Gessler, Prussian Minister of Education, has issued a circular ordering that all the boys in the higher schools of the country shall be made to play games. For some time public opinion in Germany has been much exercised about the physical condition of the boys; they were good scholars, but listless, inactive, unenterprising, often appalingly short-sighted. A remedy is to be sought, not only in gymnastics, but in cricket and football and other outdoor games requiring skill and agility. It is a wise ruling.

When you see two women slowly meandering up the street talking attentively to each other, you can make up your mind there's something mighty important about to be developed. Just as like as not they are going to buy a yard and a half of ribbon to "match" a new

She Concluded That He Was too Young For Her.

"But, George, we might try light housekeeping."

A very pretty picture they made, George Smith and Jane Brown, as they sat upon the front step that beautiful moonlit night waiting for the 4:15 a. m. up comet.

He was only nineteen, and over her fair young bangs but seventeen Summers had passed, and yet these two, so fair, so young, were trying to lift the veil from the impenetrable future and establish themselves in happy union securely there.

He felt that he could not, in the very near future, afford to rent and handsomely furnish a beautiful home, for he was only getting four dollars a week; nor could they even board at a first-class hotel, and as he broke these sad facts to Jane, great scalding, manly tears rolled down his cheeks and on to his roundabout.

'Twas then that, woman-like, and in gentle, soothing accents, she came to his rescue:

"But, George, we might try light housekeeping," and as she spoke a glad light, born of the happy suggestion, illumined the trusting eyes into whose calm depths George had been fondly gazing for four hours and twenty minutes. George pondered long and deeply.

Turning at length to the fair being of his heart's choice, he said, "Jane, it would be sweet, indeed, to dwell with you in blissful solitude upon some rock-bound coast; to wander hand in hand upon the seashore all day long, and light the storm-tossed mariner's way at night; but it takes political influence to get a lighthouse, and I, alas! haven't even got a note. No, Jane; I am afraid we cannot go to lighthouse keeping, but I will save my money, go to a commercial college and learn bookkeeping."

And when Jane had heard the words that were spoken by George she marveled greatly, and she said: "Henceforth, George I can but love you with a mother's love. You're too young for me," and she went into the house.—Cin. Sat. Night.

Artemus Ward to the Young Ladies at the Seminary.

Artemus Ward after delivering a lecture once in New London, Conn., was asked by the principal of a young ladies' high school in the place to pay a visit to her institution the next day. He went away like "an amoosin cuss," and made the girls a speech. While walking to the academy a street runaway occurred. A terrified horse went tearing over the pavement, with what Artemus called "the fore quarters" of a wagon clattering at his heels. This incident Artemus ingeniously utilized in his address. Said he:

"The vehicular elopement which has just taken place, young ladies, has furnished us with a timely topic of discourse. Young ladies' seminaries are ever exposed to run-aways. Once, when traveling with my show, I came upon a female institute. There were ladders, and lads too, as to that, at every window. Manly perpendiculars carrying fainting horizontals to the ground.—"Fire!" I shouted. "None of that," replied a solemn voice from the orchard. "There ain't no fire; these are only young fellows running off with their sweethearts." There is a moral entertainment for man and beast in this runaway. No horse, if attached to a wagon, that is, if sincerely attached to it, will run away with it; but the more a young man is attached to a young woman, the more he will run away with her, leaving no trace, in fact none of the harness, behind. Young ladies, since I have stood before your beautiful faces I have lost something, and if you or the boy that sweeps out should find a red object looking like a coral breast-pin that has been stepped on, you may know it is my poor, busted heart.

The Original Judge Lynch.

Who the original Judge Lynch was if such a personage ever really existed—is a mystery. The earliest date assigned to this exhibition of a developed "iron conscience" is, according to the "Galway Council Book," the year 149[illegible] when an Irishman in municipal authority in the county of Galway, and named James Lynch, hanged his own son out of a window for despoiling and murdering strangers, "without martial or common law, to show a good example to posterity." Another ancestral derivation is to be found in one Lynch, who, about 1687, was sent to Ann[illegible] to suppress piracy. As justice was not administered with much rigor or formality in the colonies, "owing to the difficulty of adhering to the usual forms of law in the newly-fashioned territories," it is presumed that this Judge Lynch was empowered to proceed summarily against the pirates, and thus originated the term. The opinion which traces the expression to a Mr. Lynch, founder of the town of Lynchburg, in Virginia, is entirely unsupported by any authority beyond identity of name; but it is curious to remember that so long ago as the reign of Richard II. there was a current doggerel distich. "First hang and draw; then hear the cause by Lydford law." This may have been akin to the historic "gibbet law of Halifax," which was in practice down to the protectorate, but which, summary as was the operation, was carried out by regularly-appointed magistrates.

Among the crowd watching the seals at a zoological garden were a newly-married couple on a bridal tour. They gave all the rest of the animals the go-by to observe the seals in the stone basin, and it was a full hour before they grew weary. Chilled by the raw air and impatient over the waiting, the husband said: "Come, darling, let's go'n see the hyenas. The feller who said them seals would fly around and sing at 4 o'clock either lied to us or else this 'ere watch has gone ahead on me agin."

There is a six-year-old boy in Auburn who is wonderful on spelling and definition. The other day his teacher asked him to spell matrimony. "M-a-t-r-i-m-o-n-y," said the youngster promptly. "Now define it," said the teacher. "Well," replied the boy, "I don't exactly know what it means, but I know my mother has got enough of it."

Pretty Things.

After the Parisians abandoned the "pig," which was for some time a favorite mantel ornament and a much worn article of bijouterie, and was thought to carry luck to its owner, they substituted with the same view, a repulsive looking miniature hunchback; for some time that was the rage, and dainty ladies did not hesitate to wear the ungainly little object, suspended from their chatelaines and bracelet-chains, but that, too, has been discarded now, for a new porte-bonheur that comes straight from Vienna; it is a mushroom. When made in silver, the mushroom is so designed as to be really very pretty, and more than all, it is said, to be marvelously lucky. In a short time we may expect to see mushrooms the favorite feminine ornament.

Gallants are sending their inamoratas long, bisque baskets, in imitation of plaited straw. The partly raised lid reveals the forms of a little boy and girl at one end; the remainder of the basket is filled with a loose cluster of roses and violets. The little girl has her pretty head bent as if in the act of smelling one of the roses.

Novelty game counters are in the shape of blocks about an inch and a half square; diamonds, clubs, spades and hearts are represented in gilt on the four sides, the two ends are indicators, one for number of points, the other for number of games. A set consists of counters nearly arranged in a box; one covered with red kid, the other with yellow.—Progress.

A Mutual Snub.

Some twelve or fifteen years ago, ere the Royal Academy of Arts had migrated from the National Gallery to Burlington House, there was a certain pompous and pragmatical R. A. who was anything but popular as a visitor with the students. He once rebuked a young gentleman in the painting school for not using "a gentlemanly palette," whatever that might mean. It is related, however, that he on one occasion met with his match. He had been making himself especially disagreeable to the majority of the students, when it came to pass that a young Scotchman fell under his admonitory eye. After examining this student's work with severe attention, he turned to him, and, in a voice of depressing solemnity, said: "Have you any private means?" "I beg your pardon, sir?" replied the youth, literally in the Scotch manner. "Is it your intention to make painting your profession?" "It is," rejoined the Scot. "I am sorry to hear you say so," pursued Mr. R. A., with augmenting austerity, "for you will never make a living as a painter." "I am not sure about that," observed the student; "you seem to have made a pretty good thing out of it." Tableau!—London Society.

A Grand Duchess' Offending.

The Grand Duchess Wladimir of Russia, who is full of sparkle and wit, found the court life of Gatschina insufferably stiff and dull, duller even than an ordinary English watering-place is to an English lady accustomed to foreign travel. In a letter addressed to a Parisian correspondent the caustic writer turned the court circles of Gatschina into the wildest fun. In order to avoid mentioning by name her high and mighty imperial relatives, the grand duchess borrows nicknames from zoology, aptly fitted to those her caustic wit played with. The cat, the rat, the mouse, the wasp, the scorpion, the toad without the jewel in its head, conveyed to her correspondent her ideas of the people who buzzed or prowled about her, or stung her feet as she walked through the courtly circles of Gatschina. As ill luck would have it, the letter, intercepted by Ignatieff, was handed to the czar, who in great wrath gave orders for her quitting Russia. The grand duke followed her, and they are enjoying themselves in Paris, where they have just met the prince of Wales.

A young lady of Philadelphia sang a song to her western lover, the refrain of which was: "Oh, listen to the sighing winds;" and when she got through he emphatically remarked: "I say, sis, you ought to come out to our section and experience a sighclone."

DR A. TRASK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stands it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

WHAT IT CURES.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood; in this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, gland, nerve, and ligament is searched and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years

The Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have never used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should feel perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Executive Business.

An old colored man, whose knees smote each other as he walked, entered the executive chamber of the state house and approaching the governor, took off his hat and offered it to the august ruler of redeemed swamp lands.

"I don't want your old hat," exclaimed the governor. "What do you mean? Look out; don't squirt tobacco juice on the floor."

"'Scuze me sah, 'scuze me. I thought dat when a man comes inter dis chamber ob guberment, it is pliteness fur him ter take off his hat an' offer it ter de ruled. Bill Nye's Engagement Broken.

"I have just received a letter from my friend Bill Nye, of the Laramie City Boomerang, wherein he informs me that he is engaged to the beautiful and accomplished Lydia E. Pinkham, of "Vegetable Compound" fame, and that the wedding will take place on next Christmas. To be sure I am expected at the wedding, and I'll be on hand if I can secure a clean shirt by that time, and the roads ain't too bad. But I am somewhat at a loss what to get as a suitable present, as Bill informs me in a postscript to his letter, that gifts of bibles, albums, nickel-plated pickle dishes, chromos with frames, and the like, will not be in order, as it is utterly impossible to pawn articles of this kind in Laramie City.—The Bohemian."

We are sorry that the above letter, which we dashed off in a careless moment, has been placed before the public, as later developments have entirely changed the aspect of the matter, the engagement between ourself and Lydia having been rudely broken by the young lady herself. She has returned the solitaire filled ring, and henceforth we can be nothing more to each other than friends. The promise which bade fair to yield so much joy in the future, has been ruthlessly yanked asunder, and two young hearts must bleed through the coming years. Far be it from us to say aught that would reflect upon the record of Miss Pinkham. It would only imperil her chances in the future and deny her the sweet satisfaction of gathering in another guileless sucker like us. The truth, however, can not be evaded that Lyda is no longer young. She is now in the sere and sallow leaf. The gurgle of girlhood and the romping, careless grace of her childhood are matters of ancient history alone.

We might go on and tell how one thing brought on another till the quarrel occurred, and hot words and an assault and battery led to this estrangement, but we will not do it. It would be wrong for a great, strong man to take advantage of his strength and the public press to speak disparagingly of a young thing like Lyd. No matter how unreasonably she may have treated us, we are dumb and silent on this point. Journalists who have been invited and have purchased costly wedding presents may ship the presents by express prepaid, and we will accept them, and struggle along with our first great heart trouble, while Lydia goes on in her mad career.—Laramie Boomerang.

A Recipe for Beauty.

A celebrated beauty, says a New York writer for the Washington Critic, whose complexion at sixty was fresher than that of our women at thirty, told me her secret this summer, and it was divided into two parts: First—She never used washrag or towel on her face, but washed it with her hands, rinsing it off with a soft sponge. She used clear water in the morning, but white castile soap or very warm water at night and after drying it on a soft towel she would take a flesh brush and rub her cheeks, chin and forehead. Second—If she was going to be up late at night she always slept as many hours in the day as she expected to be awake beyond her usual time. She finished her little sermon on beauty preservation by saying: "Soft water and sound sleep keep off wrinkles and spots, and girls should give more attention to this than they do, for 'with the coming of the crow's feet is the going of the beaux feet.'"

According to Mr. Charles Wyndham, the well-known actor, the tapestries at the New York Union League Club are the handsomest he has ever seen, and finer in every respect than can be seen at any club-house in all London.

A Greek Wedding in London.

Last week I was present at an interesting ceremony in the beautiful Greek church at Bayswater, which in itself is a study of Byzantine architecture and elaborate decoration. A Greek maiden was to wed one of her own nation, and to make her future home in classic Athens among his people. But very few young women, excepting the bridesmaids, were present, and I noticed that the men and women sat on different sides of the church, as in our own very high churches. As the bridal party walked up the center of the church, two golden doors above the altar steps were thrown open, and two priests appeared, gorgeously robed, wearing curious hat-like coverings to their heads, much like those worn by Jewish rabbis. One of these, the Archimandrite, is a handsome man. They descended, each holding a cross in his hands, and proceeded with the ceremony in a language quite unknown to me, and I found it was equally unintelligible to a distinguished Greek scholar who was with me, who explained that the pronunciation of modern Greek differed so much from that of the ancient Greek of the university schools, that though he could read it tolerably, he could in no way understand or converse in it. It was noticeable that no instrumental music enters into the service of the Greek Church, but the voice alone chanting or intoning the prayers and responses, conducts the whole service.

I was curious to know why I had seen two wreaths on the table, thinking perhaps that two birds were expected, but I found that in this very symbolical ceremony the bridegroom is crowned with flowers as well as the bride. This is solemnly done by the priest, and the wreaths are crossed and exchanged above the heads of the pair in a wonderful way, until, with them supported as well as possible in position by an attendant groomsman, the bridegroom is led by the priest, intoning as he walks, still holding his bride by the hand, in a sort of procession round the center table of the church, followed by the bridesmaids and the assistant matron, and by two young men of the party, each holding a large wax candle, about six feet high, lighted, and wreathed with white flowers and satin ribbon. It must have been a trying position for the young man, and certainly neither a dignified nor solemn one to an outsider, looking more like the performance in a cotillon than a religious service, but I was told that in the Greek Church much is symbolical, and appeals only to those who can estimate the significance of each little ceremony. This processional march indicated joy and rejoicing, as by a dance.

The sign of the cross was very constantly made by the congregation, as in a Roman Catholic service, and the thick gold wedding ring was used for that purpose by the priest on the forehead of both bride and bridegroom before it was placed on the lady's finger. The pair partook of the bread and wine under the same symbol. Of course, the marriage was really and legally effected by the registrar at an early period of the day, and a Greek lady told me that the ceremony we witnessed included both betrothal and marriage, hence its length and variety.

In such classic society as this we scarcely expected ordinary food, but I found that good English roast beef agreed admirably with preserved rose leaves and delicious honey from Mount Hymettus, where the bees of to-day still extract luscious fragrance from luxuriant and perfumed flowers, under the sunny skies of Attica, as they did in the ancient times of classic story. The honey cakes we had for lunch on this occasion I shall not soon forget. They were a dream of flowers and ambrosial sweetness, and were washed down by a rich wine which tasted to me like nectar.—Liverpool Courier.

Proper Quantity of Food.

Animals living in a state of nature do not overeat, but stop when they have got enough. All animals which are expected to work are carefully fed as to quality and quantity. Men, however, overfeed themselves, and the results are unfitness for work and the pains of a diseased stomach. Dr. Nicholls asks and answers, in The Food Reform Magazine, the question: How are we to get at the proper quantity of food? He replies:

When our food is simple and natural in kind and quality and mode of preparation, there is little danger of eating too much. There is little danger, for example, of eating too many grapes, apples, pears, or bananas. Salt, sugar, spices and luxurious cookery tempt to excess.

With men, as with animals, a natural diet is self-limiting, and we are disposed to stop when we have got enough.

The more artificial the food, the more elaborate and luxurious the feast, the more the liability to overload the stomach, overtask the digestive power, and overweight the forces of life.

Simplicity of food is a condition of health, and promotes longevity. The quantity of food which enables a man to do his daily work without loss of weight is precisely what he requires. He supplies the daily waste no more and no less.

This quantity may vary a little with each individual, but every one can easily ascertain his own measure of requirement by reducing the quantity of daily food until he finds a balance of force and weight.

It is my opinion that the average quantity of water-free aliment required, say by business and literary men, is twelve ounces. Men of vigor at muscular activity may require sixteen to twenty ounces. I have found myself in very good condition for sedentary work on eight or ten ounces.

When any one is in good condition for his work and keeps his normal weight, he has food enough. Dr. Nicholls's advice is, find this quantity by experiment, and then habitually keep to it.

A young gentleman home for the holidays was talking with an old laborer at work in his father's grounds, when the old man said: "Ay, ay, sir, 'tis a fine thing is larnin'. There was no such when I was a boy; I was a big fellow, helpin' the family, when all at once school broke out."

Office of Osgoodby's Improved Safes, 17 South Broad Street, ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 17th, 1881.
Dr. Rush's Medical Association:
Dear Doctors—The three bottles of Dr. Rush's Elixir I ordered were received by express last week. I have taken nearly one bottle, and am highly satisfied with the result. For over two years I have been troubled with sharp pain at my heart. My physician, upon examination, pronounced it enlargement of the heart, and was unable to give me any relief. The trouble grew worse, and I had become convinced that I could not be cured. While in New York City, last week, I called on one of the most prominent physicians there, who charged me $25 for an examination and then recommended your "Regulator." Knowing you to be a regular Medical Association, and not a patent medicine scheme, I ordered the three bottles. I have not been troubled since I commenced taking it, but shall continue and take the entire three bottles so as to obtain a permanent cure. You have my sincere thanks. I am, gentlemen, Very respectfully, WM. G. OSGOODBY.

On the Complexion.

Without going into any aesthetic raptures in regard to personal beauty, it must be admitted by all, that a pure and clear complexion often makes up for plain features, while a rough and sallow skin, or freckly face mars the most perfect Grecian profile that was ever moulded from Nature's art gallery; but when a fresh, clear, transparent, and brilliant complexion is combined with a pleasing countenance, lustrous eye, and graceful form, the mind becomes enraptured with the beautiful association, and "how lovely" is the involuntary exclamation made by all who gaze upon this rare combination of nature's choicest gifts to the human family. A clear complexion is a living evidence of pure blood and sound health; and although there are many who try to improve the complexion by extraneous means, it is of little or no use, unless the seat of life has been reached, and the blood purified; in fact, art must be abandoned, and nature resorted to. All, therefore, who are anxious to possess a white, soft and smooth skin, with that peachy bloom so much admired, must not depend upon cosmetics, powders, or paints, their object should be to get the blood purified, which can be done easily, speedily, and safely by Nature's own restorative, Burdock Blood Bitters, which gives a healthy tone to the system, and a fair complexion to the countenance.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

Congressman John P. Leedom, of Ohio, has announced himself as a candidate for Sergeant-at-Arms next session.

General Hazen has in preparation a report protesting against the transferance of the Signal Service Corps from the army.

Rumors are floating about Washington that within sixty days Secretary Lincoln will be appointed minister to England, Gen. Hartranft be made secretary of war, and Attorney General Brewster be given Justice Bradley's seat on the supreme bench.

Having ascertained that the Oregon Central road has constructed but a few miles of track, and controls upward of 1,500,000 acres of land between Portland and Astoria, Representative Payson, of Illinois, has prepared a resolution for the forfeiture of the land grant.

General Canedo has been appointed by the Mexican government to act with Minister Romero in negotiating a commercial treaty with the United States, and will sail next Tuesday from Vera Cruz. He was educated in France and the United States, and is serving his seventh term in congress.

A special agent of the treasury department discovered that a New York importer received an excessive rebate of $8,[illegible] on damaged goods for which he paid $400 to the examiners, who for years have been in the government service. The merchant has made a full confession to Commissioner Shields, and the offenders have been arrested.

THE TOBACCO TAX.

The agitation of the question of reducing the tobacco tax has had a very marked effect upon the revenue. It is stated at the office of the commissioner of internal revenue that, while the tobacco tax this year until near the meeting of congress yielded very considerably more than during the same period last year, the falling off lately has been so great that the revenue from the tobacco tax for the year will be nearly $2,000,000 less than it was last year. This falling off in this branch of the internal revenue shows how great the stagnation in the tobacco trade is.

NOXIOUS WINES AND BRANDIES.

George W. Roosevelt, United States consul at Bordeaux, in a recent communication to the state department, referring to the adulteration of French wines and brandies sent to this country, says: "As regards the injury effected by the use of these liquids being sufficient cause to justify their prohibition as a sanitary measure, I am of the opinion that if, by a given test, a noxious element was found in goods actually arrived from France for consumption in the United States, there would be better grounds for prohibiting the entry of French wines and brandies in the United States than there was for putting an embargo on American pork coming into France.

GUENTHER AND THE IMMIGRANTS.

Representative Guenther, of Wisconsin, has been over to New York looking into the condition of affairs at Castle Garden, where all immigrants are landed. Under the law, each steamship line landing immigrants at Castle Garden must pay a per capita tax of 50 cents in order to keep the place in proper condition. Guenther finds affairs at the Garden in very bad condition. He says the place is filthy and disease is up on every hand, while men and women are herded together like so many cattle. Ordinary sanitary precautions that would require an expenditure of only a few hundred dollars per annum have been entirely neglected. Guenther has reported what he has observed to Secretary Folger, who says he will have the matter investigated.

PINING FOR FLORIDA.

It is reported at the treasury department that United States Treasurer Gilfillan intends at no late day to resign his position. He is now in Florida, where, representing a Washington company, he has purchased an immense tract of orange-growing land. It is said he will remove his family to that state and locate there permanently. Florida seems to have a peculiar attraction for United States treasurers. Gen. Spinner, whose chirography once ornamented our legal tenders, now makes Florida his home. John C. New, who was Gilfillan's predecessor, also has interests there. Mr. Gilfillan would have resigned his position as treasurer when Garfield came in had it not been for the personal request of the latter that he remain. Gilfillan and Garfield were classmates at Williams college.

WORKING OF THE ANTI-CHINESE LAW.

The high officials of the treasury find, in the late Chinese bill, ample grounds for cudgeling their brains on nice questions of law. Last week, after long deliberation, they came to the conclusion that, under the terms of the bill, a Chinaman, who has gained a residence, has no right to go home, marry, and then bring his wife to this country, but if married before gaining a residence the wife may come. The collector at San Francisco now comes to the front with another conundrum. It seems that a Chinese lady, with rights under the treaty, desired to join her husband here, and bring with her the useful accompaniment of a wet-nurse. Whether the latter should be allowed to land was the mooted question, and, after due consideration the department answers that a wet-nurse is legally a laborer, and therefore debarred from our shores, so carefully does the Chinese treaty act discriminate between laborers and people of leisure.

DISTRIBUTION OF SEEDS.

The commissioner of agriculture, in his report to congress relative to the work of his department, makes a formidable exhibit of the distribution of seeds alone. Under the special appropriation by congress of $20,000 for seeds to the southern flooded districts, 508,958 packages were sent, divided as follows: Vegetables, 414,886; field corn, 48,644; field peas, 26,957; field beans, 3,964; field millet, 14,348; field cotton, 159. The whole number of seeds sent out by the bureau during the year was, by packages, 2,396,476. Of these packages 1,058,479 were sent out through members of congress and senators, 7,588 through agricultural societies 269,177 through statistical correspondents, 508,958 as above mentioned by special appropriation, and the remainder 552,274 packages, to miscellaneous applicants. Of the total number of packages 30,773 were cotton seeds, 97,951 wheat, 75,254 oats, 92,897 corn, 50,300 turnips, 179,452 flowers, 1,051,704 vegetables, [illegible] 22,977 peas, and 15,835 strawberry. These are the principal items. There were 107 kinds of vegetables, 15 kinds of wheat, 86 kinds of flowers, 13 kinds of corn and 19 kinds of sorghum. The proportion of flower over grain packages is three to one.

THE WHISKY BILL.

It is now certain that the whisky bill can not be passed until after the holidays, and it is about as certain that it can not be passed in time to save the payment of a very large amount of whisky tax. On the 5th of January, for instance, the tax on 542,948 gallons of 1879 whisky must be paid. The amount of the tax will be $488,671.22. The greater part of this 1879 whisky is held by dealers in Cincinnati. One firm alone in that city holds 30,000 barrels. The amount of tax to be paid increased each month except from August to October. On the 6th of February the tax on 857,067 gallons is due, and in March on more than 1,000,000 gallons. In December the tax on more than 2,000,000 gallons will be due. From this statement it will be seen that if this congress fails to pass the whisky bill the tax on over 17,000,000 gallons of whisky will have to be paid by the time the new congress meets. The whisky men have not a very pleasing prospect before them. The 1879 and 1880 whisky is quoted at less than its cost of production, and holders would be ruined if forced to put it on the market now. If the whisky bill fails to pass, a great deal of this whisky must be sold at such a sacrifice that a number of heavy whisky-dealers will have to liquidate. The actual amount of whisky now in bond is 84,626,331 gallons. This represents a tax of $75,000,000. The whisky bill seems like a small affair, but taken all in all it is the biggest thing that has been before congress for some time.

PENSIONS.

Commissioner Dudley has made his reply to the Senate in the matter of the resolution asking the number of persons that would be affected by the passage of House bill 1,410, for maimed soldiers. The total net annual increase if the House bill should become a law, allowing $40 per month to each person, would be $2,021,944. The Commissioner thinks that this number will diminish from year to year, as it is rare that a new pension is now allowed for amputation. There are now of this class, amputations, 9,182 persons. The following table gives the statistics as to these maimed soldiers:

	Number.	Proposed increase per month.	Annual net increase.
Loss of one hand, now receiving $18.00 per month	1,108	$22.00	$292,512
Loss of one arm, now receiving $24.00 per month	3,504	16.00	684,288
Loss of one foot, now receiving $30.00 per month	2,723	22.00	668,072
Loss of one leg, now receiving $24.00 per month	1,320	16.00	377,472
Loss of one hand and foot, now receiving $36 per month	15	6	720
Loss of one leg at hip, now receiving $37.50 per month	6	2.50	180
Total annual net increase between present rate and $40 per month			$2,021,944

ETHNOLOGICAL DISCOVERIES.

Col. James Stephenson, of the bureau of ethnology, has returned from New Mexico, where he has been making some further explorations of the ancient cliff towns. He has made an important discovery which is believed to definitely fix the cave dwellers at a much later period than has been supposed by archæologists. It has been thought heretofore that these cave dwellers lived far back in the distant past, measured by a hundred ages. Col. Stephenson's discoveries indicate that not more than three centuries ago they were living in these habitations carved out of the face of the cliffs, and that the race is of a comparatively recent time. This conclusion is arrived at by the finding of a lot of mummies, well preserved, found in position in a cyst, incased in a fabric woven from a material resembling cotton. Upon close examination, however, it is found that the cloth, instead of cotton, is made from the fiber of a seed similar to flax. Specimens of the seed, with its roots and stalk still preserved, were found in the remains of a house, which opens the way to a definite ascertainment of the actual material used. An ancient Spanish writer, who visited this country not over three centuries ago, gives an account of these people, with a description of the cloth of which they made their garments, and other particulars about the customs of the natives, which are substantiated by Col. Stephenson's recent find. The mummies are also clothed in a kind of neatly-made sandals, which afford another point of identification. Besides the mummies Col. Stephenson brought 15,000 pounds of pottery.

PROSPECT OF THE TWO-CENT BILL.

The postoffice appropriation bill will be considered in the senate about the 10th of January. When it is brought up for consideration Senator Plumb will endeavor to have the reduction of postage from 3 cents to 2 cents go into effect July 1, 1883, instead of January 1, 1884, as provided for by the house. In referring to the matter, Third Assistant Postmaster General Hazen said the other day that it would be impracticable to make the change as early as July.—He claims there would be a surplus of 3-cent stamps on hand at that time; that trouble would arise in adjusting the accounts with postmasters, and that commissions for fourth-class postmasters on the sales of stamps would not be settled. In reply to these objections Senator Plumb says he does not believe there will be a surplus of stamps on July 1, as the postmasters will have nearly six months after the passage of the bill for disposing of their supply. If there is a surplus, he says the 3-cent stamps can be used for mail matter requiring more than 2 cents. In regard to the trouble that may arise in adjusting accounts, Mr. Plumb says that difficulty will be encountered anyhow, and might as well come first as last. Concerning the plea in regard to the payment of fourth-class postmasters, the senator thinks the people and not the officials should be considered. These commissions, however, can be determined upon before the 1st of July. The bill will pass the senate before the 1st of February, thus giving the country five months to prepare for the reduction. Senator Plumb feels confident that the amendment changing the time for the reduction will pass in the senate.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

DEC. 23.—The senate passed a bill to hold a term of the United States district court at Wichita, Kansas. Mr. Vest presented petitions for the repeal of the tax on tobacco. Mr. Walker gave notice that on Jan. 12 he would call up the bill to quiet title to certain lands in the upper peninsula of Michigan. The civil-service bill came up, the question being on Mr. Pugh's amendment that the present force of the departments be subjected to competitive examinations, which was advocated by Messrs. Morgan and Garland. Mr. Brown favored a fair division of patronage among the taxpayers before civil-service rule is adopted. Mr. Pugh's amendment was rejected by 18 to 23. An adjournment was effected about midnight, the bill going over.

DEC. 27.—Forty-three senators were present at the opening of business. The customary bunch of petitions for an increase of pensions and rebate on tobacco was presented, and Mr. Pendleton offered another for the extension of Summit street, Cleveland. A resolution was adopted that the postmaster general report the annual cost of carrying foreign mails since 1840. Debate then recommenced on the civil-service bill. Mr. Beck said he would sooner see any son of his breaking stone on the roadside than seeking a department office. Mr. Hawley's amendment to prohibit the solicitation of political contributions by one government officer from another was rejected by 18 to 27. A new section was adopted, forbidding the retention in office of any person habitually using liquor to excess. The bill then passed by 39 to 5.

DEC. 28.—The senate took up the bill to prevent government officers or employes collecting from or paying to each other money for political purposes. Mr. Beck offered a substitute to prohibit federal officers or employes from contributing money to any person for political uses. The latter proposition was voted down, and the former was passed. The bill for the relief of Fitz John Porter was taken up, and Mr. Sewell addressed the senate until the executive session.

DEC. 29.—The senate passed a bill appropriating $10,000 for a monument to Baron De Kalb at Annapolis. Mr. Pendleton presented a petition that Cincinnati be made the seat of the proposed court of appeals.—Mr. Logan consumed the afternoon in an earnest argument against the bill for the relief of Fitz John Porter.

HOUSE.

DEC. 23.—Without transacting any business the house at 12:50, adjourned until Wednesday. During the roll-call on adjournment, Mr. White, of Kentucky, repeatedly interrupted with points of order, and the speaker pro tempore (Page) finally refused to recognize him, causing much merriment.

DEC. 27.—Speaker Keifer called the house of representatives to order, but there was no quorum present. Several private bills were passed, when an adjournment to Saturday was taken.

Christmas night as the methodist church at Petoskey was crowded by a large audience, the center sill of the floor gave away and the floor settled until it reached and rested upon the furnace in the basement. A panic ensued, but no one was injured, though there was considerable damage done.

Professor Tice, the distinguished Meteorologist and Weather Prophet, of St. Louis, has issued his ANNUAL NATIONAL WEATHER FORECASTS for 1883, in which, besides foretelling the weather for every day in the year and clearly explaining the theory on which his predictions are based, he gives much other information concerning atmospheric phenomenon—the whole designed not only to give the facts as to the weather, but to teach the masses the facts determining the weather changes. In the present number the Professor has a timely article on "Comets," and also on Electricity as "The Fuel of the Future." In view of the terrible storms of last summer, his "Notions about Tornadoes" are specially interesting, and his directions for guarding against their destructive effects possesses rare practical value. The pages of the Almanac for 1883 are further enriched by a variety of fresh, popular and instructive matter, relating to the fascinating science of Meteorology—the whole making the most complete and useful annual for the farm, the household and the shop ever published. For sample copy and terms to the trade and to agents, send 20 cents to Thompson, Tice & Lillingston, of St. Louis, Mo.

ALMOST AS BAD.

What the Perplexed Physicians do in Cases of Emergency.

"I'll tell you the honest truth," answered the doctor. "Bright's Disease bothers the medical men almost as badly as cancer does. Having passed a certain stage, both point straight to eternity. I may be unprofessional to let out the secret, but whenever a patient comes to me with Bright's Disease, or any kidney trouble acting like it, I tell him to put on BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER without delay."

The doctor spoke by the card. The Capcine goes right to the spot. If you can be helped, the Capcine will do it. Look out for frauds. Is the word CAPCINE cut in the middle of the plaster? If not, you are all right. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York. Highest Awards.

Miss Elva Richards, who is attending the State Normal, was at home to spend the holidays.

Paris Mills, Abner Ellis and Mrs. Isaac Pennington are on the sick list.

John Pennington, one of our first settlers, and a highly esteemed neighbor and citizen, departed this life last Saturday evening, January 6. The funeral services, conducted by Rev. J. A. DeSpelder, were held at the family residence, Jan. 9. Mr. Pennington was one of the pioneers of Macon, having emigrated to that town in 1829 at 16 years of age, and having resided on the tract of land, then taken up, ever since. He cut the first tree and assisted in clearing the first acre of land and building the first shanty in that township. In 1836 he married Miss Mary A. Harriott, by whom he had twelve children, six of whom are still living.

The week of prayer is being observed in the different churches.

The village schools opened yesterday for the winter term with Prof. E. A. Woodward as principal and Miss Mary E. Somers, teacher in the primary department. Both are experienced teachers, and indications suggest a very successful term.

A somewhat protracted series of religious revival meetings were conducted at the Friends' church north of town in the earlier part of winter, and the church officers report nearly thirty additions to their membership.

Concerts are all the rage here this winter.

CLINTON CULLINGS.

Mrs. Wm. Bartlett, who has been sick for a long time, died on Friday last. Mrs. Bartlett was an old resident of this place, and had many very warm friends among the people of Clinton who turned out in large numbers to attend the funeral obsequies, which took place at the M. E. church, on Monday last, Rev. J. A. McIlwain officiating.

Last Saturday the house of Gillen caught fire from a defective stovepipe and the fire created considerable panic, but had so much as did the fire company in endeavoring to get at the flames. Doors, windows, ceiling, in fact almost everything gave way to the axes wielded by the honest yeomanry until that house presented an appearance but very little better than it would had it been left to the ravaging flames.

The marriage of Chas. Johnson and Miss Carrie Muir took place at the residence of the bride's father, Frank Muir, in this village, Thursday, Jan. 4. Many fine presents, including $100 in gold from Father Muir, were received by the happy couple. They bade adieu to their numerous friends here and started for Detroit, where Mr. Johnson is employed as telegraph operator, Tuesday last.

Rev. Joseph St. John returned from a week's visit to Orion, Mich. his former field of labor, on Saturday last, and again gladdened the parish of the little church "around the corner" with happy efforts both morning and evening last Sabbath.

The M. E. social will be held at the residence of Allen Dillingham in Bridgewater Jan. 17. All are cordially invited.

The merry tinkling of the school bell calls ye juvenile seekers of knowledge together again Monday morning for the winter's voyage.

Heman Brown returned to his studies at Ann Arbor last Monday.

MACON CENTER CUTS.

Prof. Steele of Ann Arbor will deliver the third lecture of the course next Wednesday evening Jan. 17. See posters.

Frank Gilmore, our town treasurer, reports about $1000 of tax yet to collect. He and a chum had a lively time on the road Tuesday by their horses becoming frightened at the crack of a parlor match—they were going to smoke. They brought up against a wood pile with no damage except a broken dash.

The Red Ribbon club gave an oyster supper Wednesday evening.

BRITTON BUBBLES.

George W. Smith is to have a new house next summer.

Dick Rixom turned the new saw mill into a gymnasium Monday by turning a double somersault out of the west door to the ground, a distance of twelve feet.

The local telegraph line is kept busy now since Brown, Frank Allen and Warren Parks have put in loops. We shall be able to turn out something like a half dozen operators next spring.

RIDGEWAY RUMORS.

Alphonzo Sutton has moved his family to Holloway.

Dr. R. H. Nelson received a dispatch Monday announcing the death of his grandfather, James Nelson of Monroe. He was in attendance at the funeral Tuesday.

R. S. Van Vleet and wife are visiting friends in this vicinity. He and Peter J. still carry that twin resemblance.

Frank Pocklington and family went to Perrysburg, Ohio, to spend the holidays, and have not yet returned.

Special meetings are being held at the Christian church, the Methodist church, the new church near Joseph Mellon's, the Caswell school house and here at the village. Everybody will have a chance to attend somewhere. Presiding Elder Campbell dropped in unexpectedly at the meeting Tuesday evening. He will be present part of the week, preaching each evening.

B. F. Reed has moved his family down near his mill for the winter.

The Adrian Times' exposition of the action of Willis Merritt, in connection with the payment of a certain insurance policy, and his suit for libel is the principal topic of conversation.

The death of Merritt Cox, which had been expected for some time, occurred last week Monday night. He had gradually declined with consumption during the past six months. He was an unusually good boy and though only 18 years of age he began to be a man and assume management of the farm on which his now bereaved mother lives.

A Press Trade Convention is holding to-day in Detroit. A state league will probably be organized.

SPRINGVILLE SALT.

William Sugars has moved into Charley Smith's house, in the village.

Samuel Kirby was home this week, on a visit. He is attending school at Evans' Business College, Adrian.

There is some talk of a saw mill being started here by parties from Adrian township.

Owing to the removal of the Band to Grand Rapids, and other members from town, the Band have disbanded and sold their instruments and hall fixtures at auction.

E. H. Barrows, the traveling artist, is doing a good business here in the way of pictures. He has some fine specimens of India ink and water color pictures from the Auburn Copying Company, of which he has the agency.

The long looked for T. & M. R. R. has finally commenced operations in this town. On Tuesday morning, mercury standing at 15 degrees below zero, Contractor Fleming, with forty men and six teams, broke the first soil on Henry Reade's farm, the ground being covered with snow and frozen very little. Mr. Fleming was in town Tuesday, securing board for men and teams. He expects another lot of men and teams on this week.

Our citizens were somewhat aroused last Saturday morning at the report that T. H. Mosher's store had been broken into by burglars, but it was soon discovered that they were probably molested in their work, as they did not go into the store. They tried first to gain an entrance by boring out a panel in one of the doors, with an augur they got at Mason's blacksmith shop, but did not make it work very well, and then they pried the blinds open and raised a window. The same morning a team and sleigh were stolen from Galusha Case's barn, which probably was done by the same parties.

Thursday night some persons stayed in the new school house. They left a plenty of cigar stubs and tobacco juice on the floor. The house was securely locked next morning, which shows they were prepared with keys. On Friday morning, early, three strangers, young men, passed through town; one of them returned and got breakfast at the hotel, then went on after his partners. The same fellows were seen during the day in different parts of the township. X.

ROME RUMBLES.

Rome, the city of all cities, has a being, a pretty lively one just at present, as all of her inhabitants are excited because of a family named Landon having malignant diphtheria, three children having it, and one case proving fatal. The school has been closed for an indefinite time and every precaution is being taken to confine it to its present limits. The people feel a little indignant over the way in which it was brought here and the course Mr. Landon took, which was as follows: Mr. Landon and wife went to her sister's whose three children were afflicted with diphtheria, two of whom died. They took no precaution whatever; or, when the people told them to be careful, they laughed at them and said there was no danger as diphtheria is not contagious, and also no contagion can be carried in the clothing. They also went around the village until compelled to stay in. Such a course is the result of ignorance. No new cases as yet.

Very cold weather here and splendid sleighing. Mercury 10° below zero yesterday morning.

The new blacksmith shop is in full blast.

Geo. Spencer has rented the wagon shop. He is in with Jim Seger.

The Grand Army boys of Blissfield are to have an oyster supper on Washington's birthday.

E. J. Smith, of Adrian, is certainly booked for the State Oil Inspectorship. A good selection.

Isaac Pennington, of Macon, is confined to his bed with an illness which is thought to be his last.

Prosecuting Attorney Salisbury has got settled down to business. He fills his new chair admirably.

The plastering in the Hudson school house gets loose and tumbles down on the heads of the children.

Deerfield Record: Ye editor visited a session of the Board of Supervisors, through the courtesy of Supervisor Manning, while at the county seat one day last week. We were highly entertained by the wondrous wisdom, soul-stirring speeches and modest manners of the patriarchs of the county, as well as the munificent willingness which a motion to adjourn was acted upon.

Hudson Post: Angie Murray, aged Mrs. G. J. Perkins, who not long ago literally turned the contents of the coffee pot into her shoe instead of carrying it up to the locality, has been confined to the house some days with an affection of the eyes, and angry looking foot. There was no "light fantastic toe" for her during the holidays, but with present fair indications she thinks she will be ready for fourth of July.

Adrian Press: O. Kelley, Esq., of Kelley's Corners, had ten bushels of buckwheat stolen from his barn one night last week, and he says it beats the old Scratch to account for it. He hurried up to Brooklyn, and on pretense of getting some bills printed, squinted all round the Exponent office, but saw neither bran, bag nor flour, while Clough was so gaunt and thin there was no fit whatever to his clothes.

An Irish Summer.

Wandering steps have brought me hither
from my Ireland on the shamrocks,
To this larger home of freedom, where her sun shines on the land;
But my thoughts will wander ever back to where the Fergus looks on Smiling valleys lit with glory, flowers and waves and emerald strand,
Shapes of beauty robed in virgin and immaculate demeanor.
Hill and vineyard, grove delicious, pour their incense on my soul;
Yet, still, there are visions whose spotless seraph splendor
Puts to shame those bright rich treasures—
Irish hill, and vale and knoll!

'Tis summer in old Ireland, blushing tender like a maiden,
When love first opens her heart in the morning of her years,
And tree and flower and streamlet, with her smiles and glory laden,
Greet her raptured eye and fancy, through the springtide's falling tears!
Now my heart is full of holy calm, and sweet emotions,
Thrilling my bosom ever like the cadence of a song,
Once heard within the pillars of a church's mute devotions,
Full of love and peace and glory, as it swayed
the praying throng.

Blue Mount Callin, in her vestments, looking up with hands extended,
'Neath the star-enameled footstool of the God of our fathers,
And the fir-clad hills of Burren robed in hues
so sweetly blended,
Loom now upon my vision and salute me from their shores!
Oh! God be praised forever, for having given to our island
Hill and vale so richly woven and a stream so full of song,
To soothe our troubled bosoms when far from holy Ireland,
We pine in exile's durance and are oppressed
by tyrant wrong!

But we've hope in God's ordainings for the righteous and the holy,
And the summer tide in Erin shadows forth our faith and love;
For, nor vineyard nor Sierra, nor Campagna scenic glory,
Can rival in their beauty Irish vale, and hill,
and grove.
Oh, beauteous, holy Ireland! land of song and bardic glory,
What vistas of rare beauty in the summer ope
in thee;
When the forest aisles are throbbing, and the
raths of olden story,
With the hymn of God's creation and the Te
Deum of the sea!

O my Ireland of thy shamrocks, kneeling fair as vestal virgin
At the shrine of loving nature, with the summer on thy brow,
What land in God's creation—thou crownless, friendless nation—
Can bear the palm of beauty from thee as thou lookest now!
No! thy loveliness is rarest, darling of my hopes and passion,
Wearing ever in our sorrow the smiles of God above!
For, as the summer beameth on thee now, a shackled nation,
A crown is weaving for thee in land of right and love!

MY SISTER'S LOVER.

The month was, May, and through my half-open window came, stealing a soft wind, filled with Summer warmth and Summer fragrance. The trees in the garden were full of blossoms. The early roses were in bloom, but of all this I saw nothing. My gaze was fixed upon two figures slowly walking down the garden-path—a man and a woman.

The man was tall, and strong, and masterful, yet tender as a mother with her first-born, gentle as a girl in all the little acts and courtesies of life. The woman was young and very beautiful, with a figure slender and swaying like a reed as she walked, and dark, lustrous eyes, which brought to many a man his heart's undoing.

I fancied the light in them now, as she lifted them to Geoffry Branscombe's face. He was her guardian, and he loved her. She was but my half-sister, five years my senior, and so I was not entitled to her confidence. Indeed, only a little month ago I had returned from school, with my education completed, in the fashionable sense of the term, and since then I had been very ill. Over-study, the doctor had said, but I knew better. To my own soul I could whisper the humiliating truth, could pour out the cruel confession, with a sort of savage pleasure at the self-inflicted torture.

It was my heart, not the body, that suffered—the heart that had for ever passed into Geoffry Branscombe's unconscious keeping. I loved him—he who was to be my sister's husband. If I had never suspected it before, I should have known it by the new light in her eyes, the new radiance of her beauty as it burst upon me on the day of my return.

And what could be more natural than that things should be as they were? Did not guardians always love their wards, and wards their guardians?

I had never read a book which treated of such a relationship in which such was not the sequel of the tale. And yet—and yet, did it make it easier for me to bear?

I turned my gaze away from that other picture, and lifted myself up from the depths of the great chair in which I lay, until I could catch a glimpse of my own face in the mirror opposite.

What a contrast! My eyes, the only beauty I possessed, looked many times too large for the thin, dark face; and my hair, which had been the rival beauty to my eyes, was close cropped to my head.

They had cut it off as I lay delirious with fever, and crying that its weight hurt me.

I sank back, with a groan. At that instant my sister, returning, entered the room.

"Mabel," she cried—"Mabel, darling, I am so happy!"

And rapidly crossing the floor, she sank down on her knees beside my chair.

The contrast was too great. Never had I seen her half so beautiful.

"Don't tell me—don't!" I hastily exclaimed, and lifted up my hand, as if to ward off a blow. "I know," I continued. "I congratulate you; but don't say any more."

"You know, dear?" she answered, a look of surprise sweeping over her face. "How is that possible?"

"Don't ask me. Only, I know. I ——"

But I could say no more. My weakness conquered my strength, and I burst into bitter weeping.

"Poor child! Dear little Mabel!" she whispered, tenderly. "Do you love me so well that you hate to lose me? But you will not really lose me, dear. When I am married——"

"Hush!" I interrupted. "I won't hear any more," and, sobbing bitterly, buried my face in my hands.

Of course no heroine would have done such a thing; but I was no heroine. I was only foolish child, who had lived out eighteen years, and who could look forward to a long, long life of misery—for I loved Geoffry.

He had not meant to make me love him—I know that; but when he came home for my Christmas home Alice had been away on a visit, and I had seen him every day. We had ridden, and driven, and walked together, and, as I have said, his manner was that unconscious and inherent tenderness toward things weaker than himself which had charmed my heart into recklessness pouring forth its unheeded treasures at his feet.

My excitement in repressing all this, and seeing the seal set upon my misery, brought its own punishment. For a week my life was again despaired of.

Then, because I did not wish the boon, strength came slowly back. Everyday he came; everyday he sent me flowers, or fruit, or some sweet message; but it was all an added torture.

At last, when I grew better, the physicians said I must have change, and so they sent me to the sea-side, to visit an aunt who had a house at Worthing.

I was glad to go. Had I stayed at home, I should have gone mad. Alice and Mr. Branscombe went with me to the train. I had bade her good-bye, and the train was just about to start, when he put his head in through the window.

"You will let me come and see you," he said, and I had only time to answer.

"No, no; you must not come!"

Only time for this, and to note the swift look, so like pain, which swept over his face, ere he moved away, and my last glimpse was of them both standing side by side, as they should henceforth stand through life.

Notwithstanding my injunction to the contrary, he came. I had been in my new home a fortnight, and some of the color was stealing back into my cheeks, when one afternoon, as I sat alone, dreaming, as I dreamed all my idle hours away, I saw the face which a moment before had floated in my fancy.

For a moment I was happy—supremely, ecstatically happy, and, springing up, I held out both hands with a rapturous cry of welcome, then I sank back cold and stern again.

But that cry had brought him close beside me, and my hands were so tightly held in his strong clasp, while his great brown eyes looked into the very depths of mine, that I trembled and was still.

Merciful Heaven! what was it that I read there? Could it be that he loved me, and that he had wooed and won Alice for her gold?

I should have said before that my sister was an heiress. I had no dower—not even that of beauty; but Geoffry Branscombe, I would have sworn, was not a man to be bought or sold, to buy and sell; and yet, if not, his eyes had lied, for they had told me that it was me he loved.

I don't know just what came to me in that hour, that moment, but though I realized, or thought I realized, his baseness, yet I could not snatch from my lips the cup whose sweetness slaked their thirst. I held it there and drank.

We spoke no word of love, but every day found him by my side. I was no longer listless; I was brilliant, even merry. I laughed and sang, as one might laugh and sing at the feast of death.

And so a fortnight passed, and still he lingered; but his return was fixed for the morrow. On that last evening we wandered down upon the beach, silvered by the moonlight. Standing in its rays, he turned and faced me, clasping his hand over mine as it lay upon his arm.

"Mabel, he said, "I love you, child? You are but a child, and I a man who has outstripped you in the race of life by twenty years. But will you give yourself to me, dear? Has it been my own blind fancy which has given birth to the sweet hope that I alone might make your happiness?"

He paused then, waiting for my answer. Only a minute passed, but I had wakened from my dream. I had not thought his baseness ever could find words; had not thought my sister would know his perjury.

Only a minute, but I had torn out my heart and trampled it beneath my feet. I turned upon the man with hot, fierce passion; I forgot that I had led him on; I forgot my own baseness, my own love. What burning, scathing words I used I know not, but when I had finished he offered me again his arm, from which I had withdrawn my clasp, and we walked back in silence to the house. Yet, as he left me, still without a word, I felt, strange to say, only my own guilt. He had not borne himself like one convicted of a wrong.

The next week I went home. Alice was the first to meet me, and that night she crept into my room, and knelt down beside me as she had done once before.

"Darling!" she whispered, "next month I am to be married, and you are to be my only bridesmaid."

"I cannot!" I answered. "Don't ask me, Alice! It would kill me!"

"Do you really love me so well, dear? But you will not refuse me this? It would mar all my happiness, Mabel, and I am so happy. When you have seen Harry—when you learn to know and love him for himself—you will understand."

"Harry!" I gasped. "Who is he?"

"Harry—Harry Stretton; the man I am to marry. Why, Mabel, you told me you knew it all. Is it possible you did not know?"

And then she told me of the engagement which had been entered into during her Christmas visit—an engagement finally ratified and approved by her guardian whilst I was so ill.

It had been this she had been about to tell me—this I had refused to hear.

Oh, the burning shame with which I listened at last! And then a wild impulse seized me to tell her all the truth. She should know how mean, how pitiable I had been, even though I bought her hate and contempt, as doubtless I had bought Geoffry's.

I did not spare myself as I told the story. In silence she heard it through, and then she sealed my lips with the kiss of love and pardon.

All night I battled with my misery and remorse. Alice expected her lover the next day. I felt I dare not meet him.

In the afternoon she came into my room.

"Someone wishes to see you in the library, dear," she said. "Will you go down?"

She spoke so quietly that I suspected nothing, and asking no questions went downstairs, and crossed the hall to the room designated.

I thought it empty for a moment as I closed the door behind me, but at the sound someone stepped from the window recess — someone who advanced one step and then stood with wide-open arms waiting to close about me.

No need for me to tell the story, as I hid my face upon his breast, and felt his kisses rain upon my hair. Alice, my noble, darling sister, had told it all.

Did I deserve my happiness? Perhaps not, but it was mine—mine at last, as was the great, noble heart of my sister's guardian.

Alice had her wish—I was her only bridesmaid; but after the ceremony was ended which made her Harry Stretton's beloved wife, I took her place beside the altar, no longer bridesmaid but bride. Henceforth my sister's guardian was mine.

The Aesthetics of Dress.

Men may be divided in several classes: Those who dress well by instinct, those who are dressed well by their tailors, and those who ignore taste and tailor. It is a fine art worthy of the consideration it has received at the hands of Mr. Elihu Vedder, the artist, who discourses wisely and pleasantly after this manner:

"For centuries we have cut and snipped and spoiled good cloth, and will for centuries to come. I don't see but what we do it as well now as ever. I will admit though that a man's dress is hopeless. I never feel well dressed except in fancy dress—then I suit myself—and when I am in swimming. Then I feel like a man. Look at this Turkish garment; it makes a fine bathing dress, and in Turkish toweling it would be stunning." (The garment in question was a plain white tunic, not unlike some of Mr. Millet's costumes.) "It is cut in only two places—those for the hands to pass through. See what a fine thing it is when I put it on. What folds! A man is dressed in it. Now nothing could be better, but it doesn't suit our climate.

"To dress suitably one must take into the account all the conditions. Each person should consider first his needs, then his individuality. One must study one's self, and then dress as one thinks best. That is the way to be picturesque. The Contadini don't know why they are 'paintable.' And, by the way, we should always want picturesqueness in another country than our own. Look at a railway train in this country emptying itself of people. They are not picturesque, but the Contadini would say, 'Where are all the poor?'"

"In dress you want specially to contrast breadth with small lines, and there should always be some spot on which to rest the eye; just as in the face we have the cheek. In the draperies of my figures, which are, heaven knows! in little relation to fashionable dress, that is the theory of their construction. This same balancing of lines, which makes Greek dress or any loose drapery beautiful, is just as necessary in tighter draperies. There was a tight dress worn by women not long ago, which was excellent." (Mr. Vedder's knowledge of dress does not seem to include technicalities, but this pantomime evidently referred to the princesse dress, which, it seems, commends itself to all artists.) "Anything which suggests the beauty of the form is commendable. Who knew there were so many finely-rounded arms until women took to tight sleeves? Even if the arm is thin it still shows character, and that gives it value. The same is true of knee breeches. I admire them. If a man has a good leg, how fine they are! If he hasn't, all the same they are attractive, because they discover the form, and that shows the man. You have probably noticed, since young fellows have taken to knickerbockers and Scotch caps, how much more interesting illustration has become, in Black's novels for example. All this individuality in dress is a great help to artists, but we can't push things. To be well dressed is to be in harmony with one's surroundings and with one's self.

"Take natural grace, for example, which is the most exquisite thing in the world. A woman who has this supreme gift can put a handkerchief around her neck and knot it on her breast, with a rose in the knot, and nothing can be more lovely. But every woman can't do this, for natural grace is something which cannot be acquired. Every woman must study her own style. The trouble is that this requires thought. People conform to and follow the fashions because they are too lazy to think.

"The general artistic progress of this country—that which has given new interest to our homes, is seen in the colors which are now used in dress. As an artist I approve of the tints and the harmonies which we now see in the shop windows. Nobody can object to them. I don't see but that the whole matter is going on all right, provided only that women forswear hoops. If they go back to crinoline then the case is indeed hopeless."

A Kind Old Poet.

Victor Hugo's real kindness of heart is illustrated in a story told of Pierre Dupont, the poet. When the latter arrived in Paris, poor and half-starved, he applied for assistance to Hugo and was repulsed at the door by a stern servant. Taking a card and a pencil from his pocket he wrote a little poem in which he compared himself to flower perishing with thirst and asking for water, and a starving swallow beating his wings against the window. This poem he asked the servant to deliver to Hugo, and was walking away when the elder poet sent a messenger to bring him back. He stammered his apologies, but was gently interrupted with the remark, "You are one of us and you may look on me as an elder brother." And straightway Hugo found employment for the young writer. It is kindlinesss such as this that endears Hugo to his guild.

"Blood will tell;" so be careful how you make confidants of your relations.

The Evolution of Bread.

Persons of extreme views are apt to maintain that all mankind, being normally savages, were as normally cannibals; but, leaving that moot question altogether on one side, it seems probable that humanity ate acorns long before they ate cereals or learned the art of making bread, and that the veneration entertained by the Druids of Gaul and Britain for the oak was due to the circumstance that its glands were the staple food of the people. Bread, properly so called, was transmitted by the Greeks to the Romans; and either the latter or the Phœnicians may have introduced the cultivation of corn into Gaul. While, however, the land was mainly covered with immense forests, a long time must have elapsed before the practice of eating acorns, chestnuts and beech mast was abandoned, and even when corn was regularly grown, ripened, and harvested, the grains were merely plucked from the ear and eaten raw or slightly parched. The next step was to infuse the grains in hot water for the making of a species of gruel or porridge, and a long time afterwards it may have occurred to some bright genius to pound the corn in a mortar or rub it to a powder between two stones. Subsequently came the handmill; but it was not until after the First Crusade that the windmill was introduced from the East, whither it had probably found its way from China. The first bread was evidently baked on the ashes and unleavened, and the intolerable pangs of indigestion brought on by a continual course of "galette" or "damper" may have suggested the use of a fermenting agent, which in the first instance was probably stale bread turned sour. Pliny has distinctly told us in his "Natural History" that the Gauls leavened their bread with yeast made from the lye of beer; yet, strangely enough, they abandoned the use of beer yeast, and did not resume it until the middle of the seventeenth century. Its revival in France made the fortune of many bakers; then the medical faculty sounded an alarm, declaring that yeast made from beer was poisonous. Its employment was prohibited by law in 1660, but the outcry raised by the bakers and the public was so vehement that in the following year the decree of prohibition was concealed, with proviso that the yeast was to be procured only from beer freshly brewed in Paris or the immediate neighborhood. Some form of fermenting bread, however, the French had been eating for 1,600 years in contradistinction to the gruel and pulse-eating Italians and Levantines and the purely vegetarian Hindus.

The Career of "Ed" Stokes.

The career of Edward S. Stokes is startling. I was at Gabe Case's roadhouse yesterday when he drove up with his beautiful team of flyers, and springing lightly to the ground, stepped into the bar-room. On every side he was saluted with "Hulloo Ed," and hands were stretched out to grasp his as he moved along. Merchants, bankers, brokers, lawyers, millionaires, men about town, gentlemen of leisure, and men of the highest social standing all greeted him warmly, and he was asked by half a dozen men at once to drink with them. Could anything be more extraordinary? He, as everyone knows, is the man who deliberately killed Col. Jim Fisk in the Grand Central hotel, was tried for murder, and spent several years in a murderer's cell at Sing Sing. When he came out nothing was heard of him for some time until he suddenly splurged out as the proprietor of a swell up-town hotel which is now famous because it has the most gorgeous bar-room in the world. Stokes has filled this superb drinking saloon with a collection of statuary and pictures—all studies in the nude—which is, perhaps, unrivalled in this country. He next appeared as the bosom friend of John W. Mackey, the bonanza king, who always stops at Stokes's hotel when in New York. After this he took to theatrical ventures by loaning capital to actors ambitious to build theaters. Lately he has begun to erect a theater himself, though his name is carefully kept in the background for fear of the prejudice which still exists in the minds of many good citizens against the man who killed the genial and generous Jim Fisk. His very last move, however, has been in the direction of trotting horses. He splurged out in this direction very suddenly. He jogged up to the Fleetwood park one day behind a pair of keen-looking horses named Lyman and Bell Flower. He bragged rather loudly of their speed, and a match was arranged between them and another team, which Stokes won easily, and scooped in more thousand dollars than he had fingers, in half an hour. Since then he has been very solid with turfmen, who always admire a man of that kind. Stokes is still a handsome man, though his face is deeply lined and his hair gray. He is as vain as when he held ladies' receptions in the Tombs, and dresses with an extravagance unequalled by many millionaires of New York. He is popular among men here, which is a curious thing, I'll be bound. One question constantly presents itself: Would he have attained his present position of influence and wealth if he had not killed Jim Fisk?—Brooklyn Eagle.

The electric light is not the only rival which mother invention has raised up against coal gas. A company, with $2,000,000 capital, has just been organized to make gas by the decomposition of steam and liquid hydro-carbon on highly heated lime. The operation produces almost pure hydrogen, which being carbureted, results in a gas of between thirty and forty candle power. The process, which was discovered by a French chemist and improved by a Polish one, is said to be economical, and it is hoped that the new gas will supersede coal for running engines, and possibly in domestic heating and cookery. It is made without coal-oil being used in its preparation. Some New York gas companies are proposing to substitute it for the ordinary article, and if half that is told of it proves true, it is destined to work great modifications in various operations connected with light and heat.

It is always "put up or shut up" with the umbrella.

A STRANGE REMINISCENCE.

The Escape of a Well Known ex-Army Surgeon from an Unforeseen Danger.

[Baltimore American.]

MESSRS. EDITORS:—I seldom appear publicly in print, but the facts connected with my experience which follow are so striking, and bear so closely upon the experience of others, that I venture to produce them entire:

In the month of September, 1879, I was practicing medicine in New Orleans. The summer had been excessively hot and everybody was complaining of being exhausted and feeling tired. It was not an unfrequent occurrence to have patients ask for something to relieve this weary sensation, and that I should also partake of the same universal lassitude or weakness, did not alarm me. I supposed that over-work and exposure had produced a temporary physical prostration; therefore I made a trip to St. Paul, Minn., thinking that a rest of a few weeks in a cooler climate would soon reinvigorate me. Little did I dream, however, what was in store for me. After getting settled in my new quarters I took a short walk every day, and patiently awaited a return of strength, but in spite of all my efforts I seemed to be losing strength; and even any slight exercise became laborious and tiresome. During this time I had frequent dull aching pains in my head, and through my back and hips, occasional shooting pains in various parts of the body, with soreness, shortness of breath, and palpitation of the heart. My feet and hands would be like ice one day, and burn with heat the next. I had no desire for food, and what I did eat distressed me; my sleep became disturbed with the frequent desire to urinate. The quantity of fluid passed would at one time be small and at another time quite profuse. Then for days I would be perfectly free from this desire, and nothing seemed to be the matter; nevertheless my debility gradually increased. My eyelids were puffed out; my bowels were alternately torpid and too active, the urine would be clear some days, on others it would be of high color and deposit a brick-dust sediment, and at still others there would be a whitish appearance and a thin greasy scum would rise to the top. The pains in my head, back, chest, joints, bowels and bones were horrible in the extreme. I went in vain from place to place and consulted the best medical authorities the country affords; I would have a chill one day and a burning fever the next. I suffered excruciatingly with a numbness of my feet and hands, and at the base of the brain and between my shoulders; at times my limbs and body would bloat and physicians said I was suffering from the dropsy and could not recover.

How I could be so blind to the terrible trouble that was devouring me, I do not know; but there are thousands to-day who are suffering from the same cause and are as ignorant of its nature as I was. My skin was the color of marble at one time, and then again it would be like saffron, and this terrible restlessness, and I might say wildness, was followed by a dull, heavy, drowsy sensation. I was wasted to a mere skeleton except when the dropsical bloat occurred. I tried all the celebrated mineral waters of this country and Europe; all kinds of medicine and all kinds of doctors. Still no help came. I lay at my hotel in Philadelphia, where I was temporarily sojourning, given up to die by friends and physicians alike, when there providentially came into my hands a little pamphlet, which I carefully read and from which I got a view of my real condition, which no other agency had revealed. Acting on its advice, I had my water analyzed at once, and to my surprise, albumen and tube casts were found in large quantities. A skillful physician was sent for and apprised of the fact. He said I had Bright's Disease, and that death was certain. My friends importuned me to take a remedy which had won a great reputation for the cure of all forms of kidney diseases, and I therefore laid aside my prejudice and commenced its use. At first my stomach rejected it and I had to use small quantities; but after the first five days my stomach retained full doses. This was one year ago last October, and my improvement was rapid and permanent. I have regained 50 of the 65 pounds of flesh I lost during my illness, and I feel as well to-day as I ever did, and I can unreservedly state that my life was saved by Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, the remedy I used.

It may seem strange that I, being a physician and an ex-army surgeon, did not have the water analyzed before; but such is the fact. I had the symptoms of every other disease, and I did not suspect that my kidneys were in the least particular out of order; and here is just where I was in the greatest danger, and where most people who read this article are in danger. I find that I am only one of thousands who are suffering from kidney disorders, which, neglected, surely terminate in Bright's disease. I also know that physicians may treat these disorders for months without knowing clearly what the trouble is, and even after ascertaining the cause, be unable to prevent it. When death, however, finally overtakes the helpless victim, they disguise its real cause, attributing it to heart disease, convulsions, apoplexy, vertigo, paralysis, spinal meningitis, blood and uremic poisoning, etc., etc.

Words, of course, fail, to express my thanks to H. H. Warner & Co., of Rochester, N. Y., for giving the world such a needed and certain specific as the Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, but such as they are I gladly give them; while to the thousands to whom I have lectured upon the laws of health and hygiene I commend this letter most cordially and warn them to be aware of the insidious nature of a disease over which physicians confess they have no control, and which in one form or another is carrying more people to untimely graves than any other malady.

I. Ship Speaks of his Wife.

Indianapolis, Ind.

Mr. A. Kiefer—Dear Sir: My wife has for several years been a great sufferer from periodical attacks of Neuralgia in the head. Several of the most eminent physicians had been called upon to treat her, but they could only give temporary relief.

About two years ago she commenced using the Taxaline, and I am gratified to say, since then she has had no recurrence of those terrible pains. I attribute her restoration to health entirely to the use of Taxaline, and in conclusion would say to all who suffer that excruciating of all pains to give Taxaline a trial. Yours etc. I. Ship.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Columbian Oil it has made many permanent cures and given better satisfaction on Kidney Complaints and Rheumatism than any known remedy. Its continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it known as a safe and reliable agent to employ against all aches and pains, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders. It acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering and often saving life. The protection it affords by its timely use on rheumatism, Kidney affection, and all aches and pains, wounds, cramping pains, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, coughs, colds, catarrh, and disorders among children, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects, and will always cure when cures are possible. Call at C. A. Wright & Co.'s and get a memorandum book giving more all details of the curative properties of this wonderful medicine.

Relief Found at Last.

Carmel, Ind.

A. Kiefer—Dear Sir: I was afflicted with derangement of the Liver, which caused a general derangement of my whole system. Had three-day ague for two years, from which I found no relief until induced to try your Taraxine, which I am happy to say affected a cure. I am enjoying fine health and have had no ague for over one year. Yours, etc., John [illegible]

Jealousy.

Some poet has said that "All torments of the damned we find is only thee, Oh, Jealousy, thou tyrant of the mind." This is grandly sweeping and magnificently inaccurate. Any sufferer from Indigestion knows to the contrary. Indigestion, the villian of the tragedy played upon the gastric juices of the stomach can, and does double discount the horrors of jealousy. Jealousy is often an attendant upon the later, and when indigestion is removed, this jaundiced companion of a deranged liver flies. Taraxine is the best known remedy extant for impaired digestion, deranged liver, and diseases of the bowels and kidneys.

GLEANINGS.

Man proposes, God disposes—but it takes a woman with her hair down to be indisposed when anybody calls.

If many American ladies took more out-door exercise on foot a great many doctors would have the blues.

Sardines and toast are said to have been Herbert Spencer's chief food while in the United States.

The King of Spain is reported to have relieved his mother's heavy embarrassments only on condition that she will not return to Paris.

Gov. Blackburn, of Kentucky, has thus far, it is said, pardoned every man convicted in that state for carrying concealed weapons.

Building operations in St. Augustine, Fla., are unaccountably active, nearly everyone being engaged in putting up new houses or altering old ones.

The new Boy of Tunis is described "a short-legged, obese, little man, near-sighted and deaf," who, when he desires to review the troops on horseback, must be lifted into the saddle.

In Naples are dug annually 800 burial pits, one for each day in the year.—Daily the pauper dead are gathered by the city authorities and thrown into the pit opened for the day's use.

The London Lancet says that people who sneeze often are the healthiest.—A sneeze sets the blood circulating, and throws off a cold which is trying to settle.

Two years ago Wesson, Miss., was a pine forest. It now has 2,500 inhabitants, a cotton-mill which employs one thousand hands, and several smaller factories.

The London Drapers' Journal says that there is scarcely a better market for lace, rich silks, etc., than Greece; but some economical Athenian ladies have now formed a league to wear woolens instead of silks.

While plowing near Montgomery, Ala., a negro unearthed a pot containing several hundred dollars in gold.—Such occurrences are calculated to encourage the habit of industry in the colored race.

The Texas and Pacific machine-shops at Marshall, Tex., contain a working force of about six hundred men—the largest it is said, of any similar institution in the south. The monthly pay-roll is nearly $60,000.

Ostriches are worth $1,400 each, and there is a duty of 20 per cent. on their feathers. A man from Buenos Ayres has just brought twenty-two of the birds to this country and will establish a farm in the south.

A Charlottesville, Va., printer has accomplished the feat of putting 2,452 legible words on a postal-card with a lead pencil, reserving in the center of the card a circle the size of a gold dollar, in which is inscribed the Lord's prayer.

The recent fashion among surgeons of employing kangaroo tendons for ligatures is said to be giving way to the superior excellence of the sciatic nerve of the calf which is now used for that purpose.

A little girl of Glendale, Mo., has received a pass good for life on the Missouri Pacific Railroad. Seeing two trains approaching each other on a curve, she stopped one by frantically waving her apron, thus averting a disaster.

To many Americans the magic word "imported" coming from a salesman's mouth is sufficient to cause them to choose the foreign article in preference to an American article of equal merit which could be obtained for two-thirds the price.

A work on the diseases of elephants is being written. Their more prominent affections are stated to be meningitis, apoplexy, vomiting, colic, enteritis, hæmaturia, tetanus or lockjaw, pneumonia, anthrax, and "foot and mouth disease."

It is rather worthy of note that a London paper applauds the plain speaking of American critics about Mrs. Langtry and complains of English timidity in dealing with the subject. It is a confession of snobbery on the part of the English press that ought to be good for somebody's soul.

Ten days were spent in a San Francisco court in obtaining a jury to try two Chinamen indicted for murderous assault. In addition to the regular panel 500 jurors were summoned. Two hundred were examined before the 12th man was selected. The difficulty was to obtain men who would believe a Chinaman under oath.

A Boston man was so pleased with a pair of boots that "exactly suited" him that he gave the maker an order for enough boots, shoes, slippers, overshoes, rubbers, etc., to last him through the remainder of his natural life. The order embraced 256 pair of coverings for the feet, and was guaranteed by a deposit of $100 in cash.

Procter Knott is said to be one of the most convivial spirits in Kentucky, and is described as a florid, portly Southern man, with a stubbly gray mustache, a hat pushed knowingly over his left eye, with a comical look, mingled with such shrewdness as tells the poorest reader of character that he is a born wit.

A Parisian physician declares the following a certain cure for small-pox and scarlet fever: Sulphate of zinc, one grain; foxglove (digitalis), one grain; half a teaspoonful of sugar. Mix with two tablespoonsful of water. Take a spoonful every hour. He declares the remedy untiring. Its very simplicity has caused it to be overlooked.

The English public is beginning to learn something about this country. A recent number of the London Times contains a quarter of a column of fine type devoted to facts and figures indicating the extent of the Mississippi River and its tributaries. But it places Pittsburg on a branch of the Mississippi in Philadelphia.

Miss Catherine L. Wolfe, the maiden millionaire of Gotham, is noted for her eccentricities and her odd methods of charity. She lives alone in a great stone house on Madison avenue, with her maid and half a dozen servants, and receives few visitors. She is a very devout Episcopalian, and no matter what the weather may be on Sunday is as regular in church as the rector in the pulpit.

Peaceful Rivalry on the Pacific Coast.

In his speech at the civic banquet tendered him in Victoria, the Marquis of Lorne, Governor General of Canada, said: "Pride in national feeling has made the country strain every nerve to bind still further with the sentiment of confidence the unity of the Confederation. Where is now the old talk we used to hear from a few of the faint-hearted of a change in destiny or of annexation? It does not exist. To be sure, here I have heard some vague terror expressed, but it is a terror which I have heard expressed among our friends on the American Pacific slope also, and it is to the effect that annexation must soon take place to the Celestial Empire. [Great laughter.] Well, gentlemen, I fully sympathize with this fear. None of us like to die before our time, but I will suggest to you, from the healthy signs and vitality I see around me, that your time has not yet come. Your object now is to live, and for that purpose to get your enterprises and railways as part of your assets. [Applause.] The rest will follow in time, but at the present moment we must concern ourselves with political politics. Let us look beyond this island, and beyond even the most difficult mountains, and see what our neighbors and friends to the south are about. An army of workmen—exactly double that now employed in this Province—are driving with a speed that seems wonderful a railway through to the coast. In another year or two a large traffic, encouraged by the competition in freights between it, the Central and Southern Pacific will have been acquired. You are, by the very nature of things, heavily handicapped here, and a trade, as you know, once established is not easily rivaled. Take care that you are in the market for this competition at as early a date as possible. When you are as rich as California, and have as many public works as Queensland, it may be time to consider your position.

In a cave at the summit of a high bluff near Gridley, Cal., a colony of bees had been secreting honey for fifteen years. The only access to their treasure was an almost perpendicular wall of rock, and the difficulty of securing it had always been a sufficient protection until about a month ago, when a party of invaders determined upon an assault. They reached the cave, and, after a three-hours battle with the bees, came off victorious, though they all felt that another such victory would have been the ruin of them. In the cave was found a solid mass of honey in the comb two and a half feet thick.

Pure Blood.

Many families pride themselves on their noble ancestry; but here, in this democratic country, we do not care so much about our pedigree as our health; or, at least, that ought to be the principal object of our solicitude. We cannot have good health without pure, rich blood. When the blood is out of order, disease manifests itself in the skin and flesh, and, in fact, in all parts of the body. To be restored to health, take Scovill's Sarsaparilla or Blood and Liver Syrup. Physicians speak in the highest terms of this medicine.

Dr. Everett, Cooper Plains, Steuben Co., N. Y., mentions two cases of Scrofula and Erysipelas in which Scovill's Sarsaparilla or Blood and Liver Syrup effected a cure, and says, "I think it one of the best purifiers of the day. It has met with perfect success in every case where I have used it."

It Does the Work!

And has never been advertised to do anything it would not accomplish. Read the following from Buffalo, N. Y., Delta, O., and Elgin, Ills.:

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 7, 1882.

GENTS:—My little boy, two years old, was affected with rheumatism in his left leg, seeming to be completely paralyzed from the hip-joint downward. For four months he was utterly incapable of walking or using his limb, and we looked upon the poor little fellow as being a cripple for life. We had two different doctors to attend him, but they could do nothing for him, and we tried everything we could think of, or that we were advised to do, without his getting any relief. Finally we were recommended to try Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, and in ten days the little fellow could walk alone, and now he can run about as lively and sprightly as any child of his age.

Yours respectfully,
T. H. MORRISON,
212 Fourth St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Messrs. Sargent Bros., druggists, Delta, Ohio, in ordering a quantity of Thomas' Eclectric Oil, write that they never sold anything that gave such universal satisfaction in curing Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, etc.

E. Balch, Elgin, Ills., writes: "After trying dozens of patent liniments, without relief, for a rheumatic and stiff knee, I feel I have 'struck oil' at last; for after using three bottles of Thomas' Eclectric Oil, I am prepared to say it is the best application I have ever used."

A Remarkable Escape.

Mrs. Geo. C. Clarke, of Port Dalhousie, Ontario, states that she had been confined to her room for a long time with that dreadful disease, Consumption. Doubting ones, please write Mrs. Clarke, and be convinced.

PATENTS

CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT?

Send a rough sketch or if you can a model of your invention to GEORGE E. LEMON, Washington, D. C., and a Preliminary Examination will be made of all United States patents of the same class of inventions and you will be advised whether or not a patent can be obtained.

FOR THIS PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION NO CHARGE IS MADE.

What will a Patent Cost?

If you are advised that your invention is patentable, send $20 to pay Government application fees of $15, and $5 for the drawings required by the Government. This is payable when application is made, and is all of the expense unless a patent is allowed. When allowed the attorney fees are $25 and the final Government fee $20 is payable. This you need not pay for nothing whether you are going to get a patent or not, and no attorney charges unless you do get a Patent. An attorney whose fee depends on his success in obtaining a Patent will not advise you that your invention is patentable unless it really is patentable, for it is his best judgment and in determining it he goes through the same preliminary examination he is to do if he undertakes the case. Design Patents and the Registration of Labels, Trade Marks and Reissues are also secured on favorable terms. Applications to reissue Rejected, Abandoned, or Partially Defective Cases in Very often valuable inventions are saved in these classes of cases. If you have undertaken to secure your own patent and failed, a skillful handling of the case may lead to success. Send me a written request addressed to the Commissioner of Patents, and he recognizes GEORGE E. LEMON of Washington, D. C., as your attorney in the case, giving the title of the invention and about the date of filing your application. An examination and report will cost you nothing. Searches made for title to inventions, in fact any information relating to Patents promptly furnished. Copies of Patents mailed at the regular Government rates, 25c. each.) Remember that I have had thirty years of experience since 1853 and you therefore reap the benefits of experience, besides reference can be given to actual clients in almost every county in the U. S. Pamphlet relating to Patents free upon request.

Acklen is contesting Kellogg's seat from one of the Louisiana districts. In other words the pot and kettle have fallen out, and the blackest man will probably win.

The State senate contains a White and a Whiting. The House contains a Black and a Blacker. Where are the Green and Grey families? They certainly ought to be represented in the legislature.

The House Ways and Means committee have begun the work of tariff reform by striking quinine from the free list, and restoring the former duty. Query: If the whole tariff shall be revised in this manner where will reform come in?

The Adrian Times prophesies that Ferry will be re-elected on the first ballot. With all due regard for the facilities of the Times to obtain "inside" intelligence, still we think it safe to hold our bets until after the first ballot shall be taken.

The Pendleton civil service bill passed the House last week with a whirl, the vote in its favor being 155 to 47.—It will undoubtedly be approved by the President. What a potent effect a few election figures exert upon the views of some congressmen.

The last day of the old year was signalized at San Francisco by a snow storm. Three inches fell in five hours. Only two snow storms have occurred in that city since 1850 until the one on Dec. 31st. The fact is, San Francisco is'nt much of a town after all.

It is said that Hubbell threatens to join the Democrats in case Ferry shall be elected. The Democrats have many political sins to answer for, but what under the sun have they done to merit such an infliction as that? The better way for Hubbell is to retire to the wilds of the upper peninsula.

The Senatorial situation is becoming interesting. The call for a caucus was signed by fifty-four members, nineteen members signed a resolution refusing to enter a caucus, and eight members refused to sign either document. If the men who bolted the caucus stand unitedly against Ferry his election will be impossible.

The McDonald presidential boom was formally started at Indianapolis on the 5th inst. At a large gathering of Democratic editors, Dr. Sherrod formally nominated McDonald for the presidency, and the latter made a speech accepting amid tumultuous applause. McDonald will be Indiana's candidate at the next national convention.

A dispatch from Lansing, under date of Jan. 5th says: "The Democratic and Greenback members of both houses of the legislature convened at noon to-day and formed a regular organization, offensive and defensive, electing Senator Richmond as chairman. They resolved to drop the name caucus and call their meetings conferences. The party was officially named "The Union party," and is to be so known hereafter.

The Adrian Times says:

The Times takes no stock in the pleas of some republican journals for the retention in place of certain republican officeholders, under the new state administration. If the republicans had succeeded the democrats in power, we should urge a clean sweep. We do not object to it now.

We honor the Times for its consistency. Having committed itself to the spoils system it seems to be willing that the "good old rule" should work both ways.

This winter seems to be rather a cold one for Jay Gould. The New York courts have decided that his stock watering job in connection with the Western Union was null and void, and the injunction issued at his instance against the Mutual Union pool has been dissolved. Now the legislature of New York has elected Chapin for speaker, the very man whom Gould didn't want, as he will make up the committees in the interest of reduced fare on the street car lines and of forcing the telegraph companies to lay their wires under the streets. The thermometer in Jay Gould's latitude is dropping every day.

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES.

The Present Fashion.

Detroit Evening News, Ind.: These are times when no man need be afraid of bolting. It has become more fashionable than standing by the caucus.

What Keeps the President Busy.

Washington Post, Dem: The manufacture and rehabilitation of postmasters is now the leading industrial pursuit at the Executive Mansion.

The Golden Rule.

Chicago Times, Ind.: The tariff commission has done far better than the most hopeful tariff reformer expected it would. It appears to have kept in sight the golden rule: Duty others as you would that others should duty you.

A Pinch of Star Route Wisdom.

Cincinnati Times: One hundred dollars a day for over a year has been paid to George Bliss for his services in the Star Route cases, besides fifty dollars a day each to two other attorneys. And still a man can get all the bets he wants that the principal defendants will never be convicted.

Gambetta's Alliterative Malady.

St. Louis Republican, Dem.: No wonder poor Gambetta died. He had "pepityphilite pesicalite." There is a crushing awfulness in that alliterative malady we couldn't expect any man to hold up under. No wonder the doctors were careful to conceal the nature of his trouble from him. He couldn't have survived five minutes after the naming of the disease.

Hard to Please.

Norristown Herald: A Kansas man upon being roused from his bed at 6 a. m. to split some kindlings, indulged in heathen language and wished something wuold come along and convert everthing combustible into kindling wood. Next day a cyclone came howling along and knocked his house into kindlings, and yet he was not satisfied. It is impossible to please some men.

Cold Facts from Col. Sanford.

Lansing Journal, Dem.: Those Democrats who think that there is only one opposition party in Michigan and the democratic party is that one, will certainly discover their mistake in due time. In the late combination movement, the Greenback party was not invited to crawl into the breeches pocket of the Democratic party, and it has not done so. Don't forget to remember that fact.

Voting as they Shot.

Philadelphia Record, Dem.: During the two campaigns in which General Grant was elected President there were many appeals to Republican soldiers to "vote as they shot." Who could then have anticipated that within a few years the leading shooters on Grant's side would be Democrats, or that his chief business in going to Washington would be to do justice to General Porter and get an office for Guerrilla Mosby?

A Paradise for Servant Girls.

Denver Tribune, Rep.: As a rule, the servant girls of Denver are rapidly becoming the owners of houses and lots. They get good pay, don't have to spend it for dress, and consequently have a surplus to invest. An industrious girl can save enough in a year to buy a lot near a street car line. Fortune hunters are getting hold of this state of facts, and are sometimes found paying their addresses to the kitchen rather than to the parlor.

The Bee in Butler's Bonnet.

Toledo Bee, Gb.: The indications are that Governor-General Butler, of Massachusetts, has been seriously attacked by the Presidential bug. He is reported as recently saying to a friend who expressed wonder at his accepting the Governorship of that State; "You know very well what I want, and am looking forward to, and you know that it is useless for any man to go before a National Convention unless he can make it clear that he can command the vote of his State. The last campaign has removed any obstacle which might block me in that direction."

Making the Dry-Bones Rattle.

Philadelphia Times, Ind.: The State of Massachusetts, which long prided itself on its great men, though for many years given over to mediocres, will be rudely awakened from its peaceful slumbers by Butler's ringing words. They have ideas behind them, and they are urged by the vigorous personality of a man who has friends to reward and enemies to punish, and whose life has been passed in a continual contest with forces which have finally succumbed to him. Whatever else may be expected, the coming year will be made politically picturesque for at least one State, and Benjamin F. Butler will be the artist.

Will It Be Enforced?

New York Journal, Rep.: The Civil Service Bill having passed the House, may now be regarded as certain to become a law. Will there be greater efficiency and more honesty in public offices under its provisions than at present? Let us wait and see. Under the law enacted there will be fewer removals in the departments, and faithful and capable employes who desire to retain their positions will be secure against removal. The abuses of political assessments, it is to be hoped, will be modified if not wholly removed. If properly enforced, therefore, the new law may do some good. But will it be enforced?

GOVERNOR BEGOLE'S MESSAGE.

The message of the incoming Governor is a business-like document, and is confined wholly to State affairs. The following abstract, from the Detroit Evening News, gives the salient points of the message:

HUMANE INSTITUTIONS.

Of the school for the blind, at Lansing, and the institution for the deaf and dumb, at Flint, Gov. Begole says they compare favorably with those of any other State, and hopes they will be liberally dealt with by the Legislature.

The State public school, at Coldwater, has received 1,231 children since its opening in 1874, and, of these 811 are still in the school, the other having been provided with homes in private families. As most of these would otherwise have become inmates of poor-houses or jails, the institution should be maintained as an economy, if not a charity, on the part of the State.

While endorsing the present management of the State reform school at Lansing, the Governor believes that better provision should be made for teaching the boys common and useful trades. He also suggests that the name of the institution be changed to the "State Industrial School for Boys," while the reform school for girls, at Adrian, in like manner be called the "State Industrial School for Girls." His reason is that the name "reform school" is associated in the popular mind with crime and disgrace, and that it would be a point gained to prevent any stigma attaching itself to graduates on account of their former residence in a "reform" school.

THE INSANE.

The Governor commends highly the work done by the asylums at Kalamazoo and Pontiac, and recommends the necessary legislation for the purchase of the site selected for the northern asylum at Traverse City, but calls attention to the fact that the commissioners should be restricted to their appropriation of $400,000 and not be allowed to duplicate the asylum at Pontiac regardless of cost, as appears to be their present purpose. He also recommends that a special asylum be provided for insane criminals. These consist of two classes, those who are acquitted of crime on the plea of insanity and are generally turned loose on society, and those who become insane after conviction, several of whom are now confined at the Jackson prison, where there is no suitable provision for their treatment. The safety of society and wants of the insane require that both classes be committed to an asylum, and their release might be left to a board consisting of the Governor, Attorney General and Superintendent of the several State asylums for the insane.

THE HIGH SCHOOL QUESTION.

In reference to taxation for educational purposes, Gov. Begole says: "If the expensive graded schools of our cities and villages, with their advanced and advancing, high school courses of instruction are necessary for the safety of the commonwealth, they should at once be established by law in the rural districts of the State. Intelligent voting and good citizenship should not be confined to cities and villages. If, on the other hand, the ordinary common school education afforded by the district school is sufficient to meet the demands which may justly be made upon the State, the taxpayers of our cities and villages should be relieved of a heavy burden of taxation, which, in that case, would be mere robbery under color of law. I believe our educational system could not have attained its present form and dimensions had not intelligent men been deterred from expressing their views by the charge, so sure to be made, that they are opposed to education and desire to break down the schools. I believe the time for a calm and intelligent discussion of the question in all its bearings has arrived, and commend it to your consideration.

EDUCATIONAL.

The Governor calls attention to the evils arising from the multiplicity and frequent changing of text books in the public schools, and says if the Legislature will devise some radical remedy for these evils, it shall have his hearty approval. He speaks a good word each for Orchard Lake military academy, the State normal school, the agricultural college and the university, and thinks a considerable sum will soon have to be expended in the purchase of books for the university. He recommends that $6,000 be appropriated for the purchase of books for the state library during the next two years.

MISCELLANEOUS MATTERS.

The Governor reiterates his sentiments about submitting proposed constitutional amendments to the popular vote whenever asked for by a considerable number of voters, and he suggests that more stringent legislation is needed for the protection of railroad employes from accident. During the year 1881 the number of employes in Michigan killed was one to every 286, and of injured one to every 71.

The fees for the inspection of oil should be reduced to the actual cost of inspection, and the advertising of tax sales should be given to the lowest bidder.

Convicts in the State prisons should be employed under the prison management, and the goods manufactured should be sold to the trade at fair market rates. Convict labor should not be sold to contractors and brought into competition with honest labor.

If the State must continue to supply subjects for dissection the selection should be made on other grounds than that of poverty.

A LABOR BUREAU.

The Governor recommends the appointment of three persons to be known as the Commissioners of Labor, whose duty it shall be to investigate the condition of the industrial classes, collect statistics and make suggestions which shall form a basis for intelligent legislation. Massachusetts has established such a bureau with good results, and Governor Begole is convinced that it would be an important step in this State toward determining questions as to the rights of labor which must ere long be settled by legislation.

The message closes with expressions of good will toward the party in majority in the Legislature, and the writer's trust in divine guidance in the discharge of his responsible duties.

R. B. HOUSE, Pres't.

A large fire occurred in Detroit last Monday night in the Telegraph block, one of the best business blocks in the city. The fire started near the foot of the elevator and shot up through the elevator shaft to the upper story before the alarm could be given. A large number of telegraph operators were at work in the fourth story and it was feared at one time that their escape would be impossible, but the ladders finally arrived in time to rescue them. Twenty-five workmen escaped by one frail ladder a horrible death. This event proves the absolute necessity of having fire escapes on all buildings of this character.

We send out a large number of sample copies of the HERALD this week. Persons receiving a copy are invited to examine the paper and then favor us with their subscription for 1883.

Lieutenant Danenhower, one of the Jeannette survivors, will lecture at the Adrian Opera House this evening, upon his Arctic experiences. He draws crowded houses everywhere. We presume a number of Tecumseh people will attend the lecture.

Representative Howell, of this district, has a place on two committees. He is chairman of the committee on Northern Insane Asylum, and second member on the Health committee.—We predict that he will make a valuable man in both places.

Martin Everett, who departed this life last Monday, in Raisin, had run the Comfort saw-mill for twenty-seven years. He was a quiet, modest man, but a faithful employe, a good neighbor and an upright citizen. He will be missed by those who knew him best.

An error crept into our account of the Archie Boyd wedding last week which made it read that Mr. and Mrs. Holdridge were married on the old farm and that Mr. and Mrs. Boyd will take up their residence there. The former is not the fact. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd will have their home on the James Boyd farm.

The HERALD job rooms are well equipped for all kinds of job printing. Among the jobs turned out in 1882 was a large edition of the Proceedings of the State Sunday School Convention, held in this village last June; a new edition of the Constitution and By-Laws of the Odd Fellows Lodge; an elegant business pamplet for H. Brewer & Co., and several smaller jobs of a similar character.

In accordance with the requirements of the constitution and by-laws of the Lenawee Co. Branch of the Michigan State Temperance Alliance, we hereby call the annual meeting of all its stockholders to be held January 17th, 1883, at 11 o'clock A. M., in Workingmen's hall, in the city of Adrian.—Every member is entitled to a vote in this convention, and all are earnestly requested to be present. At least we hope to see good strong delegations from all the township branches.

J. L. HUDSON, Pres.
A. P. Coddington, Sec.

Rev. Pardington will preach Sunday evening on "No Neutrality."

Tom Brangan of Denver, Colo. is spending a few days with his friends here.

Row Vescelius and party have been up in the North Woods most of the winter, shooting deer and having a good time generally.

Miss Mettie Carter of Bryan, O. is in Tecumseh visiting her uncle, Rev. R. S. Pardington. She is delighted with the place and the people.

The Exchange Bank of N. G. Kig & Co., of Brooklyn, has been reorganized, and will hereafter be known as the Farmer's Bank of Brooklyn.

Rev. Pardington will speak in the Red Ribbon Club hall next Sabbath at 3 P. M. on "Natural and Acquired Appetites, and how to correct them."

Dr. Jenkins of Addison, came to Franklin to visit his brother, Dr. Jenkins, of Franklin, and the two were in Tecumseh last Saturday and made the HERALD a friendly call.

Meetings at the Baptist church each evening next week. Rev. J. S. Bryden of Kalamazoo is expected to preach Sunday morning and evening, and to remain for a few days.

During the past year sixteen telephone exchanges have been put in at the following places: Battle Creek, Coldwater, Houghton, Hillsdale, Marquette, Ishpeming, Negaunee, Hancock, Calumet, Montague, Whitehall, Menominee, Niles, Pontiac, Tecumseh, Three Rivers and Monroe. The number of exchanges in the State is 13, and 20 or 25 new exchanges will be established the coming year, and a large number of towns will be connected to systems already in operation. The total number of subscribers in the State is 5,620, representing an aggregate of about 6,000 instruments in use. To make the required connections 20 miles of wire are used.

RAILROAD NOTES.

How the Work is Progressing on the Michigan and Ohio Road.

The Allegan Gazette says: "It is said that the Seney syndicate, owners of the new T. & M. railway, control 1,500 feet of dockage at Grand Haven, and may make that point their terminus. Of material now on hand here for the construction of the road, there are 170,000 white cedar ties, 112 car-loads of steel rails, 40 car-loads of spikes, and 17 car-loads of plates and bolts.

Battle Creek Republican: Engineer Boeh, of the M. & O., is in the city, and reports that that corporation is now in full possession of the track from Allegan to Monteith, the G.R. & I. having withdrawn all trains from the branch last Saturday evening.

The T. & M. company took possession of the Allegan branch on Saturday, Dec. 30. The laying of iron will begin this month.

The Marshall Statesman says: It is now discovered that many of the deeds for the right of way on the old road-bed between Battle Creek and Augusta were either never obtained or lost. Mr. E. P. Lacey, on last Tuesday, was intending to set up a steam pile driver near Augusta and begin work on the bridges, when a farmer requested him to clear out, as the company had not purchased the right of way. Mr. S. Lamb informs us that the Pennsylvania R. R. Co. foreclosed a mortgage some years ago and took possession of the entire road-bed. The T. & M. company purchased it of the Pennsylvania company and have a deed of the line from Beadle Lake to Monteith. No serious difficulty is anticipated.

The Homer Index says: At last reports the Albion folks were still soliciting aid for the T. & M. R. R. There is no great loss but what there is some gain, and those obligations can be retained to remind the committee of the amount of shoe leather and brains wasted in boning the people of Kalamazoo flats and College Hill.

There seems to be a scarcity of men and teams at Battle Creek. The T. & M. contractor would employ many more than are now at work, could he secure them.

Pile drivers for building the bridges have been received at Marshall.

The Marshall notes for the T. & I. were burned in the big Toledo fire, and the soliciting committee have been put to work "to gather them in" for the third time. They are meeting with no trouble however, as the givers of the notes are renewing the same promptly.

Three gangs of men have been at work in the town of Franklin for the past few days, and the grading in that town is being prosecuted vigorously.

Last Tuesday gravel was thrown in Cambridge, on Reade's farm, and contractor Fleming will push the work daily in that township.

In Tecumseh considerable grading has been done on the farms of Peter R. Adams, Frank Davidson and Ela Sanford east of the Raisin, on Zeiner's land just west of the Raisin, in the east part of the corporation, and on Tom. Boyd's farm west of the village. The work on the big bridge across the Raisin is going along finely. About one third of the piles have been driven and some of the square timber is already on the ground.

Harry Root is home from Muskegon, and will stay a few days.

The most exacting critic ought to be satisfied with this winter weather.

O. C. Kneale has purchased the Gilchrist property, on Railroad street, and will put a livery barn there in the spring.

Wolcott, Temple, & Co. are building a new lumber office, and when it is completed, will have one of the neatest offices in town.

The Chicago Times publishes a list over five hundred congressmen, ministers, editors, lawyers and others who have sold their railroad passes during the past year. Several Michigan editors are in the list.

The merchants of Tecumseh, having enjoyed the heaviest holiday trade ever known, are now posting their books and settling accounts of the past years business, preparatory to the opening of the spring trade.

The Newhall House, in Milwaukee, burned early yesterday morning, with a terrible loss of life. Fifty-six persons known to have been in the hotel are still unaccounted for, nearly all of whom must have perished in the flames.

Representative Howell, Monday, offered a resolution that was intended to bind the legislature to its work. The resolution provided that no adjournment exceeding one day in each calendar month should be allowed during the present session, except for the usual recess. But the resolution was tabled. The fact is there are a number of members who never drew so much as $3 per day before, and they want to hang on.

We dropped into Brown's New Phograph Gallery and Spark's Sewing Machine Rooms this morning to see what kind of a place they had and how everything looked since the work was all completed and the two gentlemen fairly settled in their new quarters. Their rooms are very nicely fitted up, and we can safely say that the establishment is an ornament to the town. Mr. Brown has spared no pains or expense to fit his gallery to do the best of work, and for the convenience of his patrons, and Mr. Sparks has as nice a room and as good an assortment of machines as can be found in the county.

The Spanish Students' Concert Company will give an entertainment at the Adrian Opera House, on Monday evening, Jan. 15th. This troupe is one of the best musical novelties on the road, containing thirteen genuine artists. Here are two press notices, taken from a large number:

Thomas' Orchestra, at its best, cannot excel the Spanish Students in accuracy of tempo, and the effect of the strings, as handled by them, is something indescribable. The first selection brought down the house, and it seemed as though the audience would not consent to let them go.—[Brooklyn Eagle.

Curiosity gaves place to unqualified admiration when they touched the strings of the mandolin and guitar, and the weird Spanish music fell upon the ear. Late as it was, the audience was spellbound, and when the first number was concluded, another and another was demanded with enthusiasm.—[Philadelphia Times.

BUSINESS PROSPECTS.

As the work is progressing on our new railroad, our town already seems to feel its influence and begins to boom. We are going to have a new drug store; rumor says also a new hardware store. Property is held a little firmer, and every merchant on the street seems to feel encouraged; a good many of our little industries are picking up, increasing their force of help and making preparations for a better trade the coming year. With all the faults our town people have, there is one thing Tecumseh is noted for, viz: patronizing her own stores and business places. We have two good cigar manufactories here; we now smoke Tecumseh cigars, and it is impossible for any outsider to sell a bill of any amount in town. We have good dry goods, hardware, grocery, clothing and dry goods stores here, well supported by our people. We also have a newspaper in Tecumseh, very well sustained, and every one who does not now take it intends to the coming year.

We now have in town another industry—Marsteller's Marble Works—which concern is doing a good business and turning out some of the finest work made in Michigan. While in Clinton, the other day, we saw some of the finest granite work put up by this concern that could possibly be found. Lately a good deal of this granite work erected in our beautiful cemetery has been purchased abroad, and without any regard for outside prices. Would it not be a good plan for people contemplating the purchase of monuments to see our own marble works, look at their samples and prices and see if the same work could not be obtained at home at a less cost, and perhaps obtain a better article in the bargain, thus keeping the money at home, and helping a fellow business man. This idea of patronizing home institutions is the secret of success of all communities, and let us all at least go and see what we can do at home, before placing an order for anything with outside parties.

OUR CLUB OFFERS.

In lieu of the premiums heretofore offered to the patrons of the HERALD, we have concluded this year to give them the benefit directly of the money formerly expended in that direction. We have arranged special club rates with the three best newspapers of Michigan, and can offer better terms on these three papers than was ever before offered in this county. We will furnish them at these rates:

HERALD and Detroit Free Press... $2.25
HERALD and Post and Tribune... 2.25
HERALD and Michigan Farmer... 2.60

In addition to these special offers, we can take subscriptions for all publications in connection with the HERALD at reduced rates. Call at the HERALD counting room before sending for your papers for 1883.

BURGLARY AT BLISSFIELD.

Last Monday night Blissfield was visited by burglars who succeeded in putting through a pretty good job. The post office building, which is located on the flats midway between the east and west sides, was chosen as the scene of operations. The post office safe was blown open with powder from which they obtained $112.00 in stamps and $8.00 in small change, the property of postmaster Stearns. The adjoining store in the same block is occupied by Doan Bros. Their safe was opened by knocking off the combination lock. Jewelry and gold pens were extracted to the amount of $1200. The burglars having secured their booty went to Robert Pollard's barn, at the east end of the village, and harnessing his team to a sleigh started for Toledo. Mr. Pollard was the first man to discover the mischief the next morning, and officers were at once put upon the track of the thieves.

DEATH OF PROF. WEDELES.

Adolf Wedeles, who had been sick for several weeks, at Adrian, died last Sunday morning. He lived in Tecumseh for nearly a year before going to Adrian, and took a position at once as one of the most accomplished pianists who ever resided among us. He had no relatives in the State and only two in the United States—two brothers, who are doing business at Santa Fe, N. M. They were notified of his illness and telegraphed instructions to take the best care of Adolf, at their expense. A few days prior to his death, when no one was in his room, he arose, and partially dressing, crawled feebly to his piano, which stood in an adjoining room, and for twenty minutes played, his auditors say, as he never played before. Finally, giving the keys one last sweep, he said: "Good-bye! good-bye! this is the last time old Wedeles will ever put his hands on you." He then slowly crawled back to the bed, from which he never again arose. The Knights of Pythias took charge of his funeral.

MARRIAGE OF MR. E. L. HOUGH.

In the Muskegon Daily Chronicle, of the 5th inst., we find an elaborate account of the wedding festivities connected with the marriage of our young townsman, Mr. E. L. Hough. The bride was Miss Alice K. Fairfield, daughter of the pastor of the Congregational church of that city.

The service was held at the Church, which was filled with friends and well-wishers of the young couple. Carpets were laid from the street to the Church, and the interior of the building was appropriately decorated by the young lady friends of the bride, with the valuable assistance of Mrs. W. S. Wood. The bridal party stood under a double arch of evergreen, from the center of which hung a large floral horseshoe; vases filled with cut flowers were placed near, and on the organ stood a magnificent floral offering containing the letters H. F., in a monogram of contrasting colors. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. M. W. Fairfield, father of the bride, assisted by her uncle, Rev. Dr. E. B. Fairfield, of Manistee.

After the ceremony at the Church, a reception was held at the house of Rev. M. W. Fairfield. The bridal party stood in a large bay window beautifully draped in evergreens and flowers, and there received the congratulations of the hosts of friends with whom the parsonage was filled to overflowing. A room on the upper floor contained the presents, and these were of unusual value and number. We should be glad to print this list, but lack of space prevents.

The bride, during her residence in Muskegon, has, by her charming manners and joyous disposition, made hosts of friends, both among those of her own age and elder people, and will be greatly missed, both in her home and in society.

The groom is well known here in Tecumseh, and needs no introduction to our people. Mr. and Mrs. Hough will be welcomed to the social circles of this village with cordiality. They start their matrimonial voyage under the brightest auspices.

Card of Thanks.

Mrs. Holderman and family wish to thank their friends for their kindness during the sickness and at the death of their husband and father, and wish especially to note their obligations to Dr. North, Mr. Holderman's physician, for his close attention and care during the whole of Mr. Holderman's sickness.

DIED.

EVERETT.—At his son-in-law's, John Millholland's residence in Raisin, on the morning of the 8th inst., Martin Everett, in the 74th year of his age.

Thus has passed away an indulgent husband and father, a kind neighbor and friend. Not possessed of much of this world's goods, but of a crown of glory eternal in the heavens. The writer called to see him but a few hours before he died, when he expressed to him that it was his last sickness, but he said, "All looks bright as the noonday sun. Tell my friends to trust in Jesus." What precious words, better than fine gold. "All looks bright as the noonday sun. Tell my friends to trust in Jesus." W. C.

HOLDERMAN.—At his residence in Tecumseh, Dec. 29, 1882, John Henry Holderman, aged 42 years, 8 months and 20 days.

Mr. Holderman was born in Baden, Germany, came to America at the age of 18, alone, and located at Petersburg, this State. His first work here was in a flouring mill. He then worked in various places until April 7, 1872, when he moved to Tecumseh and went into business. Feb. 22, 1869, he married Rosa Kenk, who survives him. He leaves a wife and two children, well provided for. Henry Holderman has been known in Tecumseh for the last eleven years, and with his death our town sustains the loss of an honest, industrious man—a man who was generous to his friends, upright in his dealings, a kind father and a loving husband. He has always been feeble in health, and was confined to his room for some months before his death. During this time his sufferings, though at times terrible, were borne with patience and fortitude. By industry and economy he has left to the wife and children, who have so carefully cared for and watched over him, a sufficiency. All who knew him will receive with sorrow the news of the death of Henry Holderman.

47 South Broad Street,
ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 17th, 1881.

Rush's Medical Association:

Dear Doctors—The three bottles of Dr. Rush's Regulator I ordered were received by express last night. I have taken nearly one bottle, and am highly satisfied with the result. For over two years I have been troubled with sharp pain at my heart. My physician, upon examination, pronounced it enlargement of the heart, and was unable to give me any relief. The trouble grew worse, and I had become convinced that I could not live. While in New York City, last week, I called on one of the most prominent physicians there, who charged me $25 for an examination and then recommended your "Regulator." Knowing you to be a regular Medical Association, and not a patent medicine scheme, I ordered the three bottles. I have not been troubled since I commenced taking it, but shall continue and take the entire three bottles so as to obtain a permanent cure. You have my sincere thanks. I am, gentlemen,

Very respectfully, WM. G. OSGOODBY.

Experimenting With a Cat.

A few years ago a man registered at an Oshkosh hotel, and was assigned a room and everybody noticed that he was a most mournful-looking man. He never said a word, but there was that about his face and actions that showed he was laboring under some great sorrow. He had his supper taken to his room, and the waiter said the man never spoke, and seemed to be the saddest-looking man he ever saw. The guests all talked the matter over, and they decided that the man was going to commit suicide. A traveling man who had a room next door to the solemn man, and who had previously occupied adjoining rooms in different hotels to three men who had committed suicide, felt that he was about to experience a fourth shock of the same kind, and he laid in his bed all night and never slept a wink, believing that the next moment he should hear a revolver shot or the death-struggle of his neighbor from poison. He never heard a sound all night, and when he got up in the morning he told the clerk that he was sure the man was dead. They passed the room and listened, but could hear no noise, and it was decided to look over the transom to see if the man was dead. It is not a pleasant thing to look over a transom into a man's room, not knowing whether your eye will fall on a corpse or a live man with a revolver pointed at you, so nobody seemed to yearn to be the first to climb the step ladder. Finally it was decided to throw a cat over the transom onto the bed, and if they did not hear any noise it would be certain that the man was dead and they could go on with the funeral. A cat was procured, and the porter, who knew just where the bed was located, was detailed to toss the cat over. He went up the ladder a few steps—not enough to look over, because he was not prepared to look suddenly upon a corpse, and taking the cat in both hands, by the legs, he gently tossed her, or him over the transom on the bed occupied by the mournful looking man. The cat was heard to fall with a dull thud, there was a sound of scratching and ripping, a heavy form was heard to strike the floor, the cat "spermeoned" and "spit," and the half-dozen people out in the hall looked at each other wonderfully, when suddenly the door opened and the maddest man that was ever seen in Oshkosh came out in the hall in his night-shirt, his arm and face bleeding on to the white night-shirt. He had the cat by the hind legs in one hand and a revolver in the other, and, as he struck at the assembled multitude right and left with the cat, there was the worst getting down stairs that ever was, and the cat was thrown at the last person who went down stairs, and the man returned to his room. He dressed himself, went down to the office and paid his bill, and took the first train south, never having spoken a word while in Oshkosh, and the people are to this day wondering whether he was a prohibition speaker, a traveling man for a corset factory, or an agent for a deaf and dumb asylum. The traveling man who was so nervous for fear his neighbor was going to commit suicide, wishes he had; the landlord fears that he has displeased a guest who might have remained longer, and the porter who threw the cat says that it is the last time that he will ever try to find a corpse by the aid of a cat.—Peck's Sun.

The Destructive Custom of the Bannock Indian Tribe.

A Bannock Indian boy, about twelve years of age, met with a horrible death at the flouring-mill at Fort Hall Indian agency, Idaho Territory, recently. The boy was idling around the mill at the time, and happened to get in the machinery, and was badly crushed and mangled before he could be taken from the gearing. He died soon afterward. It is the custom of Indians to burn or destroy all things connected with the death of one of their tribe. For instance, if one meets death by being kicked by a horse, the animal is killed; and if from disease an Indian dies in a wickup or lodge, it is burned. The mill in which this accident occurred was built by the government at a cost of $7,000, or $8,000, and was worth that amount of money. Between 6 and 7 o'clock on the morning of the 6th this mill was discovered to be on fire, and was soon entirely consumed, with a large amount of wheat and flour belonging to the Indians. This grain and flour was worth from $2,000 to $3,000. At the agency there are two tribes of Indians, the Bannocks and Shoshones, and the grain and flour belonged mostly to the latter. From the well-known [illegible] of Indians which the [illegible] to avenge the death of one of their tribe by burning [illegible] to place the destruction of [illegible] hands of the Bannocks [illegible] their property [illegible] spoiled [illegible] Times.

"Do you chew?" asked the philanthropist.

"Stop it! Stop for a year, and then come and see me."

The young man went off and cut loose from the habit, and after worrying through another 12 months once more faced the philanthropist.

"Do you chew?"

"Yes."

"Stop it! Stop it for a year and then come and see me."

But the young man never called again. When some one asked why he didn't make one more effort he replied: "Didn't I know what he was driving at? He'd have told me that as I had stopped chewing, drinking and smoking, I must have saved enough money to start myself."—Wall Street News.

Heap Gone.

"Gone" is the classic and unique language in which Bill Nye, the Boomerang man, paralyzes a dead-beat.

"Another land mark of Laramie has gone. Another wreck has been strewn upon the sands of time. Another gay bark has gone to pieces upon the cruel rocks, and above the broken spars and jib boom and foretop gallant royal main-brace and spanker boom euchre deck the cold, damp tide is moaning.

We refer to L. W. Shroeder, who recently left this place incog., also in debt largely to various people of this gay and festive metropolis.

Laramie has been the home at various times of some of the most classeat dead beats of modern times, but Shroeder was the noblest, the most grand and colossal of dead beats that has ever visited our shores. Born with unusual abilities in this direction, he early learned how to enlarge and improve upon the talents thus bestowed upon him, and hence in Laramie he soon won a place at the front as a man who purchased everything and paid for nothing. He had a way of approaching the grocer and the merchant that was well calculated to deceive, and he did in several instances make representations which we now learn were false.

He was by profession a carpenter and joiner, having learned the art while cutting cordwood on the Missouri bottoms near Omaha for the Collins Brothers. Here he rapidly won this way to the front rank by erecting some of the most commanding architectural ruins of which modern wood assassination can boast. He would take a hatchet and a buck saw, and carve out his fortune anywhere in the world, and it wouldn't cost him a cent. He filled his whole trans-Missouri country with his frames and his promissory notes and then skipped out and left us here to mourn.

Good bye, Shroeder. Wherever you go, we will remember you and hope that you may succeed in piling up a monument of indebtedness as you did here. You were industrious and unwiring in efforts to become a great financial wreck and success has crowned your efforts. We will not grudge you the glory that coagulates about your massive brow."

Discoveries in Germany.

An interesting account of the discovery of valuable manuscripts at Ravenna is given in the Riga Zeitung. It was proposed to refit an apartment on the ground-floor of the Hotel de Ville, to serve as an additional receptacle for the city archives. But on examination it was found to be filled almost to the ceiling with manuscripts and books, the bulk of which belonged to the eighteenth and seventeenth centuries, while some thousands of them dated from the sixteenth, very many from the fifteenth, century. The most valuable, among them was perhaps a collection of municipal account books and similar documents. Hitherto only a few of the old city books of this once famous Hanse town were believed to exist; but about forty of them, of all kinds, ranging from the fourteenth to the sixteenth century, have here been brought to light. Books of all kinds, such as were kept probably only in the middle ages, are here represented,—accounts of the municipal lime-kilns, mills, exchange of coins, exchequer receipts, beginning with the year 1432, registers of incoming ships, with abstracts of their bills of lading (from the beginning of the fifteenth century), port dues, lists of citizens, records of inheritances, ledger of receipts from succession duties, record of letters of convoy, several letter-books (one of which ranges from 1383 to 1425), and others, for the end of the fifteenth and beginning of the sixteenth century. Among the other treasures here discovered is the chronicles of Dunamunde, long believed to be lost, and a manuscript belonging to the municipal archives of Lubeck.

A Princess' Domestic Life.

Princess Louise started in married life, says the London Truth, with the determination not to be the rival, on their own ground, of plutocrats' wives. There was to be comfort as well as elegance in her establishment, but no ostentation. At Rideau hall, her Canadian official abode, she affects more state. Once a week, when the legislature is in session, she gives a formal banquet. A day or two after there is an informal dinner, which Canadians term "the scrap feast." To be asked to it is thought a marked favor. A piper dressed in Campbell plaid is in attendance, and performs at dessert on his noisy instrument. On Sunday English visitors to Ottawa are asked in case an inference this way to partake of a family dinner, which is snug and well served, and enlivened by the cheery humor and raillery of Lady Sophia McNamara, who is more reserved when Canadians are present. The marquis shines to the [illegible]. It was a disadvantage to him to arrive at Ottawa immediately [illegible] Lord Dufferin had gone away. The presence of [illegible] was generally felt. The marquis is highly cultivated, but the product of a poor soil. He is at times [illegible] too much of the prince consort.

George W. Childs, the munificent millionaire editor of the Philadelphia Ledger, says: "For a reliable and faithful employe I would do anything. I have had men with me fifteen and twenty years and over, who, when they retired, not only received a full salary as before, but had a good sum of money to fall back on. My old city editor, retired with between $100,000 and $200,000, which he had been able to save while with me, and several other Ledger men have retired with scarcely less. I always liked to see a man who would put by money for a rainy day, and I think journalists should do so more, if anything, than any other people."

A Mexican Father.

An incident illustrating Mexican character is related by an exchange. It appears that a Senator of one of the Mexican states, a stock raiser, in the prime of life, sold his sheep and gone away. Away the proceeds of the sale before he returned to his home, and in addition gambled himself into a debt to the amount of $20,000. Like a dutiful son he confessed his guilt to his old father, who promptly gave him a sound thrashing and afterward went to the town and paid the $20,000 obligation.

Ben Butler's Bridge.

How Massachusetts' New Governor Made the Most Narrow Escape of His Life.

The recent triumph of Ben Butler and the clever devices with which he neutralized the effects of the "splits" in his own ranks, says Derrick Dodd in the San Francisco Post, recalls an incident of the General's early career, and which is interesting as showing that even in his youth Ben displayed those strategic abilities which have since done so much for his military and political career.

It appears that young Butler was much enamored of a pretty girl who lived on a farm about six miles from that of the Butler family in the western part of Massachusetts. The country beauty was a coquette, however, and kept quite a large train of admirers in suspense, each rival doing his best to gain the advantage of the others. At last matters were brought to a climax, and the damsel appointed a certain night when she would render her final decision as to which suitor she preferred.

It goes without saying that they were all better looking than Ben, but the latter determined to put the inside of his head against the outside of those of his opponents. The nearest way to the farmer's house, and the one taken by all her eager followers, was over a bridge formed by a single and somewhat slippery log placed across a deep brook in the rear of the house. Young Butler repaired to this bridge an hour earlier than the accustomed "courtin' time," bagging a pail of lard with which he carefully anointed the log by the mellow moonlight, locking himself across it at leisure.

As he afterwards sat with his sweetheart, waiting for the other suitors to appear, a loud splash came from the direction of the brook. Ben's game eye twinkled, and in imagination he could see one of his gorgeously gotten up fellow candidates climbing up the opposite bank with his teeth chattering and hemming for home across lots, but the conspirator looked as innocent as a cat in the dairy, and said nothing.

Pretty soon there came another souse, and after awhile another. The beauty began to look at the clock and show evidences of a decided pique at the negligence of her other admirers—a circumstance Ben did not fail to turn to his own profit.

Presently he could faintly hear voices in the distance, and he knew that the last two swains were approaching together. Pretty soon came a tremendous double splash.

"Dear me," said the young lady, "how the fish are jumping to-night!"

The upshot of it was that when the future governor rose to go the slighted beauty gave him her hand. Sealing the bargain with an old-fashioned husking bee kiss, Butler left his prize in such a state of exultation that he forgot all about the greased log, and the first thing he knew both legs had slain in the back of his head and he took a header down below, just as his victims had done. He climbed up the already well-clawed bank and made six miles to home, uttering Kearneyisms unfit for publication. He was taken with chills and fever as a result, and, when he got well, found his fiancee had eloped with a hired man. Butler tells this as the narrowest escape of his life, as he says the girl began eating onions the very next day after she became engaged. The General has been lucky ever since.

Sleeping With Serpents.

Professor Bell, the Smithsonian Institution's agent, shipped his last collection of snakes to the North two weeks ago, and already has his museum full again. It is surprising how rapidly they become domesticated under his treatment. During the recent cold snap some of them that had taken lodging in his room at night climbed on the bed-posts and coiled themselves up in the blankets. He felt them hunting for cozy spots about his legs, and knew that he might to get up and provide them with some other lodging, but a sleepy man in a warm bed of a cold night is not over obliging, and the Professor stayed on mission, as is his custom. The reptiles crawled upon him and nestled, but the Professor had to stay now and then to kick and cry out softly, "Woof, boys! be easy, boys!"

At last a big rattlesnake found an opening near the foot of the blankets, and slowly glided in. There was a gentle swaying up and down of the bed-clothes as the big clay-bank serpent moved about, getting himself comfortable, when suddenly he slapped about two-thirds of his frigid length against the warm legs of the dozing proprietor.

The proprietor made a violent remark. He sat up in bed, gathered a handful of snakes in each hand, depositing them carefully on the floor; then, throwing back the bed clothes, administered a kick that sent the coachwhip flying through the dark to the further end of the room, encountering the lamp in its aerial flight, and knocking from its bracket on the wall the fragile skull of an ancient Florida mound-builder.

"Freeze and be hanged," exclaimed the irate Professor; "I'll share my bed with you, but you shan't drive me out." He drew the blankets over him. A few moments later several pair of little red eyes moved up the bed-posts on either side, and soon snake-herder and snakes, in one couch, were lost in peaceful sleep.

Justifiable Homicide.

An Arkansaw editor was arraigned before a court on a charge of killing a reporter. The judge who was formerly a newspaper man, but who had been proved guilty of political fraud and consequently elected to office, was very much interested in the case. "I acknowledge that I killed him" said the editor. "One morning when I took up my paper I saw the following, which the reporter had written 'An unknown stranger, whose name we failed to learn, committed fatal suicide yesterday.'" "Your defense is sufficient," said the judge, "and I have the pleasure of discharging you."

"I guess the goose has the advantage of you," said a lady to an inexpert boarder who was carving. "Guess it has bound in age," was the withering retort.

Easily Satisfied.

"I am going fishing."

The August sun was beating down in pitiless fury upon the brown bosom of the parched earth, and up from the meadows that lay to the westward of Dappleville the hum of insects and the noisy notes of the grasshoppers came with wonderful distinctness to Beryl McCloskey, as she stood in the doorway of a modest little cottage, over whose front the honey-suckles and morning-glories were climbing, their vivid hues bringing out in all its beauty the pale glow of the girl's complexion, while the little shafts of sunlight that found their way here and there through the vines overhead were not more rich in coloring than the mass of golden hair that fell over Beryl's shoulders.

They had been married nearly a week, Beryl and George W. Simpson, and as the girl nestled close to her husband she felt an unspeakable joy, a sense of sweet content that could never fade away or die so long as he was by her side—his strong arm around her, and yet on this Sunday afternoon a little feeling of disappointment—a sort of I-am-not-as-happy-as-I-was-a-week-ago Saturday sensation—had thrilled her soul for an instant as the man whom she had vowed to love, honor, and possibly break, spoke the words with which this chapter opens.

"I had been hoping you would go with me to Sunday-school this afternoon, darling," Beryl said, "you are such a favorite with the children and can manage them so well."

"Yes," he replied, "that is very true, sweetheart, but I am also tolerably handy with a fish-pole, and you know the fish always bite best on Sundays."

"Do they?" she asked, looking up to him with her pure young face grown funny."

"It is indeed lutiferous," George replied, speaking with a grave tenderness that shadowed what a lovely liar he was, "but we cannot fathom the mysterious laws of Nature. We can only accept them."

Suddenly George changed the subject of conversation. "I shall come through the village on my way home," he said. "Is there anything I can get for you?"—and he stooped and kissed the rose-bud mouth of the one woman in the world who had ever won his love.

The little head fell on his shoulder.—There was a long, sweet pause, and then Beryl, as if fearful that the ecstacy which was thrilling through her would suddenly change to pain if she dared look up or move, said softly:

"Caramels."

That was all. No need of explanation between them, and, as George W. Simpson walked swiftly away with a light heart and a pocket full of bait, he felt the one cloud in the rose-tinted horizon of his life was liable to stay there.—Chicago Tribune.

Not The Same Sullivan.

A New York letter to the Detroit Free Press says: Alexander M. Sullivan, the Irish journalist and member of Parliament, departed homeward a few days ago. He returned from New Orleans last week. A pretty fair story is told about his advent there. Having a good many friends in the Crescent City, preparations were made to give him a public reception. Pretty much everyone, including the street boys, got hold of his name. It was Sullivan here, there and everywhere. He is a small man, standing about five feet six, weighing probably 150 pounds, and in delicate health. The boys got enough somehow, that he was another Sullivan, whose nature is of a different kind. A crowd gathered in front of the house in which he was staying, [illegible] out and did not know [illegible]

[illegible]

"N-a-w, that ain't Sullivan. I seen Sullivan when he licked Ryan. That ain't him. I could lick that feller myself!"

It may be a great thing to be a journalist and a member of Parliament, but there is fame for a first-class "slugger," too.

Raised But One.

"I raised seven boys," said an Arkansaw man, "and all but one was killed. Tom was killed by his uncle, Ned was stabbed by Ike, Ike was horned to death by a cow, Jake was blowed up, Sim was killed by a wild hog, and Nat was hung by a horse and killed."

"What was your other son's name?"

"Lige, and he was as good a boy as ever lived, and smart! That boy could write his name anywhar, and he could read this big show printin'."

"And so they were all killed but Lige?"

"Yes," said the old man, with a sorrowful sigh.

"And what became of Lige?"

"Why, sir, the Governor took a foolish notion and wouldn't pardon him, and he was hung."

According to the newspapers of Rio Janeiro, writing on the twenty-fourth anniversary of the passing of the law of emancipation in Brazil, the effect of that measure has been singularly beneficial to the material and moral development of the country. In those years more than 60,000 slaves have been spontaneously freed by their masters without compensation, while the State has given liberty to more than 11,000. During the same period 250,000 children of slaves have been born free, and the cost to the state of emancipation up to the present time has been nearly $7,000,000.

John Howard Payne in Georgia.

I was once acquainted with a Swede who had been adopted by the Osage Indians. He was a friend of John Ross, the celebrated chief of the Cherokees, and his name in the Cherokee language—it was written J Q & J Q, pronounced Coh-wen--koh-web, and means swamp sparrow. His brother, Lewis Ross, was named Te-talk-te, which means spoon. My informant was himself called by the Cherokee Te-kaw-wha-hee-ky, which signifies "The man who writes orders for flour."

John Howard Payne, author of "Home Sweet Home," was a warm, personal friend of John Ross, who will be remembered as the celebrated chief of the Cherokees. At the time the Cherokees were removed from their homes in Georgia to their present home west of the Mississippi river, Payne was spending a few weeks in Georgia, with Ross, who was occupying a miserable cabin, having been forcibly ejected from his former home.

A number of prominent Cherokees were in prison, and that portion of Georgia in which the tribe was located, was [illegible] armed squads of the Georgia militia, who had orders to arrest all who refused to leave the country.

While Ross and Payne were seated before the fire in the chief's hut, the door was suddenly burst open and six or eight militiamen sprang into the room. Ross's wife was seated on a trunk containing many valuable papers and a small amount of money, and at the unexpected intrusion she sprang up and screamed wildly. Ross spoke to her in the Cherokee language, telling her to be seated, as she would save the contents of the trunk, and as she thus sat down again, the intruders told Ross that he and Payne were under arrest and must prepare to accompany the squad to Milledgeville where they were to be imprisoned. The soldiers lost no time in taking their prisoner away. Ross was permitted to ride his own horse, while Payne was mounted on one led by a soldier. As the little party left the hovel, rain began falling and continued until every man was drenched thoroughly. Toward midnight, Payne's escort, in order to keep himself awake, began humming "Home, home, sweet, sweet Home," when Payne remarked:

"Little did I expect to hear that song under such circumstances and at such a time. Do you know the author?"

"No," said the soldier, "do you?"

"Yes," answered Payne, "I composed it."

"The devil you did." "You can tell that to some fellows, but not to me.—Look here you made that song you say; if you did—and I know you didn't—you can say it all without stopping." It has something in it about pleasures and palaces. Now pitch in and reel it off, and if you can't I'll bounce you from your horse and lead you instead of it."

The threat was answered by Payne, who repeated the song in a slow, subdued tone, and then sang it making the old woods ring with the tender melody and pathos of the words. It touched the heart of the rough soldier, who was not only captivated but convinced, and who said that the composer of such a song should never go to prison if he could help it. And when the party reached Milledgeville, they were, after a preliminary examination, discharged much to their surprise. Payne insisted it was because the leader of the squad had been under the magnetic influence of Ross's conversation, and Ross insisted that they had been saved from insult and imprisonment by the power of the "Home Sweet Home," sung as only those who feel can sing it.

The friendship existing between Ross and Payne endured until the grave closed over the mortal remains of the latter.—Southern World.

Dr. Schliemann has returned to his home at Athens, and writes to a friend: "Thanks to the Greek gods, our beautiful Attic Spring weather, the daily rides to the sea, and the sea baths, I am quite recovered." He has not yet been able to obtain permission to make the elaborate plans of Troy he has in contemplation, owing to an inhibition from the Grand Master of artillery at Constantinople, but he hopes to overcome this difficulty through diplomatic intervention. A French version of his "Ilios," with the addition of a narrative of this year's exploration, is now in the press.

Shiawassee county, Michigan, has a coal-bearing territory of about 25,000 acres, and veins ranging from three to six feet in thickness are found all through the central, northern and eastern part of the county. Large fortunes, evidently, await the people who will go there and pick up the claims.

Going to His Grave.

There he goes again direct to a saloon and pours down another heavy draught of strong drink, not so much because his appetite demands it, but for the artificial buoyancy it produces, the after effect of which leaves him more miserable than before; it is this dreadful practice that is daily sending thousands to their graves. A remedy for all this is found in the true friend of temperance, the best, purest of all medicines, Electric Bitters.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

The treasury reserve has fallen below $112,000,000, and bond redemptions bid fair to reduce it below $90,000,000, when the issue of gold certificates must stop.

The house committee on war claims has resolved to make a favorable report on Rosecrans' bill to allow California $250,000 for suppressing Indian outbreaks.

Three of the richest planters of Louisiana are besieging congress for a heavier duty on low-grade sugar than is recommended by the tariff commission.

A committee of the house of representatives has ascertained that the clerk of the supreme court had a net income of $29,000 last year. A recommendation for a reasonable salary will be made.

It is probable that the senate will pass the bill reported from the judiciary committee to cancel grants of land to railroad companies which have made little effort to complete their tracks within the time specified.

B. H. Campbell, of Chicago, representing local capitalists, has offered the secretary of the interior an annual rental of $50,000 for a tract of land in Indian Territory thirty miles square, on which to raise cattle [illegible] the right to cut timber for wire fences.

Several companies of union volunteers from Rhode Island were only mustered out last month, and an officer of the command claims pay from the war department to the date of discharge. A Vermont regiment was similarly forgotten at the close of the late unpleasantness.

Secretary Teller would like to see a new Indian commissioner in place of Hiram Price. Edward Fenlon, of Leavenworth, [illegible] congresses having cleared $50,000 on a contract to deliver 50,000 pounds of tripe at Los Pa[illegible] agency. Mr. Price refused to accept [illegible] per hundred for supplying beef [illegible] unable to make purchases at [illegible]

PUTNAM'S SERVICES.

[illegible] at Pennsylvania, comes [illegible] proposition which appears [illegible] to grant the heirs of Count Pulaski, who lost his life in the American cause at the siege before Savannah in 1779. He held the rank of brigadier general at the time of his death. It is proposed to grant his heirs in full payment for the eminent services of the distinguished foreigner $2,000. The matter is being considered by the house committee on war claims.

THE EYE OF THE SPEAKER.

[illegible] in congress fare no better than the poor. The speaker's eye is controlled by a member's political influence, and not by speech. For nearly two years the other day millionaire Brewer, of New York, has kept himself hoarse by trying to catch the attention of the speaker. Keifer could not see him, though he had seen all the members on his own party. Just before adjournment, however, Keifer did pitch on Brewer. [illegible] was happy.

[illegible]

THE MOVING VACATION POSTALS.

[illegible] has contracted [illegible] of the new style [illegible] letter and envelope [illegible] called. Years have [illegible] in some postal circuits that [illegible] the revenue [illegible] connection [illegible] but those in favor of the new cards reply that the same was claimed when the postal cards were first proposed, and that as now letter postage was reduced. Should a reduction be made a finer sheet and envelope combined with a 2-cent stamp upon it would be among the things to follow.

INCULPATIVE CLEMENCY REFUSED.

The president has decided not to interfere in the case of Jack Liddle, now in jail at Huntsville, Texas, charged with robbing a United States paymaster at Muscle Shoals, Alabama, in the spring of 1881. Application for a pardon of Liddle was made by Governor [illegible] of Alabama, and other high officials, including the chief of police in Kansas [illegible] found that the parties who [illegible] in the conviction of Frank James, now awaiting trial at Independence, Mo., [illegible] the president's action is based on the report from the attorney general, who made adverse report on the petition for pardon on the ground that nothing would be gained by such action as Liddle's was as much deserving of punishment as James.

THE PRESIDENT THE FOE OF OFFICE.

President Arthur is looking as well as he did a year ago. During the reception at the white house New Year's day he was cordial and polite as usual, but his manner seemed forced. It is said he is already tired of his presidential responsibilities, and would not accept the renomination if it were offered him. Color is given to this idea by the following incident: When the secretary of the senate presented his compliments to the president Friday, the latter exclaimed: "How [illegible] Sabbath! I'm so [illegible] to see [illegible] those meaning [illegible] I wish I were back with you all again. It was a good deal easier there than here."

DOING GOOD WORK.

Congress is more advanced in its business by nearly a month than it ever was before at this date within the memory of the oldest member. The house has passed nearly all the appropriation bills, and the senate has passed the agricultural, Indian, consular and diplomatic and military academy appropriation bills. The postoffice bill is in the hands of the committee, and the army bill has just reached the committee. As for general legislation both houses have passed the civil-service reform bill, and the senate has passed the bill extending the bonded period for whiskey, and has spent some time in debating two measures of first-class importance, the presidential succession bill and the bill to organize all the judiciary [illegible] before congress and the departments to the court of claims for investigation.

REFUNDING TAXES.

A communication from the secretary of the treasury has been laid before congress [illegible] estimate of the commissioner of internal revenue of the amount of money required to refund taxes on cigars, cigarettes, tobacco, distilled spirits, and fermented liquors, the difficulty of arriving at an accurate estimate being recognized, [illegible] distilled spirits, $[illegible] fermented liquors, $[illegible] tobacco, $[illegible] cigarettes, and $[illegible] cigars. The [illegible] tax paid on distilled spirits [illegible] tax paid on fermented liquors [illegible] tax paid on tobacco [illegible] tax paid on cigarettes [illegible] tax paid on cigars [illegible] dealers, $[illegible] manufacturers [illegible] be refunded [illegible] now in broken packages.

CHANGES IN THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

The passage by the senate of the civil-service reform bill has inspired Secretary Lincoln to carry out a plan which he had under consideration for some time past to promote the efficiency of the clerical force in the war department. Hitherto the branch of the service [illegible] been a Mecca for [illegible] many clerks discharged from other departments, have turned longing eyes, as the duties required were light and the hours regarded as sure for life. Under such a state of affairs numerous abuses crept in, and the privileges accorded the employes were far in excess of those in any other public office. Now it is proposed to run the department on the same principle that the treasury is conducted, and, when the clerks return to their desks on Tuesday morning they will probably be confronted with an order prohibiting smoking, social visits during office hours, and other restrictions more in their habits. A half hour at noon will be allowed for lunch, and such as fail to conform to the new rules will be dismissed summarily. It is proposed to make this a model department, and Secretary Lincoln has established the reputation of being master of his own house, so that no delinquency will be permitted.

THE CATTLE DISEASE.

The treasury cattle commission estimate that the sum of $200,000 will be required to stamp out the lung plague among the animals in this country, and recommend the requisite legislation.

In discussing the question of the admission of American store cattle to Great Britain, the report concludes:

It is vain to hope that England will remove the restrictions as long as we fail to show that the last vestige of infection has been wiped out from our land, and nothing short of the absolute and undeniable extinction of this disease in the United States will reopen the British market to our live cattle, and save us those millions we are now every year prodigally, we might say insanely, throwing away.

The report estimates the yearly losses from the lung plague in the United States at from two to three million dollars, and the prospective loss fifty million. The capital represented by the present yearly losses at 5 per cent. would be from forty to sixty million dollars, and that represented by prospective losses at the same rate $1,000,000,000. The governing principle in all these recommendations is that the federal government shall forbid the movement of store cattle out of every infected state, territory or district, except after a quarantine such as is now imposed on cattle imported from infected foreign countries. The report recommends that the secretary of the treasury be empowered to order the instant destruction of all cattle or other animals which in quarantine give evidence of dangerous contagious disease.

OUR FOREIGN COMMERCE.

The annual report of the Bureau of Statistics in the foreign commerce of the United States for the fiscal year 1882 has been printed. No official document ever published by the Government in times of peace and plenty contains a more humiliating array of facts and figures than those compiled by Mr. Hinino in this report. In 1882 the total tonnage of sail and steam vessels entered at seaports of the United States from foreign countries was 4,464,638 tons. In 1881 it was 4,066,400 tons. The tonnage of foreign vessels entered at our ports during that year was 1,270,363. The tonnage of American steam and sailing vessels entered at our ports from foreign countries in 1882 was 2,968,280 tons, while the foreign tonnage entered during this year was 11,696,[illegible]. The tonnage of vessels entered of every [illegible] save the United States, exhibits an increase [illegible] in British tonnage entered since 1876 among 100,000 tons, while the decrease in American tonnage has been 225,985 tons. The total value of merchandise and gold and silver imported into and exported from the United States during each of the years 1881 and 1882 was $[illegible]. In 1882 the total in [illegible] such imports and exports was $[illegible]

The people in the vicinity of Tecumseh are getting wide-awake to the importance of holding a fair at Tecumseh next fall. All that is now necessary is for some one to set the ball rolling by calling a meeting through the columns of the HERALD, and we think it would be well attended. We would suggest some Saturday. Let us hear from the rest.

The next meeting of the Literary will be held Jan. 28th. Question for discussion: Resolved, That the Indian has suffered more at the hands of the whites than the Negroes.

ADDISON ATOMS.

Fire broke out in a dwelling house situated about two miles west of this place on the night of Friday, the 12th inst., at about 8 o'clock. The house was occupied by Mr. Chas. Voorhes and family. Mr. Voorhes was in town at the time and Mrs. V. discovering the flames well underway was only able to give the alarm and repair with her four little ones to a place of safety in the yard. The night was exceedingly cold and windy and great credit is due the neighbors who succeeded in rescuing nearly all the furniture and household goods from the burning wreck, only the contents of the cellar and a few dishes being lost. It is thought the fire originated about the chimney. The building was the property of Mr. J. W. Voorhes, of Somerset, Hillsdale county, and is a total loss, not being covered by any insurance whatever.

"The Popular Science Monthly" for January offers a goodly collection of articles which merit attention for their interesting character or their practical adaptability. Of the first kind is the opening article on "The Great Comet of 1882," by Professor Young, of Princeton, one of the very few American writers who are capable at once of discussing the subject fully from the scientific point of view, and of answering the questions the public asks in a way it wants them answered. Of the second kind is M. Foulillee's "Scientific Philanthropy," in which the expediency of public charity and its ultimate bearing on the future of the race are ably and candidly discussed in the light of the views of the Darwinian school of philosophers and of a critical examination of them. Dr. C. C. Abbott's "Traces of a Pre-Indian People" is another scientific and popular discussion of a subject on which curiosity is awake by an author most competent to treat it. Dr. Roberts's "Bodily Deformities in Girlhood" commends itself by its very title to parents and teachers as a subject of the first importance. D. Appleton & Company, Publishers, New York. Fifty cents per number, $5 per year.

Marshall Statesman: It is now positively asserted that iron will be laid on the T. & M. next week. The delay has been occasioned by the work in preparing a construction and boarding train to accommodate the ironing gang. This is being done at Allegan. A locomotive has arrived at Monteith to prosecute the work. Mr. P. E. Lacey came from Monteith this morning and states that there are eight gangs on the old grade engaged in preparing it for the iron. The bridge, three and one-half miles this side of Monteith, is nearly completed, a few stringers only remaining to be laid. The bridge builders anticipate no difficulty in keeping in advance of the ironers.

Things in the Bottom Drawer.

There are wraps and tops and pieces of strings,
There are shoes which no little feet wear;
There are bits of ribbon and broken rings,
And tresses of golden hair;
There are little dresses faded away
Out of the light of the sunny day

There are dainty jackets that never are worn,
There are caps and mufflers of satin
There are books and pictures all faded and torn,
And marked by the finger tips
Of dimpled hands that have fallen to dust,
Yet I strive to think that the Lord is just.

But a feeling of bitterness fills my soul
Sometimes when I try to pray,
That the Reaper has spared so many souls
And taken mine away;
And I almost doubt that the Lord can know
That a mother's heart can love them so.

Then I think of the weary eyes
Of those who are waiting and watching for me,
Of those who have passed from the earthly conflict
Where darkness and sin are rife,
Where the flowers of the spirit have withered and died.

Then I wonder if in distant climes,
Amongst those who are waiting for me,
And those hands are linked with the dear
[illegible]
[illegible] my wayward child
Let a number of long years pass by
Ere they [illegible] them to my heart,
Ere they kissed them [illegible] my trouser.

And then I think of my children three,
My babes that never grew old,
And know that they are waiting and watching for me;
In the city with streets of gold,
Safe out from the curse of this weary years,
Free from sorrow and sin and fear
And I thank my God with fervent tears,
For the things in the bottom drawer.

PANSY.

Pansy's home was half way up the mountain side, just above the glimmer and bustle of the valley and just from "the highway of dust" of the mountain-road—a quiet home, truly, for a quiet life. The gray stone cottage seemed to nate for all over itself a mood and look of rest, and Pansy said the ledges bordered with her name-flowers, on the balconies of her room were the two relently creeping from its face, rows of her favorite flowers bordered the terrace and zoomed in the urns during all the warm summery days.

Her father loved the flower as much as she did, it had been her mother's name, and they had seemed to bloom in the midnight darkness of her eyes, and when the little daughter came and the mother's eyes opened, only to open on the brightness of another world than [illegible] seemed to pass to the little fair bloom that now had budded into womanhood.

How strangely like, and yet how unlike her mother Pansy was. The features, the expression, the small dainty figure, were all repeated, but instead of the rich chestnut hair, resembling combination and the velvet eyes, were soft black curls, pale, dusky skin and luminous gray eyes.

Then, too, the bright gayety of her mother was not there. The quiet days the life apart had fostered the shy temperament of her father. Mr. Merton seemed to have lost himself in his books through these years that Pansy was passing from childhood.

It was only the other day when he saw her coming through the grounds from a ramble in the woods, that he realized that she was leaving childhood behind, and then he thought how completely she had usurped old Jeanette's place in waiting upon him.

He remembered, too, with a laugh and a sigh, of the quiet mischief which had prompted her to put on his library table, her last birthday, a week since, a basket of pansies with "16" marked in white flowers. He had noticed then that the white hand that swept over them had looked "wondrous soft and small," and almost transparent in its delicacy. Was not his flower well?

Pansy had kept her life quietly folded in her heart. She had always loved this lovely home, she never grew tired of looking over to the rim of the distant hills across the valley, of seeing the landscape glow in the light of widening morn," in the golden haze of a summer's noonday, the starry brilliancy of a winter's night, or soften in the moonlight, when the frame shows of clouds were tossed by the light breath of the wind, swept onward till the dim valley was disclosed sleeping beneath with the river winding through it like a silver, unbounded ribbon.

Mr. Merton entertained very few guests, but a year ago into their seclusion had appeared an old-time friend, a friend of happier days.

Mrs. Ashleigh had come to pass the summer in the valley below, had taken a quaint old manor house and was going to lead the most tranquil of lives a woman of society could.

She had met and known the Mertons, when they were spending a winter in Rome, immediately after their marriage. In the passing years she had not lost all knowledge of, nor interest in, the father and child.

Soon after her arrival in the neighborhood, she called upon them, bringing with her her son. A handsome man of twenty-seven or eight, he came into Pansy's life like a bright dream. Dear heart, she had known so little of young life and the intercourse it brings, and Earle Ashleigh was attractive. The stately figure, the clear-cut face, the frank blue eyes, the rich voice that could be very low and earnest, had each its charm to please.

The first glimpse of Pansy, Earle would never forget. She was stepping out from one of the long windows on the terrace and seemed framed in ivy. Her soft, violet dress floated around her like the mist of her own hills, her pure face was like a fair child; on one shoulder nestled a pet bird seemingly caught in her floating hair, and pecking at a trailing spray of blossoms she held up in one dainty hand.

Those summer days were very fair to little Pansy. There dwelt in them such a subtle charm. It was not often she could be lured to spend many hours away from home, but there were chance meetings, when she would be driving her ponies to and from the village, where she was quite a Lady Bountiful among the poorer ones with her gifts of fruit, flowers and bundles of needful things. She would often be overtaken by a cavalier figure returning from a day in the woods or tramping off fresh for a day's outing. Then there were frequent stops at Pansywold to leave a cluster of mountain blossoms, a bright bird's wing, a rare fern, and yet again an evening call, to bring some new song or only to see if the heat of the valley had risen to their height.

Into Pansy's cheek came a rich glow never seen before; some bright flower, Earle said was made for such pure pale faces, would be twisted with the knot of pansies now. Unconsciously, but surely, the untried girlish heart was learning a sweet new lesson.

Earle hardly realized her deepening interest, for he had been so accustomed to girls, and seeing sweet, winsome faces and ways. In the late summer, among his mother's few guests, there came one to whom his heart owed much allegiance. First at church Pansy saw the exquisite face, and that glance struck her as if a perfume was blown from some flower heavy with sweetness, such rare beauty in this, and she had almost thought her face was fair, to him. Mrs. Ashleigh, calling, spoke of her tender interest in this beautiful, delicate child, of her hope of calling her by a sweet and dear name. She did not see the pallor of the child's face, the look of [illegible] in the great starry eyes.

Pansy's feeling [illegible] made she decided for not receiving Earle, when he came, either of whom he and his fair beauty would stop after a gay gallop over the mountain for a word with Mr. Merton and sweet little Miss Pansy.

The autumn time were deepening, the summer birds were all flitting and Earle's last memory of Pansy, was as he saw her standing in the village church one late afternoon. There was a baptism of one of Pansy's proteges, and her father had brought her there. How from the little figure looked above the dark velvet of her dress. Her pale face seemed like a snow-drop in purity. As she stood by the font, a passing ray of evening light" stole through the stained window, and the long golden gleam touched the bowed head and dazed the dark curls with sifted gold.

Two days later, after an autumn storm had abated, Earle went for a farewell call to Pansywold, and was informed by the gray-haired servant that Miss Pansy and Mr. Merton had left for New York and were to sail in a week for Europe.

Was her father taking her away "to brighter light and softer airs" for pleasure or health?

He thought, as he drove slowly down the mountain, of how people had spoken of the girl as fading like a flower. His mother too had mentioned lately, the frail delicacy of Pansy's beauty. He thought of the winsome face with a pang. It seemed to have gathered all its glory in the large eyes, and how pathetic their glance had grown of late.

"Could it be—? but no, he had been, in letter and in spirit, true to Geraldine.

* * * *

Eight years had gone by. They had mostly been spent in the far East by Earle and his fair wife. He had received an important appointment there soon after his marriage. Only a month ago they had returned to America, and business taking him to the vicinity of N———, he resolved to pass the night there, for the place brought back old memories of the sweet life he had once known in those surroundings.

During the second year of his residence abroad, he had seen, in a Paris paper, the notice of the death of Miss Merton, a young American, the age just Pansy's. The short obituary was replete with significance that hers was the short life ended.

Knowing her to be living in France at that time, he did not doubt the little tired heart was at rest.

Just before sunset he found himself on the well-remembered grounds. He must see the familiar scene that held at its happiest hour the gentle life.

Passing through the shrubbery by an unfrequented path, he came suddenly upon a low grave covered with ivy. Under the shadow of the leaning cross above rested a basket of fresh pansies.

His heart beat thick. He could not think of her here. He must see the place where he remembered her.

A few more steps and he stopped suddenly. Sheltered by a mass of greenery, on the borders of the terrace, there where the slanting shadows were falling and the long lances of light were glancing under the trees, were seated in quiet conversation, two gentlemen. One whose familiar face he knew as Mr. Merton, the other, a dark-haired man of noble presence, a stranger to him, but evidently on most enviable terms with the owner of the estate.

Just then a sweet ringing voice called out, "no trespass allowed on the children's hour, you must know," and there appeared to Earle's dazzled eyes—a vision, it seemed to him.

Crossing the terrace, a lovely golden-haired child clinging to her hand, was Pansy, blossomed into a fairer beauty than his thoughts could have pictured.

Her supple figure had gained height and kept its grace, the flower-like face was flushed with a rosy glow, and the [illegible] eyes flashed with joy and happiness, as the wee maiden at her side sprang with a cry of "Papa" into the outstretched arms of the younger man who, tossing the precious burden, turned with a gay laugh to Pansy, "Eh, bien, little wife, which child is to be granted most of the privileges of this favored hour?"

So Earle knew, now, that in no dark grave was lying the little form, but Pansy was reigning a happy daughter, wife and mother.

He would not intrude where such complete happiness would ill compare with his childless home, desolate in all its splendor, but turning, he sought the little ivy-covered mound again to learn who was the quiet sleeper he had fancied that he knew.

Bending to the cross he read—Florence Merton, died in Paris, 188—, aged 17 years—.

It was the grave of a young cousin of whom Pansy had told him in the bygone time, she was hoping to have reside with her after her education was finished abroad.

It was at Florence's bedside during the long weeks of her illness, that Pansy met the noble physician and man, who later taught her the meaning, in all its fullness and completeness, of a love that knew no "unfaith," that trusted "all in all."

The mouthpiece of the telephone may be perfectly respectable, but there are a great many things said against it.

An Inland Sea of Considerable Magnitude Far to the West of Albert Nyanza.

The existence of another equatorial lake in central Africa, far to the west of Albert Nyanza, rumors of which have reached Europe from time to time since Sir Samuel Baker's first journey, is again reported. Mr. F. Lupton, governor of the Egyptian province of Bahr-el-Ghazel, writes from his station, Deboh Silen, on the 27th of July, to the effect that Rafai Aga, a servant of his, on his return from an expedition toward the Welle told him that he and some of the members of the expedition had seen a great lake in the country of the Barboa, a powerful armed tribe, clothed with a coarse grass cloth, of which Mr. Lupton sends a specimen in his letter. Mr. Lupton gathered that the position of the lake was to about [illegible] degrees of latitude north and longitude 29 degrees east, and that it was quite as large as Victoria Nyanza—[illegible] across the lake is large open boats, usually [illegible] three days, and they obtain from the people living on the western side (their own country), being east of the lake, articles of European manufacture, such as blue beads and brass wire. Mr. Lupton adds Rafai Aga's own account of his route to the lake. Started from Deboh Bekeer, marched six days southwest to Zerinda Doulen, then four days south-southwest to Bengler; four days southwest to Zerina Wurrundema; six days southwest by west to the Bahr-Makwar, which he crossed, after waiting several very large islands inhabited by a people who call themselves Bazango. The Makwar is called by the Arabs Bahr-el-Warshal, and joins the Welle, but is a much larger stream, both flow in a west-southwest direction. After crossing the Makwar Rafai marched ten days south-southwest and reached the house of the sultan of Barboa, by whom he was well received. The lake is situated four days march to the southwest of the sultan's residence. Mr. Lupton concludes by saying: "I feel I should not be doing right in keeping dark this information, which, when looked into by competent persons, may throw some light on the famous Congo and Welle rivers. I believe that the Welle flows into the lake discovered by Rafai Aga and that the stream which is said to flow out of the lake probably joins the Congo." Mr. Lupton is engaged in preparing a map of his province and was about to start in a few days on a journey to a country called Umbangh, some fifteen days' march to the west of Deboh Silen.

For the Family Scrap Book.

A little borax in the water cleanses ivory and celluloid hair brushes.

In washing muslins and lawns, put a little pulverized borax into the water, and use but little soap.

A tough piece of meat can be made tender by letting it cook for several hours in water at simmering heat.

The quality and juices of meats are far better preserved if the meat is wiped with a towel instead of washed.

In purchasing honey avoid that which has dark specks, as they destroy the flavor of any comb in which they are found.

To clean diamonds nicely, wash in soap-suds, rinse in alcohol and dry in sawdust; then brush with a soft brush, and polish with fine tissue paper.

An excellent shampoo is made of salts of tartar, white castile soap, bay rum and lukewarm water. The salts will remove all dandruff, the soap will soften the hair and clean it thoroughly, and bay rum will prevent taking cold.

To wash white flannels without shrinking them, make a good suds of boiling water, and add a tablespoonful of aqua ammonia, and when scalding hot pour over the flannel. Do not rub on a board, but if convenient use a pounder. Rinse in hot water and wring as dry as possible and hang in the hot sun to dry.

To extract ink from cotton, silk or woolen goods, dip the spots in spirits of turpentine, and let it remain for several hours; then rub thoroughly between the hands, and it will all disappear without changing either the color or texture of the fabric.

To wash lace make a soap-suds of white castile soap and soft water, and while cold dip the lace in and put on the stove to boil. Let it remain until the lace looks clean. Do not rub. After boiling sufficiently rinse thoroughly in clear, cold water and then dry. When perfectly dry, wet it in milk and let it dry again; then dampen and stitch it on a flannel cloth, and put over it a piece of damp flannel. Steam dry with a hot flat-iron and then pull out.

Palace Car Porters' Earnings.

A Pullman car porter has been telling a St. Louis reporter about the earnings of the employes on those cars. Drummers are liberal, young married men are good, women are very bad, millionaires worst. "I had a sad illustration of that a couple of weeks ago. Mr. Gillette, a millionaire mine owner (traveling with Bonanza Mackey), gave me $1. He said, with a terrible stutter, 'It was all the ch-ch-ange he had.' It was a terrible blow, but I went in and got Mr. Mackey out for his brush. He fumbled around among a lot of keys and finally fished out 50 cents! By jinks! I was mad, but I couldn't say anything. It's so with most rich men. There's Governor Tabor; he's about as good as most of 'em, but he never gives me more than $1. There's Senator Jones; he went to Deming once with me and gave me $5. On the other hand, Senator Fair, who is fifty times richer than Jones, they say, came up once, and he gave me $1. He was nice about it, though—spoke so kind, and told me not to spend my money foolishly. Politicians, when they get money, are mighty good. There's Dorsey, the star route man. When he goes down to his ranch he always gives me a handful of silver—don't stop to count it." The worst of all are old ladies who want bags and parcels carried, but never give aught but thanks; in those, however, they are usually generous.

Josh Billings says: "Whenever I find a real handsome woman engaged in the wimmin's right bizziness, then I am goin' to take mi hat under mi arm and jine the procession."

The Age of the Earth.

"Am Brudder Steph'n Johnson in de hall dis evenin'?" asked the President as he arose and looked up and down the aisles.

"Yes, Sah."

"Den he will please step to the front."

Brother Johnson appeared to labor under the impression that a medal was about to be presented to him for having the longest beds of any colored man in America, and his face wore a broad grin as he stood at the desk.

"Stepp'd Johnson!" said Brother Gardner in his most solemn tones. "I was in the back room of a grocery the other night to bargain for ten bushels of taters, an' I heard your voice as you came in to order 10 pounds of buckwheat flour, an' to remark that rough-de woman was ravin' crazy wid de hoodoo."

"Yes, sah, dat was me."

"De man Cincinnati hole dropped in an' it were five minutes fo' your [illegible] of the age of the earth."

"He doesn't know nuffin, sah!"

"You called him a fool."

"An' he called me a liar."

"You said he was a [illegible]."

"An' he said I was a [illegible]."

"I heard it all, Brudder Johnson, an' now I want to talk to you a little. In de fust place, what do you know 'bout the age of de world?"

"I—I—well, sah, what does the old man Climax know 'bout it?"

"Dat's it—what do enther one of you know 'bout it? Nuffin—nuffin' tall. Dat's where de trubble comes in. Two men will dispute harder over what dey doan' know dan ober sciens facks. De worst enemy I eber had was a man who got mad at me bekase I wouldn't believe in ghosts. What we doan' know we often try to make up for in argyment. What we lack in argyment we try to make up for in hoss. It am easier to call a man a fool dan to produce facks and figures to convince him that he am in de wrong. It am safer to call an old man a liar dan to wink at a young man's wife. Let me say to you:

"What you believe in wid all yer heart may, arter all, be wrong.

"De man who draps argyment for epithet has no case.

"It am only de fairest-minded men who admit their ignorance of what dey doan' know.

"Abuse may silence a man, but it won't convince him.

"It am only de bigot who prides himself on his cast-iron opinyuns.

"It am only de fool who believes his sermons am true bekase he asserts em.

"Now, Brudder Johnson, you drap back to yer bench an' sot down an' stay sot, an' de nex' time you h'ar somebody boldly announce dat dis world am fifty millions y'ars old you pick up your buckwheat flour an' walk home wid de reflekshun dat it wouldn't establish de facks in de case if you and him war' to gouge an' bite an' chaw till dey wasn't a rod of sidewalk left in Gardnerville."

Why He Paid.

A certain Michigander says the Free Press who had long succeeded in dodging a certain creditor, was a few weeks ago cornered in the office of a mutual friend, and the creditor began:

"Sir! you have owed me $25 for a year past, and now I want to know what you are going to do about it?"

"Well, I'll think it over."

"There will be no thinking it over, my friend. If you don't pay me I'll sue you."

"You will?"

"I will, sir!"

"Then you'll be certain to get a judgment. The party which brings the suit always gets the verdict before a justice. Knowing this, you will take advantage of me?"

"I will."

"Very well. Now, then, I deny that I owe you a dollar."

"You do?"

"I do, sir, but in case you want to borrow $25 of me for a week here it is."

"I don't care whether you call it paying or lending, so long as I get my money," replied the creditor, and he made out a receipt in full and took the money.

At the end of the week he was asked to return the loan, but laughed at the absurdity of the request. Suit was begun to recover it, the mutual friend used as a witness, and the plaintiff received judgment in his favor and had a clean receipt to show for the debt.

An Aboriginal Toilet.

There was a little game picture in aboriginal colors on the sidewalk of C street this afternoon, says the Virginia Chronicle, that nobody but a reporter noticed. An Indian mother, in her dirty red and black shoulder-shawl and calico dress, was kneeling on the planks buttoning a pair of cast-off blue overalls on her ten-year-old son. She smiled with maternal pride at the improvement in the appearance of the youngster as the buttons were put in place. The old paternal buck, in the remains of a black dress coat, and sporting a plug hat with a feather in it, stood off and surveyed the effect critically, with head one side and eyes half closed. The boy grinned with sheepish embarrassment at being the object of so much attention, but as he lolled his head he took gratified downward observations of the blue overalls—which some laborer had thrown away, and which had been brought to the proper length for the new wearer by the easy means of chopping off the legs at the knees.

Dogs, under favorable conditions, live to an age much beyond that which is usually assigned to them. Mr. R. Cordiner, of Oxford, England, knows a black retriever aged 31, and there is no doubt that others are acquainted, with like aged individuals of the canine species.

The growers of the fine flowers which stock the New York Winter market are most of them well-educated Scotchmen or Englishmen, many of whom have brought their business to a success financially.

The tight-trousers era has developed such a tremendous crop of thin-legged young men that it is almost impossible to believe that any other kind is raised in this country.

Left to His Conscience

During the past summer a number of Baptists in a certain village in New York state entered upon the work of erecting a church edifice. One day when old farmer Gibby was in town he was informed of the project and asked to come down with a handsome subscription. "How much do you expect me to sign?" he asked as he looked over the subscription papers. "We will leave it entirely to your conscience," was the reply. The old gentleman wiped off his specs, put on his spectacles, and having borrowed a pencil, pulled down for 50 cents. Many people observed the man who had put down the paper. "Well, brother Gibby, I must say that you have a mighty easy conscience," [illegible] said one of his [illegible] friends. "It may look that way to you," calmly replied the man, "but when I can give 50 cents and keep in the Master's service by doing so, I am not the man to risk the risk of being called a [illegible]."

Indianapolis, Ind.

Mr. A. Kiefer—Dear Sir: My wife has for several years been a great sufferer from periodical attacks of Neuralgia in the head. Several of the most eminent physicians had been called upon to treat her but they could only give temporary relief.

About two years ago she commenced using the Taxarine, and I am gratified to say since then she has had no recurrence of those terrible pains. I attribute her restoration to health entirely to the use of Taxarine, and in conclusion would say to all who suffer that excrutiating of all pains to give Taxarine a trial. Yours etc. I. Ship.

TO THE AFFLICTED.

Since the introduction of Kellogg's Columbian Oil it has made more permanent cures and given better satisfaction in Kidney Complaints and Rheumatism than any known remedy. Relief Found at Last.

Carmel, Ind.

A. Kiefer—Dear Sir: I was afflicted with derangement of the Liver, which caused a general derangement of my whole system. Had three-day ague for two years, from which I found no relief until induced to try your Taraxine, which I am happy to say affected a cure. I am enjoying fine health and have had no ague for over one year. Yours, etc., John Jeffries.

Jealousy.

Some poet has said that "All torments of the damned we find is only thee, Oh, Jealousy, thou tyrant of the mind." This is grandly sweeping and magnificently inaccurate. Any sufferer from Indigestion knows to the contrary. Indigestion, the villian of the tragedy played upon the gastric juices of the stomach can, and does double discount the horrors of jealousy. Jealousy is often an attendant upon the later, and when indigestion is removed, this jaundiced companion of a deranged liver flies. Taraxine is the best known remedy extant for impaired digestion, deranged liver, and diseases of the bowels and kidneys.

A building near the Postoffice in Phœnix, A. T., has been injured in a singular way. A gopher, in tunneling, ran his tunnel into the ditch. The water running through this, under the house, caused the foundation to settle several inches, and had not the cause been discovered the house would shortly have tumbled into the street.

Twenty-three years ago Stillman Pond, of Intavia, N. Y., sold a horse to a farmer in a neighboring town for $125. The farmer did not pay, and the law was resorted to. A down town East paper says that a hotel porter in Portland, Me., "who invariably gets 25 cents for blacking a pair of boots," answered a request for a "shine" the other afternoon with: "Well, I guess to-morrow morning I'll black them; I've blacked enough boots to-day." The prominent and law-abiding citizens of Denver, tired of the looseness of the laws of the Centennial State, have organized a law and order society, for the purpose of ascertaining if there are any laws in the state; if there are laws, to have them enforced; and, if there are no laws, to bring the State Legislature to a point where it will enact laws.

Hanlan's Home.

Hanlan, the champion oarsman of the world, was born in Toronto, Canada, and won his first amateur race on Toronto Bay. Afterwards he made his name famous by his great victory at the Centennial in 1876. Since then he has defeated every oarsman of prominence, not only in this country, but from the antipodes of Australia to the shores of Great Britain, and he now patiently waits for the next man who is to attempt to make him lower his standard of victory, which has been so long waving in triumph. Any one taking even a cursory glance at Hanlan, and who notes his clear, bright eye, his pure skin and well-knit frame, would be convinced that purity of blood and robust health were his birthright, hence the basis of his strength and endurance. Purity of blood is unquestionably the seat of life and health, and to obtain it and keep it, nothing in the world can compare to Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mr. J. Marsh, Bank of Toronto, Ont., writes: "Biliousness and dyspepsia seem to have grown up with me; having been a sufferer for years, I have tried many remedies, but with no lasting result until I used your Burdock Blood Bitters. They have been truly a blessing to me, and I cannot speak too highly of them."

C. Blacket Robinson, proprietor of the Canada Presbyterian, Toronto, Ont., writes: For several years I have suffered greatly from oft-recurring bilious headaches. I used your Burdock Blood Bitters with the happiest results, and I now feel myself better in health than for years past. I cheerfully recognize the sterling character of your preparation.

A Baptist Minister's Experience.

I am a Baptist Minister, and before I even thought of being a clergyman, I graduated in medicine, but left a lucrative practice for my present profession, forty years ago. I was for many years a sufferer from quinsy; Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured me. I was also troubled with hoaseness, and Thomas' Eclectric Oil always relieved me. My wife and child had diphtheria and Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured them, and if taken in time it will cure seven times out of ten. I am confident it is a cure for the most obstinate cold or cough, and if any one will take a small teaspoon and half it with the Oil, and then place the end of the spoon in one nostril and draw the Oil out of the spoon into the head by sniffling as hard as they can, until the Oil falls over into the throat, and practice that twice a week, I don't care how offensive their head may be, it will clean it out and cure their catarrh. For deafness and earache it has done wonders to my certain knowledge. It is the only medicine dubbed patent medicine that I have ever felt like recommending, and I am very anxious to see it in every place, for I tell you that I would not be without it in my house for any consideration. I am now suffering with a pain like rheumatism in my right limb, and nothing relieves me like Thomas' Eclectric Oil.

Ely's Cream Balm has completely cured me of Catarrh, of which I have been afflicted over ten years, after trying almost every remedy recommended, none having proved so effective or thorough. S. J. Aiken, Wholesale Dealer in Boots and Shoes, 143 Federal St. Boston, Mass.

Ely's Cream Balm is the best remedy I have ever sold for the cure of Catarrh, Hay Fever, Cold in the Head, &c. It effects a cure in almost every case, and gives relief immediately. C. E. Holmes, Druggist, Ann Arbor, M.

Suffering itself does not less afflict the senses than the fear of suffering.

Age brings with it the infirmities of the body. Our bodies need repairing and strengthening. Old persons are more or less subject to diseases of the Kidneys and urinary organs, and in these cases the strengthening and curative properties of Kellogg's Columbian Oil are sure. Its use stimulates the Kidneys and bladder, and creates natural action, as in youth. Every dose will give strength and vigor to these debilitated organs.

Cure For Whooping Cough.

J. H. Post, Ag't Charter Oak Life Ins. Co., New Haven, Conn., Nov. 18, 1879, says: My children were all seriously troubled with the Whooping Cough. We treated them with regularly prescribed medicines, with Homeopathic Specifics, &c., with but little or no relief until we gave them Coe's Cough Balsam, which immediately restored them to health.

A Plain Man's Testimony.

Dr. Tanner's German Ointment cures many things besides sores, wounds and bruises. As a remedy for piles it is one of the best things ever used. John K. Hutchinson, Tuskaloosa, Ala., writes: "I have suffered with the Piles for many years and have tried almost all the remedies now in use and I can truly say that there is none that will compare with Tanner's German Ointment, as it softens the tumors and takes the pain out."

DOWNS' ELIXIR.

N. H. DOWNS' Vegetable Balsamic ELIXIR

This valuable medicine is purely vegetable: the discovery of which was the result of many years' close study, in order to discover the cause, the symptoms, and the cure—viz: Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Pleurisy, Hoarseness, Influenza, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and every species of oppression of the Chest and Lungs. In all cases where this Elixir has been duly administered its efficacy has been invariably manifested, convincing the most incredulous that is not incurable, if properly attended to.—Consumption, at its commencement, is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the Lungs; then an inflamation, when the cough is more observable, but rather dry; then becomes local fever and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and chills more common. This Elixir in curing the above complaints, operates so as to remove all morbid irritations and inflamation from the lungs to the surface, and finally expel them from the system. It facilitates expectoration.

It heals the ulcerated surfaces

and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy. It supports the strength and at the same time reduces the fever. It is free from strong opiate and astringent articles, which are of so drying a nature as to be in great danger of destroying the patient; whereas this medicine never dries or stops the cough, but, by removing the cause, generally destroys the hectic before the cough is entirely gone. Consequently, when the cough is cured the patient is well. Send address for pamphlet giving full directions for cure of pulmonary diseases. Price 35 cts., 50 cts., and $1.00 per bottle.

PATENTS

CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT?

Send a rough sketch or if you can a model of your invention to GEORGE E. LEMON, Washington, D. C., and a Preliminary Examination will be made of all United States patents of the same class of inventions and you will be advised whether or not a patent can be obtained.

FOR THIS PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION NO CHARGE IS MADE.

What will a Patent Cost?

If you are advised that your invention is patentable, send $20 to pay Government Office fees of $15, and $5 for the drawing required by the Government. This is all the cost for the usual work of obtaining a patent, unless it be a Design, when the Government fee is $10 instead of $15. When the patent is received, if you desire to go no further in the matter, you can do so and have no more to pay. If you decide to go on and have your application prosecuted, we charge no more than other reputable attorneys, and our fee is payable only when we secure a patent or not and by a majority of the examiners you decide a Patent can be obtained. An attorney whose fee depends on his success in obtaining a Patent will not advise you that your invention is patentable unless it really is patentable, for his judgment counts for nothing in determining his fee. In most cases, you can rely on the advice given by a preliminary examination. In Design Patents and the Registration of Labels, Trade Marks and Reissues we charge the same as other reputable attorneys. Rejected, Abandoned, or Forfeited Cases. Very often valuable inventions are saved in these classes of cases. If you have undertaken to secure your own patent and failed, a skillful handling of the case may lead to success. Send me a written request addressed to the Commissioner of Patents that he reconsider your case, giving your name, and the title of the invention and about the date of filing your application. An examination and report will cost you nothing. Searches made for title of inventions, in fact any information relating to Patents promptly furnished. Copies of Patents by mail, the regular Government rates, 25c. each. Remember that I have been in successful practice since 1865 and you therefore reap the benefits of experience, besides references can be given to actual clients in almost every county in the U. S. Pamphlet relating to Patents free upon request.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 18, 1883.

Where was Mrs. Langtry when the Newhall House took fire?

The Star route trial keeps the wind moving, but its rate is about that of a funeral procession.

As matters now stand Senator Ferry's election is about as uncertain as next summer's peach crop.

Jay Gould keeps on adding to his railroads. His last acquisition is a line in the Illinois Central.

Will Tom Ferry get there? This is the absorbing question now, and it is something which no fellow can find out.

Representative Kirby of this county has introduced a bill in the legislature to prohibit members from receiving of railroad companies from civil passes.

No disinterested person can read over the list of the Governor's appointments without coming to the conclusion that he has a clear head and a steady hand.

It is better to be born lucky than rich. Even Tom Thumb was a guest at the Newhall House on the evening of the fire, but he was rescued by a policeman unharmed.

"Hubbell" is making trouble. Although his own district is burst he proposes to get over the Ferry in some way even if he has to mount a wheelbarrow of water through on foot.

Some of the urchins do not take kindly to Santa Claus. Those who expected him to get an office and have failed to get it are inclined to criticise the appointing power.

More stringent laws than those now in force should be enacted by the legislature to compel owners of hotels or public halls and other buildings of a similar character to render escape from them more easy in case of fire.

Venders of patent fire escapes ought to reap a harvest now. The awful holocaust in Milwaukee and the narrow escape from a similar fate of the Planters Hotel in St. Louis is directing attention to the dangerous condition of many large hotels and factories.

News of another terrible fire fatality comes from Berdyschefl, Russia—A circus building burned in that town last Saturday and over 150 persons perished. The fire broke out on the stage. The audience of about 800 rushed to the front door which was pushed shut as it opened inwards. A rush was made for two side doors both of which were nailed up.

The first ballot for U. S. Senator, which was taken last Tuesday resulted as follows: T. W. Ferry received 43 votes, Byron M. Stout received 10 votes and 19 votes were scattered among fourteen different candidates. The 22 scattering votes were cast by anti Ferry Republicans. It is claimed that all of them have pledged themselves never to vote for Ferry under any circumstances.

The post office department is now self-sustaining, the receipts being equal to the expenditures. Next year it is the opinion of the department that the two cent letter postage will be reduced. The experiment of postal cards proved so satisfactory that their use will probably be abandoned and the cost rate for sealed letters would be entirely prohibitory. In fact it is a question whether the revenue under a two cent rate will not be greater than it is now.

Dr. Geo. Hoover of this representative district, has introduced a bill in the House providing that from and after July 1, 1886, all practitioners of medicine in this state shall be either graduates of some regulary established college of medicine or a student practicing under the guidance of a preceptor, or that such physician shall have practiced medicine for ten years. His bill is entitled "A bill to promote the public health," and it includes a provision for a return of births and deaths and of dangerous diseases. This bill will be considered by the joint committee on public health, and it is likely that it will be consolidated with one now in the senate, and be backed by the state board of health.

STATE FREE TRADE LEAGUE.

On Thursday last a meeting was held in Detroit under the auspices of the Detroit Free Trade League, for the purpose of forming a state organization. Wm. G. Brownlee, of Detroit was elected President, and E. D. Mann of Adrian was chosen Secretary. Thos. G. Sherman of Brooklyn, N. Y., delivered a lengthy and exhaustive address, and the meeting adopted the following declaration of principles:

The Free Traders of Michigan in convention assembled, declare the following to be their articles of belief and the purposes at which they aim.

1. A protective tariff, like slavery, is a relic of a barbarous age. To buy in the cheapest and sell in the dearest market is the inalienable right of every man. The only tariff tax imposts which should ever be tolerated by a free people, is a tariff for revenue.

2. The enormous burden now borne by the American people is the direct, unequal and iniquitous system of taxation called a protective tariff. It is nothing more nor less than a bonus given to a privileged class of manufacturers, to pay which bonus the food, clothing and shelter of the vast majority are unjustly taxed.

3. An intelligent revenue reform in the direction of free trade would actually benefit a large majority of manufacturers by widening the markets and reducing the cost of materials.

4. The protective tax oppresses the farmer and laborer, destroys our merchant marine, breeds and enriches monopolies and impoverishes the poor. Our present tariff, leading as it does to lobbying and extravagance, is one great cause of official corruption. While we are earnestly in favor of a radical reform of the civil service, we believe that the abolition of the protective features of our tariff will work a great practical improvement in that direction.

We therefore demand that every impediment to American commerce shall be removed, and that the reduction of existing import duties shall be immediately commenced and steadily continued until every so-called protective feature is eliminated.

THE GIGANTIC PENSION SWINDLE.

Cincinnati News Washington special: It is rumored to-night that commissioner of pensions Dudley will soon be made to walk back to the banks of the Wabash with his check to date for valuable services rendered in his pocket. The Board of Managers of the National Home, that meet here on the 9th, are understood to be opposed to the further continuance in office of a man who is not bold enough to say in his report what everybody knows to be the truth, that the pension list no longer represents those who were disabled in the service, but is made the basis upon which electioneering funds are raised to carry doubtful states. The fact that the pension list grows larger as we leave the period of war behind us is the cause of just alarm, and the determination of the board seems to be to ask congress to protect the soldiers against the rapacity of the claim agent. It is urged against further appropriation for pensions, bills for which are now pending, that there is a ring of pension agents, whose business it is to create one-armed and one-legged soldiers sufficient to defend the country against invasion if they had two arms and two legs. The vision of the average citizen is beginning to perceive that the Pension Bureau is a gigantic swindle, and has been used in the past, by collusion between commissioners and pension agents, as an instrument to elect favorites to congress upon the subsidies given under false oaths to men who never smelled the battle, even from afar. It is a larger steal than the star route plunder, but is protected by laws that enable the false pensioner, as well as the false pension commissioner and pension agents, to shield crime against the people under the cloak of official duty.

SPECTACLES SCIENTIFICALLY FITTED.

Visit by B. Mincer, the Celebrated Optician at Sink's Hotel.

B. Mincer, the celebrated optician, who has been doing a large business at Adrian for a number of weeks, having testimonials from the best citizens, will be at Sink's hotel next Monday, where Tecumseh people who wish spectacles scientifically fitted to the eye can consult him.

He will be in Clinton at the hotel Tuesday.

TESTIMONIALS.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of B. Mincer, the optician, for the past 3 months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to any one in need of good glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.

DANIEL TODD, M.D.

TO WHOM INTERESTED:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my eyesight without gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes with which I am so well pleased that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by the knowledge of the useful organs to which must be added extensive experience. He also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants. Poor glasses are an abomination.

C. A. BAKER, M.D.

I have investigated the works of Mr. B. Mincer, optician, and have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles.

At a recent drawing one person trod bravely up, drew a card and gazed at it in a dazed sort of way.—His friends looked over his shoulder and read in large figures, "Mrs. ——, 200 pounds." He isn't going to another.

Israel Pennington of Macon, one of the oldest settlers of that township died yesterday afternoon. He has been in feeble health for some two or three years, during which time he has been gradually failing, until finally the death summons has been answered. The deceased came to Michigan in 1830 and located 240 acres in the town of Dover. He afterwards moved to Macon, where he has since resided. He leaves a handsome property as the result of a life of industry and economy, also a widow and four children to mourn his departure. The funeral services will be held to-morrow, Friday, at eleven o'clock A. M. A fitting obituary notice will appear in these columns next week.

SOMETHING WORTH KNOWING.

The best and most successful mills now days are the Roller Mills. The corrugated rolls make a whiter and a stronger flour than the mill stone. The rolls granulate the flour evenly and do not salve and destroy the life of portion of it as is done by the old system. Hundreds have found this to be true by using Comfort's Roller Flour. Farmers go twenty, and even twenty-five miles to Comfort's Roller Mills to exchange their good wheat for Comfort's Roller Flour. Comfort pays the very highest market price for good sound wheat. Green and unsound wheat he does not want at any price. Cannot use it. The careful selection of sound wheat and the roller system of milling, with many other improvements which he has adopted, is what makes Comfort's flour so popular.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Agricultural Society of Lenawee county will be held, according to the constitution, on the last Friday of January, which will be this year the 26th.

The society was fairly successful at its last fair, and there will be some funds left after all demands are paid. This meeting will be a very important one, aside from the election of officers for 1883. It is earnestly hoped that every person who is a member will be present and take part in the meeting. Every one who was an exhibitor and bought a membership ticket last fall, is entitled to a vote at the annual meeting, and should be present. The meeting will convene at 10 A. M.—There is a large amount of work to do, and promptness in attendance is important.

S. H. MANN, Sec.

THE NEXT COUNTY FAIR.

A meeting will be held at the Opera House in this village to-morrow evening, Jan. 19th, at seven o'clock, sharp, to canvass the fair question and to take the necessary steps to secure the holding of the Lenawee County Fair in Tecumseh the coming season. The lease of Lawrence Park in Adrian, where the County Fair has been held since the re-organization of the society, has expired, and new grounds must be leased or purchased if the fair shall be held at Adrian. We have a fine race track now just outside of the corporation where suitable buildings could be erected at a moderate expense that would accommodate both exhibitors and the public generally. The new railroad will be in full running order before the time for holding the fair, which will place us within easy reach of all parts of the county. There is no reason why Tecumseh could not sustain a splendid fair, and with proper concert of action on the part of the village and the farmers of adjoining towns the desired object can certainly be accomplished. We hope to see a good attendance at the meeting to-morrow evening and the matter given in charge of men who mean business.

A SCRAP OF HISTORY.

Under the "State Items" in the Post and Tribune of Jan. 4th, we find the following:

The Early Survey of Michigan.

TO THE ED. OF POST & TRIB.:

In a recent number of your paper Mr. Geo. S. Frost, in his historical address, is represented as saying that Mr. Trowbridge copied a list of the names of the white inhabitants of the territory for the census of 1820, and after recounting the places of settlement which were then over that vast country says: "The public surveys had not yet extended even into this peninsula." This is an error, as the linear surveys of that date had occupied a large area of the southern portion of the territory: parts of Oakland and Macomb counties having been surveyed as early as 1817 and 1818.

GEO. H. CANNON,
Dept. Surveyor U. S. Lands.
Washington, D. C. Dec. 25th, '82.

Mr. Chas. Culbertson, stepped into our sanctum last Tuesday, pointed out the above extract in the Post and Tribune, and informed us that he could relate a circumstance which corroborated fully the statement of Geo. H. Cannon. Of course we invited Mr. Culbertson to be seated and relate his story:

"About thirty years ago when I was working out my road tax one spring, in company with Olmstead Hough, once sheriff of this county, he pointed out to me the stump of a tree, which stood near the corner of section 23, which had been blazed by the surveyors, and had the date 1817 cut in the bark. Mr. Hough had lived on that farm from the earliest settlement, knew the whole section of country, and his memory could not be questioned on a matter of that kind. I never saw the tree myself, as it had been burned or cut up for fuel before this conversation took place, but the stump stood there at the time and stands there to-day in a fence corner, as a witness to the truth of Sheriff Hough's statement. Upon seeing this item in the Post and Tribune, the entire circumstance and talk came back to my mind as distinctly as though it had occurred only yesterday. There can be no doubt whatever of the fact that the U. S. surveyors made their notes in this township in the year 1817."

As a matter of general rather than local interest Mr. Culbertson further showed us an extract from the history of Livingston county, N. Y., written by L. L. Doty who was private secretary to Gov. Seymour, and an acquaintance of Mr. Culbertson's. In this history is recorded the fact that one Oliver Phelps opened at Canandaigua in 1789, the first regular land office for the sale of unoccupied lands to settlers ever established in America, and the system he adopted for the survey of his lands by townships and ranges, was, with slight modifications, adopted by the government for the survey of all the new lands in the U. S. These ranges were six miles in width, running north and south. The ranges in turn were subdivided by parallel lines six miles apart, running east and west, denominated townships, which were numbered from south to north. The latter were subdivided into lots of 160 acres each for actual settlers. And thus is shown the origin of the present system of U. S. surveys.

OLD SAM MOVES ON.

Upon a dull, gloomy morning in the first week of November last, a tramp printer meandered into the HERALD office and asked for work. As we happened to be rushed with job work at the time, a newspaper case was assigned to him, and within five minutes after he made known his wishes he was sticking type. The man was about six feet tall, near sixty years of age and would tip the scales, at fully two hundred pounds. We called him "Old Sam." He probably had a surname, but we never heard it, and during his ten week's sojourn in the office that was the only name applied to him. The boys greeted him with "Old Sam," the girls referred to him as "Old Sam," his name was entered upon the time book and ledger as "Old Sam," and our business patrons who knew him at all, knew him simply as "Old Sam." He was a quiet man of good habits and could do about two-thirds of an ordinary day's work at plain composition, and his wages were gauged accordingly.

During his brief term of service with the HERALD we learned something of his history. He had worked at the case over forty years and had been a tramp printer all his life. He had visited every state in the Union and a portion of the western territories. He had worked in Chicago when that city was a frontier village. He had stuck type in the "Hub of the universe" in Gotham, in the city of brotherly love, and in the National Capital. He had seen service in the largest Eastern printing offices and also in pioneer offices on the Western prairies, in which the entire outfit consisted of two cases of long primer and a Washington hand press. He had breathed the zero air of the Penobscot, and wrestled with malaria amid the alligator swamps of Louisiana. Old Virginia tobacco was a familiar sight to his eyes, he had viewed the gigantic wheat fields of Minnesota and heard the click of the type within a stone's throw of the El Dorado mines in California. He called no place his home and had no family friends that we could learn, but he stuck to his case, set clean proof, ate big dinners, drank no whiskey, smoked a cob pipe, and earned his wages faithfully.

"Yes," said old Sam one day after dinner, while enjoying his pipe, "I have hooked considerable copy in my day. The clips and manuscripts which have run through my fingers would make a big cyclopædia, and a better one than most of the trash now sold under that name. My takes have taken in almost everything within the range of human knowledge. I set the account of the first railroad excursion from Albany to Schenectady. Old Cornelius Vanderbilt was a young man in the ferry business when I served as office devil, and A. T. Stewart was selling kid gloves in a room about ten by twenty on Broadway. Many is the item I have put in type about both of these old coons. I have set up the details of brilliant weddings in high life, and have pulled proofs of the most mournful deaths and appalling accidents. Astronomy, arithmetic, all the natural sciences, these fingers have dabbled with. I have been on paper, with the old "forty-niners" of California, and witnessed, in my mind's eye, Sam Patch's last leap. Jingle for the little folks, base ball and boating for the boys, gossip for the old maids, fashion notes for the maidens, recipes for the cook, heavy politics for the small politician, stocks and bonds for the wall street banker, peas and potatoes for the farmer, butter and eggs for the housewife—all these I have strung into line by the click, click of the type. But I must move on soon. This world is a fleeting show. Every man has a destiny to fulfill, and Old Sam must meet his."

Last Monday morning he came to the office at the usual hour and informed the foreman that he wished to hang out part of the forenoon. He has not been seen since. Upon inquiry at his boarding place we learned that he set out that morning with three shirts on, two pairs of stockings, two vests and two coats. "I never carry a bundle," said he, "for people will think I am a tramp." Ten weeks was a lengthy term of service for Old Sam in one office. But he has only a few more years to tramp. His eye is already growing dim and his hand begins to tremble. He will soon set his last take, the clods of the valley will cover his form, and Old Sam's soul will move on.

The following petition to the legislature is being extensively circulated throughout the State. It ought to find plenty of signers:

Believing that prevention through education of the people, is the anti dote for the vice of intemperance, we the undersigned citizens respectfully petition our legislature now in session to enact laws requiring instruction in the nature of alcohol, and its effects upon the human tissue, brain and character, to be given in all schools supported by public money, or under state control.

We have received a copy of the American Newspaper Annual for 1882, published by N. W. Ayer & Son, of Philadelphia. This is certainly the best catalogue of newspapers ever published in this country, and reflects great credit upon the enterprising firm who compiled the work.

THE CIRCUIT COURT.

The January term of the Circuit Court convened at Adrian last Tuesday, Judge Howell presiding. The call of the calendar was proceeded with in the forenoon, several persons were arraigned and pleaded, and some cases set down for trial.

C. A. Stacy asked that there be no peremptory call of civil cases until next week. After conference with the attorneys, the court granted Mr. Stacy's request and fixed the 24th inst, as the first date on which a peremptory call for civil cases would be made.

The criminal calendar was then passed to, and the case of Wm. Beach, for incest, was called. Beach had already been arraigned, and the prosecuting attorney announced himself as ready for trial to-morrow. Westermann Bros., for the defense, wanted an immediate trial.

In the case of Carrie July, for incest, the prosecution was ready for trial at once, and Westerman Bros., for the defense, were not quite ready.

The case of Wm. Smith, for the larceny of a watch at the Central hotel was met by the prosecuting attorney with the statement that he believed Smith intended to plead guilty. Jas. Helme, Jr., explained that he appeared for the prisoner and that he would not plead guilty.

In the case of Wm. Ross, who it will be remembered, is accused of the larceny of a horse from W. S. Wilson, of Adrian, the prosecuting attorney made a statement asking the discharge of the prisoner. He said that the more guilty offender in taking the horse from Wilson had escaped, that Ross had agreed to pay all costs, and had already returned the horse in question to Mr. Wilson, that he had carefully investigated the case, and thought that the nature of the circumstances, and the condition of the prisoner's family, would fully extenuate a release. The court, after considering the matter, allowed the prisoner's discharge, and after Mr. Bean, counsel for the defense, had paid the costs, a nolle pros. was entered.

Two charges of false pretenses against Samuel Nichols, were agreed not to be taken up before Jan. 30.

The case against Clement C. Cole for false pretenses, was allowed to stand until the 30th.

The case of the people against George Gareis, the murderer of Thomas O'Connelly, was then taken up, the prisoner being arraigned, and George Wagner interpreting the charge to him. Before he was allowed to plead, the court assigned Judge Stacy as counsel for the prisoner, and the case was put over till afternoon, in order to allow him to confer with his newly acquired client.

The case of the people vs. Chas. Hess, the Woodstock man who is accused of assault and battery, was also passed until afternoon.

The Western Farmers' Almanac published by John P. Morton & Co., of Louisville, Ky., has arrived. It is the best almanac for the farmer within our knowledge. The weather tables are something new and are as accurate as such tables can be made.—They would be a great help to any man in forecasting the weather. The almanac also contains many valuable articles pertaining to farm topics.

We have received an anonymous communication covering some obituary poetry. Our friends will please bear in mind that we print no anonymous letters and that our charge for obituary poetry is five cents a line.

A Husband and a Mule.

Not long since Wakefield Starkey, of Austin, while crossing the track of the International and Great Northern Railroad on a valuable mule, was struck by a locomotive and killed. The mule was also hurled into eternity. Wakefield Starkey, although a perfect gentleman on the street, was a perfect tyrant of the deepest dye. Without any provocation whatever he used to beat his wife and lock her up in the wardrobe; hence, when she heard of his death, it was not so much a cask of heavy bereavement as it was of mitigated affection. As the engineer of the locomotive was clearly to blame for the accident it was suggested to the widow that she bring suit for damages. She resolved to do so, and called at the office of the railway company. The proper official happened to be in. The widow had such a clear case against the company that it was deemed advisable to compromise the suit.

"Now, madam," said the official, after the widow had "brown back her veil" and stated her business, "we are willing to do what is fair in this matter. There is really no occasion to go to law. It is a delicate subject to discuss, so I think, without going into the merits of it, I will tender you a check for $5,000, and you will sign a paper releasing the company from all further demands."

The widow started, and asked: "How much?"

"I am authorized to pay you $5,000."

"I accept it," she said, very much agitated.

The check was handed over, the papers signed, and the widow walked out into the street in a bewildered frame of mind. As she cashed the check she said to herself, confidentially: "I didn't expect to get more than $500. I reckon that railroad fellow didn't know how old that mule was."

It never occurred to her that she had sustained any loss in the death of her husband. On the other hand, the railroad official said to one of the clerks: "The company was getting off dirt cheap. We usually have to pay $5,000 for running over husbands."

It did not occur to him that the widow had sustained any loss whatever in the death of the valuable mule.

What a striking illustration of the fact that different people look at the same thing in a different light.—Siftings.

How She Loved Him.

"How she must have loved him!"

As Myrtle Redingote spoke these words softly to George W. Simpson a blush of maiden modesty flamed for an instant across her pure young face, and disappeared silently behind the tiny pink ears, that stood like pygmy sentinels on a battlement of rose-tinted flesh, soft and warm, and with beautiful curves whose dimpled outlines would have made even an anchorite resign. George had been telling her that beautiful story of the Princess of olden times who, when her lover was stricken down by a poisoned arrow, knelt by his side, and with her own ruby lips drew from the wound the fatal element. When he had finished, the girl gave utterance to the words with which this chapter opens. And then, for an instant, silence fell between them.

George was the first to speak. "If I were wounded by a poisoned arrow, darling, would you emulate the example of the Princess?"

The girl's form shook with a sudden tremor, and her head fell upon his shirt front.

"I could not do it!" she sobbed through her tears.

"Why not?" asked George.

"Do not press me for an answer," replied the girl.

"But I must know," he says, in low, agonized tones.

"There," she murmurs, pressing him still more closely to her, "you are from Kentucky, and I do not care to catch the fever and ague."—Texas Siftings.

CAUSE FOR APPREHENSION.

Why Mysterious Physical Troubles Arouse Special Dread—A Professional Experience.

Few things give more pain than dread or apprehension. Most people are able to face apparent danger heroically, but the sudden and unexpected coming of some indefinite calamity very naturally strikes terror to even the bravest. For this reason lightning and tornadoes are considered terrible, their coming and going are so sudden, unannounced and unknown. For this same reason an unknown disease, some poison in the blood, some malady that is gradually undermining the life, is specially dreaded by all thinking people. And, indeed, there are good reasons for such dread, for modern science has discovered that some virulent disorders show the least signs in their beginnings, while they have the worst possible symptoms. We know of many persons who have dull and uncertain pains in various portions of the body, who are unnaturally tired one day, and apparently well the next, who have an enormous appetite at times, and a loathing of food soon thereafter. Such persons are really in a dangerous condition even though they may not realize it. The following statement of a most prominent physician, who has had unusual opportunities for investigation, is of so striking and important a nature that it will be read with interest by all:

MESSRS. EDITORS: I have, during my professional career of many years practice, treated a large number of various disorders, of which, perhaps, none have given me more trouble than the mysterious disease known as acute nephritis, and while it may seem strange, it is, nevertheless, true, that the physician is generally greatly annoyed by this mysterious trouble, especially when the case is of hereditary origin. It is, doubtless, the first stage of the well-known, but terrible, Bright's disease, as the kidneys contain large quantities of albumen, and while children and young people are especially liable to its attacks, it is prevalent with all classes, and usually continue until, late in life.

One obstinate case which came under my observation was that of a fireman of this city who applied to me for treatment. The case was diagnosed parenchymatous nephritis. The man was twenty-four years of age, plethoric, and light-complected. He stated that he had suffered from urinary troubles from childhood, and that he had "doctored" a hundred times, each time improving some, after which, in a short while, he would relapse into his former state of misery. I prescribed the usual therapeutics known to the profession with the same result that my colleagues had obtained. He got better for a while, and then worse again; in fact, so bad that he had to lay off for some time. He suffered intense pain; so much so that I confess I had to resort to hypodermic injections of morphia. My druggist, who knew how disgusted I was with the case, although not willing to desert the man, advised me to try a remedy from which he (the druggist) had derived great benefit. As a drowning man catches at a straw, I prescribed this remedy, not letting my patient, however, know what I was giving him; and, although not a believer in nor a patron of "patent medicines," I must confess that after my fireman had taken one bottle he grew much better. I made him continue its use for a period of two months, with the most gratifying results; it really worked wonders, and he owes his cure and present perfect health solely to the remarkable power of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, the remedy which I prescribed, and he used.

Since the recovery of the man above mentioned, I have given considerable thought to the subject of acute nephritis, or kidney difficulty, and I find that its manifestations are most remarkable. It often appears without any special symptoms of its own, or possibly as a sequel to some other disease. It may be a sequel to scarlatina, diphtheria, and other illnesses, and even arise from pregnancy. The first symptoms frequently show themselves in the form of high, fierce and intense pains in the lumbar region, "the small of the back," troublesome micturitions and frequent changes in the color of the urine, which at times diminish perceptibly. If the urine is entirely suppressed, the case, probably, will terminate fatally in a very few days. Dropsy is a consequence of the suppression of urine, and the severeness of it is governed by the proportion of retention. The nervous system becomes prostrated, with subsequent convulsions and irregular circulation of the blood, which, in my estimation, eventually might cause a diseased heart to give out. As I have remarked, in many kidney diseases—yes, even in Bright's disease itself—there is no perceptible pain in the back, and these troubles often assert themselves in various symptoms—for instance, in troublesome diarrhœa, blood poison, impaired eyesight, nausea, loss of appetite, disordered digestion, loss of consciousness, husky voice, and many other complaints too numerous to mention. Indeed, thousands of people are suffering from the first stages of Bright's disease to-day, and they do not know it.

In conclusion, I would like to state that I have, since my success with the fireman, repeatedly prescribed Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, and many professional brethren could only be brought so far as to overcome their prejudice against proprietary medicines, they would, undoubtedly, find themselves recompensed for their supposed sacrifice of liberty, as well as by the great benefits that would accrue to the world.

Most sincerely,
O. ANDERSON, M. D.,
Superintendent.

Woman's Voice.

Now in the swaying of the chamber trees,
When evening breezes sing their vesper hymns—
Not the minstrel's mighty symphonies,
Nor ripples breaking on the river's brim,

But even as the swallows skim and skate

So shall one sound the sleeping spirit wake
To leave the danger, and to fear the harm—
A low and gentle voice—dear woman's chiefest charm.

RUNNING THE TOLL.

"Just hint at 'running the toll,' and grandma will tell a story," said Lily Weatherbee, demure as a little Quaker and sweet as a wild rose, looking up from her Kensington stitch.

Grandma overheard her and answered with a smile that made her piercing black eyes sparkle like diamonds.

"I don't think you will ever run the toll, Peace and Plenty," she said. That was the name she had given Lily when she was a baby.

"No, indeed; one in the family of that sort is quite enough," laughed the girl; "but here is Hattie waiting to be amused, and you must tell her about it."

"Well, 'now shall I begin, chatterbox?'"

"Why, tell her about the old house with the gray moss clinging to the rafters, and the haunted window and the great barn, first."

"The haunting was easily enough accounted for," said grandma, rolling up the stockings she had been mending and taking off her spectacles; "that was the tapping of the old horse-chestnut when the wind blew, but it was a long time before I found out the meaning of the three mysterious knocks always three and when I did, what fun I had at the expense of Miss Silena Cross, our dressmaker, who had taken infinite pains to prove that I was favored with spiritual visits! Poor Miss Silena! I never saw a creature more disappointed. As for the barn, it had originally been built for a meeting-house, but never having been finished on account of lack of funds, my grandfather took it for debt and turned it to very good account. That old barn was a great institution, and was regularly turned out during winters for revival meetings, dances, husking frolics and sundry other things. One night we let a tramp sleep there, and the consequence was that by noon next day there was nothing left of the barn but smoke and ashes. Poor father! It had been a source of income, and nothing could take its place. Everybody mourned the destruction of Uncle Hiram's barn, but nobody offered to rebuild it.

"We were poor, not that we suffered for the necessaries of life. The farm kept our table, but my father worked too hard for an old man, and his boys were all girls. The fact of our poverty never troubled me, however, I was too happy. Only give me plenty of fun, plenty of sunshine and nothing second hand to me. My genius at improvising all sorts of amusements made me a general favorite in society. Nobody looked down upon me because I wore calico and worked from morning till night. In fact, 'Jack' was always in requisition at 'Jack' was the soul of our merry gatherings, who filled the gap with some audacious gossip when nobody knew what to say, who was afraid of nothing—who was, I am rather sorry to add, careless of consequences, so that she had a good time.

"But I was happy; nobody can never take that consolation from me. I never sighed for what was unattainable. Fair weather or foul, washing or baking, at home or at the country-side parties, I was always at peace with the world, though my one best muslin gown had done duty for several years."

"Oh, grandma! what would you have thought then of a pink satin reception dress, and everything to match like the one I am having make?" exclaimed Lily.

"Shouldn't I been a bit happier, my dear, couldn't I' been," was the calm response. "Besides, young girls never wore satin in those days, bless you! plain white muslin was considered dressy enough, with lowers which to my taste, are prettier than jewels any day. And now I am coming to how I ran the toll. Ned Hamilton was considerdsome of the best young men in town. He would'a' been handsome but his nose was too thin and his eyes were too close together, though they were fine eyes. At all events, he was a great favorite, and the girl who secured him for a partner considered herself fortunate? Nobody treated him just exactly as I did, for I would tell him to his face that he was conceited, though secretly I did feel flattered by his attention. I suppose the great Rosedale farm had something to do with it, and the two grays and the handsome carryall. Perhaps I was ambitious and didn't exactly know it for to tell the truth, when I did think of him at all seriously it was the big farm that loomed up, not my liking for him. To be Mrs. Hamilton—the name was a good one—to step from our homely one-story house into a grand old mansion, where the furniture had stood for a hundred years—that was something for a poor man's child to achieve. I was very proud and happy when he showed me any unusual attention. It did stir what vanity I had to see his team at our cottage door, to pass our acquaintances [illegible] or sometimes in dressing out at parties—me in my plain dress, with perhaps only a rose at my throat and another in my hair.'

"Now confess that you were handsome, grandma," said Lily.

"That's not for me to say, my dear, though I believe they did call me rather pretty. One day Ned Hamilton invited me to go with him to Silver Spring, a beautiful waterfall, six miles away. I was particularly pleased with the invitation just at that time, for matters at home were complicated, and the atmosphere was not agreeable. Father had been paying money on a mortgage, and that always made him cross—not cross exactly, but very, very disagreeable. The sight of his gray hair and his anxious spirit depressed poor timid me, so I felt like a bird let loose.

"That morning the team came for me, early, at the house of Deacon Mills, where I was visiting Mary Mills, my intimate friend. Mary gave one of her parties on the morrow of my birthday, Poor Mary! A honeymoon has never been her lot, poor girl! Ned Hamilton, who never lacked for a lady partner, was there, and she was [illegible] jealous, so perhaps she never realized how very plain she was. I had been busy over my only white dress, basting a tuck out here and adding a bit there, wishing, for a wonder, that I could have something new to wear. At sight of Ned and the team, [illegible] all my troubles vanished into air, and I ran down stairs laughing.

"'I do wish you'd be a little sober-minded,' said my father, in his frosty way. 'It seems kinder heartless to be laughing when there ain't a cent in the house, and nobody knows when there will be.'

"'Why, father, there's potatoes and meal,' was my merry rejoinder.

"'Yes, and there's always shoes and trousers,' he answered figuratively. 'I don't seem to get ahead like other folks, and I've pretty much about given up trying. If you girls was only boys—now.'

"'Think what you'd have to lay up in boots alone,' I said, laughing, at which he frowned and turned, impatiently away, while I ran out to be helped into the hands one carriage.

"What a glorious day! was! The vines lining each side of the road all seemed dripping with sunshine. The shaded valleys, the dancing brooks and the highways bordered with maples and elms—and then my companion! The hour with odd and [illegible] fancies, talked about his farm, his orchards, his aspirations, and I had not skillfully turned the subject once or twice, said the pretty old lady, with a prim little gesture, 'I think he might have proposed. But I wasn't ready for that yet. In the quiet of the homecoming, I said to myself, 'I will listen to no [illegible]'

"'[illegible] the waterfall, which, with its accompanying heights and charming scenery, repaid us for the long ride. It was hard to tear ourselves away, and when we did turn the heads of the spirited horses in the direction of home it was very late.

"'We shall never run this time for the party,' I said, as the twilight deepened into dusk. 'Must you pay at the toll-gate? The old man is blind, and it will take him an hour to make up change. Run the toll just for the fun of it, you can pay him afterwards.'

"'That won't do,' said Ned. 'I have to get a bill changed though. Just take the reins a second. By the way—' I never heard the end of the sentence. At that moment the spirit of mischief seized me. I snatched the whip and touched the near horse. Then I only heard the thunder of hoofs and the whirr of wheels, saw Ned's eyes flash fire in the semi-darkness and his face grow pale. Before he could take the reins from my inexperienced hands, we had run the toll in good earnest, and the horses were flying over the bridge as only frightened horses can. It was as much as Ned could do to guide them, and twice we were in deadly peril.

"On they sped, young Hamilton standing without a hat, his teeth set, lips white, his frame rigid, while the veins of his forehead stood out like whipcord. I just sat back and held my breath, too frightened to try out, and catching at whatever was nearest to steady myself as they raced down the long hill, street to the village, at the foot of which they slacked their speed and were soon under control.

"'That was a mad freak of yours,' was all the young man said, as he helped me out at the door, and I knew by the expression of his countenance that I never should be asked to ride behind his grays again.

"I went to the party, seemingly as gay and light-hearted as ever. If any feeling of regret mixed under my careless speech and manner, Ned should never know it. In the midst of the fun, when I was holding my little court, and the laugh and the jest were ringing round, who should appear upon the scene but my father, in his homely, patched clothes, quite regardless of the figure he cut in the midst of that brilliant company. He walked straight up to me, his hair in disorder, his face as pale as death.

"'Jack,' says he, 'did you run the toll to-day?'

"'The horses ran,' I said, with a touch of levity, though I trembled from head to foot. 'What did they know about toll?'

"'Well, the lodge-keeper has been to the house, Jack. He told me the young man was getting the money when you caught up the whip and set the horses to running. Now, there's a fine for that, an' I've got to give him five dollars. He won't let me off—and I ain't got five cents to my name.' Tears stood in his poor, weak eyes, and, regardless of the surroundings, he took out his handkerchief and wiped them away. Imagine, if you can, how I felt.

"'Allow me to pay, sir,' said Ned, coming forward, and that capped the climax. I could have screamed with mortification. I just ran out of that room without waiting for wraps or anything else, and flew home so shamed that I think I hardly knew what I was doing. As you may suppose, I cried pretty much all night, and it was a long time before I recovered my spirits.

"'I have no doubt it lost me Ned Hamilton, too,' said the old lady, with a queer little toss of the head; but that didn't matter much. He left me and took Mary Bean, old Deacon Bean's daughter—the pink of propriety, and, who would no more have dared to say her soul was her own than she would have dared to ride wild horses. It was a little mortifying at first, but after his marriage folks said that he was miserly almost beyond belief, and I am positive Molly Hamilton only has one new bonnet a year, poor soul!—though by this time she may have gone where they don't need bonnets.

"'However, I was cured from that time of my thoughtless pranks. I went to work and soon paid back the five dollars, and more than that, I paid off the mortgage on our little home, in time.

"'And then you married grandpa?' said Lily.

"'Yes, dear, he was worth a thousand Ned Hamiltons—but poor father! how often I have heard him say that I was just as good as a boy!'—Mary A. Denison in Year Companion.

McClellan's Perilous Ride.

Lewis E. Dyson, the big policeman who stands at Eighth and Arch streets, claims the honor of having taken Gen. McClellan safely through, he rather over one of the greatest dangers of his life. It was the time he retreated from Yorktown, a little before the seven days' fight in the peninsula. I was then driving McClellan's private ambulance, a sort of Germantown wagon that he had fitted up for his own use. It would carry four persons comfortably, and I had a team of four spirited horses to draw it. Well, the rebels skipped out of Yorktown one Saturday night, but before they went they filled all the roads in around the town with torpedoes—buried 'em under a thin scum of earth, you know, so that you couldn't see the blamed things till you stepped on 'em, and then after that you never say anything else. The Sunday after the evacuation was a beautiful day, but that night it rained as it just knew how to rain—down on the peninsula, and the mud well, it knew how to make mud, too. It was about a foot deep, I reckon, when I started on Monday morning for McClellan's headquarters, four miles out, to drive to Yorktown. There were four officers in the ambulance, Gen. McClellan, Col. Colburn, his chief of staff, Gen. Franklin, and Gen. Fitz John Porter. It was still raining, and the ambulance curtains were closed. We got along all right till we came to the entrance to the Yorktown fortifications, and there right in the narrowest part of the way, was an ambulance wagon, broken down in the mud, and beside it was a stick, planted in the mud, with a little red flag hanging from it. I knew what it was as soon as I saw it: the rain had washed the dirt off one of them bloody torpedoes, and the soldiers had found it and marked it, you bet they wasn't going to dig it up without positive orders.

"Well, I stopped my team and Gen. McClellan stuck his head through the curtains and looked about him. There were some soldiers standing around, and among them was a lieutenant. McClellan called him up and said:

"'Don't let our men take up any of these torpedoes. Make the prisoners do it.'

"Then he looked at the wagon and asked me: 'Do you think you can get past?'

"'Yes,' I said, 'I guess I can, if I straddle that torpedo.'

"'Well,' said he, 'go ahead. I expect we'll all be blown to thunder together.' Those were the very words he used. So I threw my long whip down between the horses to keep them apart as far as possible, and drove ahead, and we got into Yorktown without touching the torpedo.'

"And what did McClellan say then?"

"'He never said a word. When we got into Yorktown he left the ambulance and went into a house, and presently he sent an orderly out to tell me to go back to head-quarters. I had no sooner reached there than I received orders to turn around, return to Yorktown, and follow the army, so I had to drive over that blamed torpedo three times. I got kinder used to it at last, and was ready to bet that I could do it every time.'—Philadelphia Times.

Setting Their Caps for Whittier.

The letters of Mrs. Lydia Maria Child have recently been published with a sketch of her by Mr. Whittier, of a visit to whom in 1868 she writes: "Whittier made piteous complaints of time wasted and strength exhausted by the numerous visitors who came to see him out of mere idle curiosity, or to put up with him to save a penny. I was amused to hear his sister describe some of these irruptions in her slow, Quakerly fashion. 'Thee has no idea,' she said, 'how much time Greenleaf spends trying to lose these people in the streets. Sometimes he comes home and says: Well, sister, I had hard work to lose him, but I have lost him.' 'But I can never lose her,' said Whittier; 'the women are more pertinacious than the men, don't thee find him so, Marie?' I told him I did.—'How does thee manage to get time to do anything?' said he. I told him I took care to live away from the railroad and kept a bull-dog and a pitchfork and advised him to do the same. It is a fact that the life of the gentle poet has been much pestered by women. At least one wealthy widow actually proposed to him, and other women have made violent love to him without avail.

Four graduate Harvard professors and students formed a co-operative society nine months ago, and opened a store, where books, sporting articles, stationery, fish, pictures and everything were either kept in stock or sold by sample. The price for everything was 5 per cent. above wholesale cost, and members only could buy, but on no other terms than cash down. They also paid a year. The experiment has thus far been highly satisfactory, and no reason for failure in the future is apparent. There is no capital at risk, the 5 per cent. and yearly dues cover the expenses, and the members, now increased to 636, get their goods at an average of 20 per cent. less than they would have to pay elsewhere. A novel branch of business is the sale of second-hand books and furniture, by which students get pay for their discarded things, instead of throwing them away.

A certain Irish M. P. had been describing his travels in the far west and the virgin forests. "There," said he, "what is a virgin forest?" asked an auditor. "What is a virgin forest, sorr? is one where the hand o' man has niver set foot."

Going to His Grave.

There he goes again direct to the saloon and pours down another heavy draught of strong drink, not so much because his appetite demands it, but for the artificial buoyancy it produces, the after effect of which leaves him more miserable than before. It is this dreadful practice that is daily sending thousands to their graves. A remedy for all this is found in the true friend of temperance,—the best and purest of all medicines, Electric Bitters.

Col. Sanford's lecture at Town Hall, Thursday evening last was simply excellent, and the lecture committee certainly deserve much credit for the course they have presented thus far. It is an abominable shame that they are not better rewarded for their efforts. It looks as though Clinton did not desire another course next season. Bain's subject for next Tuesday evening will be "My Trip to the Golden Gate."

Pop-corn social by the Congregational Sunday school Saturday afternoon at A. P. Halladay's.

WEST TECUMSEH TIDBITS.

Local Telegraph Line.

Benjamin Dove lost a horse last week.

The mill yards at Newburg are rapidly filling up with saw logs.

Four meadow larks were seen hereabouts just before the cold snap: something unusual.

We do not know what effect the late cold wave will have on next season's fruit crop, but it is abundant now on our table sauce too much frost in the cellar.

There is much interest manifested in the fair question. Most parties however favor holding a fair at Tecumseh, but would prefer a new organization, to the old one at Adrian.

We hope before another year rolls around to have a telegraph column in the HERALD filled with news from Britton, Ridgeway, West Tecumseh, Tipton and Sand Lake.

MACON CENTER CUTS.

The oyster supper, social of the Red Ribbon Club was a fair success, over $12 receipts.

Mrs. Bristol's failure to fill her appointments on the lecture course was occasioned from her being called home to attend the funeral of her husband, who died very suddenly.

There was an oyster supper in connection with the installation of the officers of the Grange last Friday evening. In connection with the program of next regular meeting there will be a discussion of "Women's Rights" and the "Merits of the Grange."

A full house greeted Prof. Steele, of Ann Arbor, last Wednesday evening, the second lecture of the course. The lecture was well received.

THE FAIR MEETING.

Pursuant to call a meeting assembled at the Opera House on Friday evening last to consider the expediency of making an effort to hold the County Fair at Tecumseh next fall.—A goodly number was present. N. M. Sutton was called to the chair and L. P. Tribou was chosen secretary.

On motion a committee of six was chosen to canvas the matter in this section of the county and also to visit Adrian at the annual meeting of the County Agricultural Society to be held at Adrian on Friday the 26th.—This committee consisted of C. D. Bills, D. P. Anthony, James B. Colvin, Minor Davidson, A. D. Hall and W. B. Keyser.

Remarks were made by Messrs. Hall, Anthony, Bills and others. Mr. Bills made a statement of the terms on which he would lease his race track and grounds and construct the necessary buildings and grand stands.

The universal sentiment expressed was that Tecumseh must have a fair next fall. A letter was received by us on Friday from C. H. Dewey, Esq., of Cambridge, saying that the farmers of that town would join heartily in the movement. Upon conferring with farmers from other towns it was ascertained that they were uniformly in favor of the project.

The committee of six will visit Adrian to-morrow On Saturday, Feb. 3rd, at two o'clock in the afternoon, an adjourned meeting will be held at the Opera House in this village, at which time the committee will submit a report and such action will be taken as shall seem necessary. A special invitation is extended to the farmers of Northern Lenawee to attend the meeting.

This may be worth $20.00 to you; cut it out. Address Rutledge Publishing Company, Easton, Penna.

A few days ago word came to the justice of the peace at Sylvester, Mecosta county, that a woman had died under circumstances that called for an inquest. He thereupon summoned a jury of chief citizens and proceeded to the house. Arriving there he duly, solemnly and pompously called their names, administered the oath, etc., and then took up the line of march for the silent room. At the door the sister of the "deceased" met them with the remark, "She isn't dead yet!" A put up job by the boys with the sister's strange connivance.

MICHIGAN STATE ITEMS.

A new banking institution is to be opened shortly at Charlotte, with Rudolph Buck at its head.

New postoffices: Fergus, Saginaw county, John A. Spenger, postmaster; Rustic, Clinton county, Jerome Jenkins postmaster.

The lumbermen are now said to be wishing for less instead of more snow, a steady fall of 48 hours proving a little too much of a good thing.

The Holcombe saw and planing mill owned by James Henry, burned at St. Louis last Friday; loss $6,000, no insurance.

Of over 100 persons who organized the old settlers' association of the Gd. River valley 25 years ago, only 19 are now living.

It's hard work for the saloons of Battle Creek to obey the law and close up at 9 o'clock, but as the city has a temperance mayor the law is strictly enforced and the justice's docket kept filled with cases against the liquor men.

The national furniture makers association, which closed its annual meeting at St. Louis on Thursday, changed its name to the western furniture manufacturers' association, and decided to hold the next convention at Grand Rapids in July.

It is expected that the new Grand Trunk shops at Battle Creek will be occupied some time next month. The buildings are all up and work about the yard, including the laying of 30,000 feet of side track, is nearly completed. A steam pile driver is now there at work on the new turn table.

Four masked robbers entered the house of a Mr. Smith, at Mosherville, Hillsdale county, last week, bound him, and robbed him of $200. They then stole his team and started for Albion, compelled a man named Woolson to change horses with them on the way, finally abandoned the team in Albion, and evidently skipped out on an early train.

Two or three nights ago a Bay City physician was called at midnight to go to Melbourne, eight miles distant. He promptly obeyed the summons, and having met the necessities of the case started on the return trip. After two or three hours' hard driving he found himself at the precise spot in Melbourne whence he started. A blinding snow storm, and the strange tendency of lost humanity to travel in a circle, caused the mishap.

Winter's Advent.

"Winter is coming," says the city belle,
As by the merry fire she sits to hear
The wind, that such a story seems to tell
Of woe and sadness with its moanings drear.
But little recks she; Winter only brings
To her new pleasures, balls and parties gay,
Velvets and furs, and other pretty things
On her his fairy hand to strew by the way.

"Winter is coming," says the poor old man,
As on his cane he leans, and sighs the while
Thro, as he walks, lays many a fertile plan
About his prosperous coaling-house or farm.
To make it more, lest he should chance to lose
Are large already, still he wishes more,
And of the paupers of the town he muses
While sitting idly by his shop door.

"Winter is coming," shouts the rosy child,
As the last leaf, the latest, leaves the trees wave
Its tinted form sparkling in the bright, frosty air.

WIT AND HUMOR.

"I like your new hat very much," he said; "that feather's real chic." "No such thing," exclaimed she; "It's a real ostrich feather."

"If," says the Phrenological Journal, "whistling will drive away the blues, why shouldn't the girls whistle?" Pshaw! if they did, the puppies would run after them more than ever.

An aged peasant learns that the village doctor, to whom he had advanced some small sums, has just passed away leaving nothing but debts. "There!" said he to his wife, with a delightful chuckle, "if I hadn't had the good luck to have that fit of rheumatism two months ago, where would my money be?"

They had met "by chance" on a railroad train. "Oh, how I wish I knew you in the summer, when I had my yacht," he murmured, looking seaward. And the fair being at his side felt drawn toward him, she little knowing that he worked in a drug store at $7 per week, and that he still owed a quarter for the use of a row-boat at the beach.

A young author was telling of his woes with regard to a book. Said he: "I gave it to one publisher to read, and he accepted it and said he would publish it. But three days later he committed suicide. Then I showed it to another publisher. He agreed to publish it, and the next week took all his partner's money and fled to Europe. And then—what the blazes are you laughing at?"

A witty nobleman once asked a clerical gentleman at the bottom of the table why the goose, when there was one, was always placed next to the parson. "Really, my lord," said the clergyman, "your question is somewhat difficult to answer, and so remarkably odd, that I vow I shall never see a goose again without being reminded of your lordship."

A Harlem small boy, whose soul was filled with visions of future greatness and whose memory was stored with scenes in which dogs had gone mad from the addition of artificial extensions to their tails, tried the experiment of tying a tin can to the most subsequent department of a goat. The animal looked gratefully upon the eager lad, and then slowly and solemnly devoured the can. The boy will henceforth lead a blighted life.

"Then you are thinking of building a residence next season?" suggested Flub to one of our heavy pockets. "Yes, I thought I should get up something in that line." "What style of architecture—Gothic, or Doric, or Corinthian, or——?" "Oh, a little of everything. My wife inclines to the Mary Ann style; but I guess I'll put up a genuine Betsy Jane cottage, with a pizarro all around it. That'll suit me well enough."

"Why didn't you deliver that message as I gave it to you?" asked a gentleman of his stupid servant. "I did the best I could, boss." "You did the best you could, did you?" imitating his voice and look. "So you did the best you could. If I had known that I was sending a donkey I would have gone myself."

It was but a simple pin, Puck says, on a chair, and the little boy did grin like a bear when the teacher took a seat, and in a manner very fleet flew a half a hundred feet in the air. This the teacher doth annoy, and he chants, and no pardon to the boy quick he grants. But he grabs the indiscreet little boy and him doth beat till he rather spoils the seat of his "pants."

A martinet of a sergeant turns up unexpectedly to call out a fatigue party. Only one soldier answers to the summons with promptitude. "Confound it all to confusion!" yells the irritated officer. "What in the name of a hundred thousand devils do you mean by turning out alone, sir, when I called out the whole squad? Forty-eight hours in the black hole! That'll teach you to be the only man to turn out!"

SORGHUM SUGAR AT LAST.

Colman's Rural World, which has so long advocated a sorghum culture as an industry with a great future, grows thus exuberant in its remarks on the manufacture of sugar from sorghum in Campaign, Ill.

"The problem whether sugar can be made from sorghum remuneratively has been solved. It is no longer a debatable question. The Campaign (Ill.) Sugar Works answer the question every day, every hour. They turn out batch after batch of sugar from sorghum with precisely the same certainty that the Southern planter does from the ribbon cane. If any one is at all skeptical in regard to this statement, he has only to visit Campaign, Ill., to have that skepticism removed. He will see some thirty barrels of nice sugar turned out daily, fully equal to the New Orleans, selling by the barrel at the sugar works at 8½ cents per pound. There is no sorghum flavor nor gummy character about the sugar. It will sell in any market with the New Orleans sugar, bringing the same price and giving the same satisfaction. And all this success has been obtained in the most unfavorable season that we have had for cane for many years.

"This industry will be of great national advantage. It will make our own sugar and keep our money at home, instead of sending it abroad to the amount of about one hundred millions annually. Our farmers are running too much to wheat. There is a need of some other crop to occupy their attention, the product of which can be shipped abroad, and sugar will be that product. It is not an exhaustive crop to land, like wheat; but draws its substance largely from the atmosphere—the ashy portion of its constituents being exceedingly light. It puts the soil in excellent condition for other crops, and if fertilizers are to be used at all on the farm, they can on no other crop be used to as great advantage—especially the phosphates, as they not only largely increase the yield of cane, but hasten its early maturity wonderfully, and yet consume but little, leaving it in the soil for other crops."

Col. Norman J. Colman, president of the Mississippi Valley Cane-Growers' Association, has just returned from Campaign, Ill., enthusiastic over successful results in sugar-making from the sorghum. He exhibited specimens of the sugar to a Globe-Democrat reporter and said:

"The Campaign institution is turning out thirty barrels of sugar a day, which sells at eight and one-half cents a pound at the works. And all this success has been obtained in the most unfavorable season that we have had for cane for many years. Indeed so unpropitious was the season that Profs. Weber and Scovell did not expect to make sugar at all and told the stockholders of the company so. They knew they could make syrup; but the juice fell so much below that of last year in sucrose that they had no expectation of obtaining sugar in paying quantities. The first batch that was made the stockholders were present and wore long faces. It was at night and there was but little expectation of any sugar being made. The result was awaited with great anxiety. At length the test came, and to the astonishment of all, out came the crystalized fluid even before cooling. There was then a regular jubilee. Here were new works, costing $25,000, that had not been erected without considerable difficulty. It was an experiment to settle the question whether sugar could be made in the North, as well as in the South, in such quantity as to make it pay. The season had been exceedingly unpropitious for the growth of cane. The latitude was Northern Illinois and the planting was on the level prairie. The spring had been very cold and wet and seed lay in the ground a month or more without germinating. Seed planted on the 22d of June matured its cane as early as that planted a month or six weeks before. The rainfall throughout the three summer months in the vicinity of Campaign was eighteen inches, while in usual seasons it has not been half that, and the sorgo crop needs but little rain and revels in drought. The mean temperature during the same months was six to eight degrees lower than usual, while hot weather is needed to develop the greatest amount of saccharine. And yet, notwithstanding all these unfavorable circumstances, on the very first trial, before the seed was fairly ripe, the company were in possession of several thousand pounds of most excellent sugar, and from that time to this there has not been a single failure in obtaining sugar, at least 40 per cent. of the entire amount of syrup crystallizing, and the balance, of course, making a number one article of molasses, commanding fully the prices of the New Orleans commodity."

"To what do you attribute the success, after so many failures to produce sugar in profitable quantities?"

"The whole process is simple as can be. In the first place, the acid in the juice is neutralized by lime, as practiced by most syrup makers, the litmus paper being used as a test. This is done in the cold juice in the defecating tanks, just before defecation, which consists in bringing the juice to a boil and thoroughly skimming. No other substance is used for defecation at any other stage. The juice is now drawn off through pipes to the evaporator, where it is reduced to a semi syrup, then filtered through bone black, then pumped into the vacuum pan, where it is reduced to sugar, and when cooled swung out through the centrifugal. That is all there is of it. The most peculiar point is in using the lime properly, so as to neutralize the acid. This part needs close attention. No solutions, powders, or chemicals of any kind are used. Of course, the vacuum-pan plays a very important part, as the syrup is boiled at a lower temperature. There is no caramelizing, no inverting from grape sugar, and all the crystallizable sugar is preserved. The most incredulous, by visiting this establishment, will become convinced that sugar is not only made, but made with such certainty and in such quantity as to pay. And there has not been a single failure, not a single trial when the same results have not been obtained."

New Illuminating Gases.

The Iron Age gives a brief sketch of the newly-invented illuminating gas, which is now being made in Liverpool and called metallic gas. It is estimated that the labor of three men will by this process produce as much gas as the labor of one thousand men by the old methods and the new gas when produced has six times the luminosity of the old, present, sort. The new gas is dry, odorless, and not affected by cold.—It can be carried any distance in pipes without condensing, and is as good months after it is made as when it is fresh. The light is white, like the electric light. In this connection may be mentioned a new gas whose company in New York state, has been organized to manufacture. The New York company's product is the result of the decomposition of lime. The operation, it is said, produces almost pure hydrogen, which, being carbureted, results in a gas of between thirty and fifty candle-power. The process, which was discovered by a French chemist, and improved by a Tonsh one, is said to be economical, and it is expected that the gas will supersede coal for running engines, and possibly in domestic heating and cookery. It is made without coal oil being used in its preparation.

Do Not Be Deceived.

In these times of quack medicine advertisements everywhere, it is truly gratifying to find one remedy that is worthy of praise, and which really does as recommended. Electric Bitters we can vouch for as being a true and reliable remedy, and one that will do as recommended. They invariably cure Stomach and Liver Complaints, Diseases of the Kidneys and Urinary difficulties. We know whereof we speak, and can readily say, give them a trial. Price fifty cents.

SUBSCRIPTIONS for all newspapers and magazines published will be taken at the HERALD office at reduced rates.

Seek No Further,

It is said an old philosopher sought an honest man with a lighted lantern, and humanity has since been seeking an honest medicine by the light of knowledge. It has at length found it in Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic, which cures all diseases of the blood, removes pimples, and acts promptly upon the liver and urinary organs. Only 50 cents a bottle, to be had at Baker & Hall's.

If our whole time was spent in amusing ourselves, we should find it more wearisome than the hardest day's work.

I subscribe to the efficiency of Downs' Elixir. It has been a standard remedy for coughs and colds in my family for years. J. A. ARTHUR Deputy Customs Collector.

Burlington, Vt., Jan. 26, 1882.

I have used Downs' Elixir for forty years, and consider it a safe and valuable medicine in all cases of coughs, colds, and for any pulmonary trouble. I always fall back on this old remedy when the symptoms are alarming, and it has never disappointed me.

IRA SHATTUCK.

As a sandy hill is to the feet of the aged, so is a woman to many words to a quiet man.

Get Rich.

When Hops are $1.25 per lb. as now, an acre will yield $1,000 profit, and yet the best family medicine on earth, Hop Bitters, contain the same quantity of Hops and are sold at the same price fixed years ago, although Hops now are twenty times higher than then. Raise Hops, get rich in pocket; use Hop Bitters and get rich in health.

One who is never busy can never enjoy rest, for rest implies relief from previous labor.

Snatched From the Grave.

Mrs. Helen Pharviz, No. 331 Dayton St., Chicago, Ill., is now in her sixty-eighth year, and states that she has suffered with Consumption for about ten years, was treated by nine physicians, all of them pronouncing her case hopeless. She had given up all hopes of ever recovering. Seven bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption completely cured her. Doubting ones please drop her a postal and satisfy yourselves.

Fame is to give our heart's blood that a violet may bloom from our dust in a hundred years.

Sing, Oh Sing, that Song Again.

How can you when you cough at every breath? Why, get a trial bottle of Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure, and you will be answered. It cures colds, coughs, consumption, whooping cough and all diseases of the lungs, and it will cost you nothing to test it if you call at Baker & Hall's.

Don't scowl; it spoils faces. Before you know it your head will resemble a small railway map.

Age brings with it the infirmities of the body. Our bodies need repairing and strengthening. Old persons are more or less subject to diseases of the Kidneys and urinary organs, and in these cases the strengthening and curative properties of Kellogg's Columbian Oil are sure. Its use stimulates the Kidneys and bladder, and creates natural action, as in youth. Every dose will give strength and vigor to these debilitated organs.

The pages of our lives that to the world seem darkest, in God's eyes may be luminous as stars.

A Gentle Voice.

Our enterprising druggists have secured the agency for the sale of Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure, which has no superior for coughs, colds, consumption, whooping cough and all throat and lung diseases. To prove to you it has no equal, call at Baker & Hall's drug store and get a bottle free.

DOWNS' ELIXIR.

N. H. DOWNS'
Vegetable Balsamic
ELIXIR

This valuable medicine is purely vegetable, the discovery of which was the result of many years' close study, in order to discover the cause, the symptoms, and the cure—viz:

Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Croup, Asthma, Pleurisy, Hoarseness, Influenza, Spitting Blood, Bronchitis, and every species of oppression of the Chest and Lungs. In all cases where this Elixir has been duly administered its efficacy has been invariably manifested, convincing the most incredulous that is not incurable, if properly attended to.—Consumption, at its commencement, is but a slight irritation of the membrane which covers the Lungs; then an inflamation, when the cough is more observable, but rather dry; then becomes local fever and the pulse more frequent, the cheeks flushed and chillsmore common. This Elixir in curing the above complaints, operates so as to remove all morbid irritations and inflamation from the lungs to the surface, and finally expel them from the system. It facilitates expectoration,

CONSUMPTION

It heals the ulcerated surfaces

and relieves the cough and makes the breathing easy. It supports the strength and at the same time reduces the fever. It is free from strong opiate and astringent articles, which are of so drying a nature as to be great danger of destroying the patient; whereas this medicine never dries or stops the cough, but, by removing the cause, generally destroys the hectic before the cough is entirely gone. Consequently, when the cough is cured the patient is well. Send address for pamphlet giving full directions for cure of pulmonary diseases.

Price 35 cts., 50 cts., and $1.00 per bottle.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN 25, 1883.

Ferry stock has taken a tumble.

This is a ferry cold week in Thomas W's neighborhood.

Vennor is putting in some of his best licks this week.

Blizzard is no name for it. It was a genuine Arctic cyclone.

The mercury in Ferry's thermometer has struck zero and the tendency is still downward.

Dr. Howell, of this district, an original Ferry man, has deserted the Ferry standard. A wise decision.

A meeting was held at Jackson last evening to organize a free trade league. Every county in the state will have such a league within six months.

The theological controversy has received a new twist in Boston, as the ministers no longer take their texts from the Bible, but from Gov. Butler's message.

Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska and Colorado are all enjoying the luxury of a legislative dead-lock on the senatorial question. Bitter and lengthy contests may result in all four of these states.

The cold wave which struck this latitude Sunday last extended over the entire north and northwest. It was particularly severe in all the states bordering on the great lakes, and the lake cities were frozen up worse than at any previous time this winter. It was probably the back-bone of the present winter.

The Western Union Telegraph Company with a great flourish reduces its rates in the New England states from 40 and 50 cents per message to 25 cts. In other words it confesses that the former rates have been exorbitant, and it will now do the public the favor of charging only twice what the service is worth instead of four times as formerly.

The Evening News has been keeping pretty close track and finds "that as Gov. Begole's suggestion that the executive of the state be called "principal servant," the Boston Herald thinks "first hired man" would be better, and the New York Evening Post proposes "principal help." How would "foreman of the ranch" sound, or "chief cook and bottle washer"?

The Chicago Tribune gives a little homely truth on the protection question in these sensible words:

To take off the tax on delirium tremens and put an extra duty on farmers' plows; to put nicotine on the free list and take quinine off, to make cigarettes cheap for school boys and girls and books dear for scholars; to "protect" distilleries and destroy shipyards—that is what Pennsylvania offers us as the protection of American industry and revenue reform.

January, 1883, will be memorable as a month of disasters. Scarcely a day has passed since New Years that has not chronicled some awful calamity by fire or flood on land or sea. Fires, explosions, railroad smash-ups, steamship collisions, storms and floods have followed each other in daily succession until one almost holds his breath as he reads the daily tale of horror and asks "Will my turn come next?"

Legislative proceedings are becoming rather stale. Nothing is doing save the introduction of a few bills or resolutions each day and the daily repetition of the senatorial farce. The Republican majority owe it to their own party, to say nothing about the public welfare, to cease their quarrels and unite on a good man. If they have no one in their own ranks in whom they have any confidence, then let them vote for Byron G. Stout, and make his election unanimous.

Sour grapes. The Democratic organ of Adrian is "all torn up" over Gov. Begole's appointments. Adrian has secured two appointments—Mayor Corbin as Trustee of the Reform School and E. J. Smith as Oil Inspector. Could either of them be bettered? Every man who is not an office-seeker will answer "No." And upon looking over the entire list of appointments, throughout the state, we find them all equally fitting and unexceptionable. Democrats, Greenbackers and Republicans are all represented in the list, and every appointee is well fitted for the place assigned him.

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES.

A Two-Line Sermon of The Day.

Cincinnati Enquirer: Always pray before retiring, particularly in a hotel.

The Irish Question Boiled Down.

Boston Star: England's Irish policy—Crowd 'em down. Ireland's English policy—Blow 'em up.

Congressional Comfort.

Philadelphia Times, Ind.: What grim comfort it would be to about half the Republican members of Congress if they had dead-locked the organization of the House and lost the key. Anything would have been better than Keifer.

A Bee Line for Tall Timber.

Mobile Register, Dem.: Ben Butler want to be President. If Butler runs as the candidate of one party and Sheridan of the other the voters of the country won't care about traveling miles and pointed out to them but will feel like taking to the woods.

Just What Suits Us.

New York World, Dem.: The Republicans are hilarious over the economical disposition of Governors Butler and Pattison. So are the people who pay the taxes. Governors and officials who hesitate to spend the public money without good reason shown are exactly what these United States have for some time been in need of, and for cause.

Not an Unnatural Mistake.

Texas Siftings: An Austin gentleman who travels a great deal, recently brought home as a simple sample of the hard, black biscuits that are put on the tables at the eating stations along the railroads. The morning after his return he heard a great bullabaloo in the yard. He went out and discovered that his children had put a live coal on its back. They thought it was a turtle.

Oh, How Gushing.

Cincinnati Star: How forcibly do the illustrations which now decorate shop windows impress upon the mind of the young, and of the tender, and of the spooney, that St. Valentine's Day is rolling around! Punctured hearts, from which trickles blood as red as lithographer's ink can make it; cupids as reckless in respect to costume as the pickaninnies of Florida, and the same old billing doves that have inspired the soft hearts of lovers for years and years. Art may suggest improvements in the printing of valentines, but art can not give us anything new in the way of love-sick sentiments or tender designs.

The Size of Stalwart Statesmanship.

Philadelphia Times, Ind.: The National Republican Committee succeeded admirably in getting out at the same hole they went in. After delaying the report and decision they were required to make more than a year beyond the time allotted by the convention of 1880, they have at last met and decided that the world hasn't moved and that all things remain as they were. Territories which can't furnish a single electoral vote are to be represented according to population, and states hopelessly Democratic are to be allowed sufficient representation to nominate a candidate entirely unacceptable to the Republicans of the states which must furnish the votes if he is elected at all.

The Machine Still Hangs On.

Cincinnati Commercial, Rep.: The Republican National Committee, assembled at Washington yesterday resolved to do nothing to change the basis of representation for the next Presidential Convention. The country should make no mistake as to the meaning of this. It is the opening of a new campaign by the aggressive minority, that has for some years assumed to have the exclusive right to speak for the Republicanism of the nation. It means that this minority hold that, having command of the solid southern, and the greater part of the Territorial vote, they can obtain enough Northern votes from Democratic cities and states to make the next Presidential nomination irrespective of the voting millions of Republicans. Of course the scheme will fail. The great Republican states must make the nomination or it will not be worth making. The sooner this is thoroughly understood the better.

Eighteen Karat Bliss.

Chicago Tribune: "Florence, darling, there is one more question I would like to ask you."

The speaker was Reginald Shafton McCafferty, and he adored Florence with the fierce ardor of the tramp for a lime-kiln.

"Say on," she replied, "the feverish rapture of my love for you makes me as clay in your hands."

He called her his dear gazelle, revived the memory of the rapturous moment when they first met beneath the eaves of her father's woodshed, and then rapidly making a biographical sketch that brought their mutual history down to the present moment said:

On the last anniversary of your birthday your father made you a present of a new set of false teeth."

The fair girl turned to his a face, in which the spirit of candor shown like the rays of the rising sun on a ripened pumpkin, and answered:

"It is even so."

"Then," he continued, with increasing pathos, "tell me truly, was the plate made of eighteen karat gold or only twelve karat?"

"Eighteen," she exclaimed, opening her mouth wide enough for him to look in, "Eighteen, I swear it."

Their souls rushed together at the touching of their lips and they were married two weeks from that day.

WHAT IS PROTECTION?

It is the obstruction by law of God's highway.

It is the obstruction of commerce and trade between man and man which should be free and uninterrupted.

It permits our people to sell their produce in the cheapest market but forces them to buy in the dearest.

It forces our farmers to sell wheat at Liverpool prices, but will not allow him to buy his clothes in the same market.

It pours wealth into the pockets of the monopolist and manufacturer.

It takes wealth out of the pockets of the farmer and laboring man.

It is supposed to protect American labor and does it by encouraging the importation of six hundred thousand European laborers each year.

It permits the manufacturer to go to Canada and Europe for cheap labor but refuses to allow the laborer to go to the same countries for cheap clothes.

It is the most iniquitous system of wholesale robbery ever devised by human ingenuity.

THE MAGAZINE OF AMERICAN HISTORY for January opens with a table of contents, brighter and fresher than ever before, presenting an answer through that learned scholar and antiquary, Dr. John Gilmary Shea, to what might appear at first as a singular question, "Where are the remains of Columbus?" A painstaking and diligent Virginia writer, Alexander Brown, sketches the noble career of Lord De La Warr, and exhibits in his true relation to Virginia, of which he was the founder. Prof. Adams concludes his bright, strong and original discussion, "Plymouth Rock Restored," in which the founders of Plym'th appear in a new, fresh and true light. An examination of this number will convince the most critical that the Magazine is able to meet the demands of historical and general readers of the day; and all persons who desire to see important historical questions treated with candor, ability and fullness of knowledge, should make the Magazine a part of their literary furnishings. The Magazine is conducted in a broad, national spirit, aiming to do justice to all parts of the country, and now begins afresh with the hearty endorsement of many of the best scholars and students of American History. A. S. Barnes & Co., of New York are the publishers.

A FREE TRADE MANUFACTURER.

The Boston Herald is authority for the statement that a large manufacturer of woolen cloths told its representative a few days ago that he was a free trader. He said:

I only ask for absolute free trade, and then I will guarantee to lay down my goods in Scotland, and undersell the Scotch manufacturers on their native heath. All I want in the revision of the tariff, if we must continue to bear this burden, is a fair adjustment. I do not think it fair to American woolen manufacturers, who would generally be benefited by free trade, to have the tariff made to work against them. Why should we be compelled to pay a tax on our raw material, and, at the same time, be compelled to make a fight against British capital and labor? The effect on the proposed tariff on wools will be to benefit the importers and jobbers of fine foreign woolens and their patrons, the wealthier classes of the community. It is admitting foreign capital and labor to competition against us without rendering us any equivalent. We shall continue to be shut out from the markets of the world by the tariff, while having to meet keener competition from foreign manufactures.

SOME BAD EFFECTS OF OVERWORK.

What I have seen and heard during my stay among you has forced on me the belief that this slow change from habitual inertness to persistent activity has reached an extreme from which there must begin a counter-change—a reaction. Everywhere I have been struck with the number of faces which told in strong lines of the burdens that had to be borne. I have been struck, too, with the large proportion of gray-haired men; and inquiries have brought out the fact that with you the hair commonly begins to turn some ten years earlier than with us. Moreover, in every circle I have met men who had themselves suffered from nervous collapse due to stress of business, or named friends who had either killed themselves by overwork, or had been permanently incapacitated, or had wasted long periods in endeavors to recover health. I do but echo the opinion of all the observant persons I have spoken to, that immense injury is being done by this high-pressure life—the physique is being undermined. That subtle thinker and poet whome you have lately had to mourn, Emerson, says, in his essay on the gentleman, that the first requisite is that he shall be a good animal. The requisite is a general one—it extends to the man, to the father, to the citizen. We hear a great deal about "the vile body," and many are encouraged by the phrase to transgress the laws of health. But Nature quietly suppresses those who treat thus disrespectfully one of her highest products, and leaves the world to be peopled by the descendants of those who are not so foolish.—From "The Gospel of Recreation," by Herbert Spencer, in Popular Science Monthly for January.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

ESTATE OF JAMES EAST.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee—ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office in the city of Adrian, on Thursday, the 18th day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of James East, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Alfred J. Lewis, executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, alleging that he has paid the debts of said deceased, and the expenses of administration of said estate, and praying for the allowance of his final account, for an assignment and distribution of the residue of said estate according to the provisions of said will, and for his discharge.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 19th day of February next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

NORMAN GEDDES, Judge of Probate.

Dr. B. F. Snyder has bought out Dr. Stewart, and taken possession of his dental rooms over Strong & McNair's store. Dr. Snyder has resided in Hillsdale for several years past where he has enjoyed a good practice. The Standard of last week in commenting on his departure, says:

Dr. B. F. Snyder, of this city, departed for Tecumseh on Monday last, where he succeeds to the dental practice of Dr. H. L. Stewart, of that place. Frank is a thorough gentleman and a skillful operator, and while we regret that a larger field of practice lures him from our city, still we wish for him that unbounded success of which he is so eminently deserving.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

HERALD and Michigan Farmer for $2.60.

Shall Tecumseh have the fair next fall?

Frozen ears and noses are at a premium this week.

This weather is a little tough on the railroad graders.

Mr. Clark, of Monroeville, paid us a visit on Saturday last.

Joe Wooden's thermometer stood 30° below zero last Monday morning.

A committee of Homer business men is travelling about the country soliciting new manufactories.

The saw log business is booming along smartly in all directions. Lumber ought to be cheap next summer.

A card from Lavern Ide, dated at Ludington, on the 19th, says that the snow was three feet deep on the level there.

Carl Burton, of Chicago, gave us a call last Friday. He is looking well and reports everything lively in the big city.

We are indebted to Mr. John Richard, of Raisin, for the article on Sorghum Sugar Making that appears in another column.

The Brownville Social Club spent last Saturday evening at the residence of Wm. Bresie. It is useless to say they had a good time.

The Blissfield Advance man calls for "that wood on subscription." Yes, wood is a good thing to have in the house this kind of weather.

N. M. Sutton left to-day for his annual trip to Florida. He is accompanied by F. R. Stebbins, of Adrian, and S. D. Moore, of Raisin.

Wm. A. Parsons, of Connecticut, one of Tecumseh's former hardware merchants, is spending a few weeks among his Tecumseh friends.

The "Compound Oxygen" treatment is a new cure invented by Drs. Starkey & Palen, of Philadelphia. Its merits are set forth elsewhere.

Michigan will attain a population of two million before the close of the present year.—Adrian Record. That oil inspectorship is beginning to take hold, already.

Monday morning last Whitenack's thermometer stood at 17 degrees below zero. The general average was from 12 to 15 degrees below by most thermometers about the village.

Chas. S. Crane, of St. Louis, arrived home last Saturday, having been called here by the illness of his mother, Mrs. S. Crane. Charley is now chief clerk in the Wabash ticket department, at St. Louis.

On Tuesday, Feb. 6th, Messrs. Reynolds & Wilson will ship 3,000 head of ewes for Taylor, Williamson County, Texas. Having seen most of them we can safely say they are by far the finest lot of ewes ever shipped to the west from this place.

The china tea set which Mr. D. W. Clark offered to one of the purchasers of baking powder, was awarded last week to Mrs. Clinton Kelly, of Macon, she having drawn the lucky number which took the prize. The set is a valuable one, consisting of fifty pieces.

While in Detroit last week we called on Frank Smallidge and mother at 702 Jefferson Ave. Frank is very pleasantly situated, has got one of the best drug stores in Detroit, and with each and every day enjoys life and makes it pleasant for his mother and those who are around him.

The Ann Arbor Register comes to us this week enlarged to a six column quarto eight page sheet, cut and pasted, in genuine metropolitan style.—The paper is now owned wholly by Prof. Frothingham, and his determination seems to be to make the Register the best paper in Washtenaw county for the price. Success to him.

Tuesday night Co. C faced the cold weather and took a sleigh ride over to make Co. B. of Adrian, a visit, and the boys at this writing report a good time. They were splendidly received and entertained "as the kings" by the Adrian boys, enjoyed a good drill, partook of a good supper and only left for home fearing it would soon be to-morrow.

Last Saturday John Smyth received a postal card wishing information about one Dr. R. C. Pinkham, of Ionia county, who was roaming around the country in a semi-crazy condition. On Sunday Smyth found the chap, shadowed him, and on Monday his wife arrived in answer to Smyth's telegram to take him home. Pretty quick work.

We saw in a last week's Adrian Times a note in the Hudson items, that the L. S. & M. S. baggageman at that place handled during the year 1882 43,000 pieces of baggage. The figures looked a little large to us, and we found that at Tecumseh the baggageman handled 8,584 pieces during the year. By reference we find that the freight, passenger and telegraph business at our place is nearly one third greater during the year than those of Hudson, and it looks a little queer that the baggage handled there should be nearly five times greater.

Roller skating at the Opera House Saturday evening.

Dr. H. Peters, of Blissfield, is in town for a few days.

John G. Mason, of Adrian, gave us a flying call this morning.

No change in the senatorial situation at Lansing up to this morning.

Look out for fire. That is, keep a good fire in the stove but don't let it spread.

MRS. CAPT. METTLER and Miss Mattie Haight are visiting Mrs. A. L. Lawrence.

Miss Sadie Vennesdale, of Cheboygan, Mich., is visiting Miss Jennie Whitenack.

Rev. R. S. Pardington will preach next Sabbath evening on "The Things we cannot undo."

Elvin Hammons [illegible] day for school at Sandwich, Canada, where he will remain for some time.

Miss Mary Beihl and Miss Hannah Adler, of Adrian, were the guests of the Misses Smith a few days last week.

See notice of W. & S. W. Anderson in special column. They have an important announcement to their customers.

Rev. R. S. Pardington will deliver a lecture next Tuesday evening at Tipton before the literary society of that place.

THE ROLLER skating rink thus far has been a success, the more people skate the more they enjoy it. See the announcement elsewhere about the meetings and prices.

WE noticed a very nice piece of machine work, in shape of a Domestic Sewing Machine sign, in Spark's show window. It is machine braid work, old gold back ground, and red satin letters.

The Misses Hayden gave a pleasant party Tuesday evening to the younger married people of this place. A very pleasant time was enjoyed, which is a characteristic of the receptions in their spacious parlors.

H. BREWER & Co., have recently put in three new iron lathes of the improved pattern. The concern is now running full time by lighting up their shop with a new vapor torch procured expressly for the purpose.

The morning passenger train going west was thrown from the track yesterday morning at the Adrian depot, by a misplaced switch, the baggage car and two coaches being derailed. The cars were damaged somewhat, but fortunately no one was hurt.

SEND postal card, with name and address plainly written, to H. C. DAVIS, Ass't General Passenger Agent, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manatoba R. R., St. Paul Minn., for full particulars and sectional map of North Dakota Country. See advertisement headed "320 Acres Free."

We gave Dr. Snyder, the dentist, a call this morning at his office over Strong & McNair's store. He has his rooms very nicely fitted up, repapered &c., and we trust our people will give him a call. The Doctor comes to our town well recommended as a workman and a gentleman.

E. G. Cook received a car load of horses from southern Ohio, near the Kentucky line, yesterday, and as near as we can judge, the stock is as fine as ever has been shipped to Lenawee co. Lon Mills, who always drives a good team, drove away one span yesterday afternoon. Mr. Cook has everything fitted up about his place to facilitate the dealing in horses, and he intends shipping in a number of car loads this season.

"Patience," at the opera house last evening was very fair. The young people rendered their parts as well as could be expected, and the audience was well pleased with the entertainment. The operetta in itself is not calculated to mean anything, but some of the airs are pretty and entertaining. "Over the Garden Wall," by T. H. Robie, was immense. To-night the company will play Olivette, and we understood this is the opera they are best in. Let our people give them a good house and they will be well entertained. The play is full of fun and sweet music.

THE CIRCUIT COURT.

Court convened yesterday morning, Judge Howell presiding.

The case of Russell, & Co. vs. Mary A. Klink was tried in the forenoon.

The case of Thos. Knight vs. Harry Whiting was stricken from the calendar.

In the afternoon the case of The Village of Tecumseh vs. Peter J. Van Fleet came on for trial. This case involves the title to the old cemetery lot in this village. The testimony of the plaintiff has been taken in part, and shows use of the premises by the village from an early day, and that since 1837 when the village was first incorporated, the land had been used and controlled by the corporation, and all its expenses paid by the village up to 1880, when it was taken possession of by the defendant. The case is one of much interest to our citizens, involving, as it does, the question whether an individual can take possession of one of the public squares of the village after 30 year's use, and after large expense has been incurred in fencing and ornamenting the grounds, and the village be remediless in the matter.

COUNTY CONDENSATIONS.

Sleighing is good all over the county.

There are now 109 telephones in the Adrian local exchange.

The Morenci chair factory has just put in a new lathe worth $800.

But little business was transacted in the Circuit Court last week.

Hudson will soon start a telephone exchange with about twenty subscribers.

Whitney & Co., of Hudson, have a wheelbarrow patent suit on their hands.

The plow shaft manufacturing company is to be removed from Hudson to Homer, Mich.

Ex-Sheriff Mason, of Adrian, has sold his [illegible] and Miles Wheeler.

Dave Silvers' corner store in Clinton looks desolate enough with the signs all taken down.

The saw mill at Deerfield has been compelled to shut down, caused by a break in the water wheel.

A forty acre timber lot located only three and one-half miles east of Adrian city is being cleared this winter.

Prof. Estabrook, of Olivet, has been presented with a purse of $25.00 for his labors in the late revival at Hudson.

C. F. Blivin, of Deerfield, has returned from a trip to Grayling. Snow was two and a half feet deep up there.

Young men hang around the hall of the Clinton school house and smoke during the sessions of the musical society.

The Hudson amateurs have been playing the "Ticket of Leave Man." They talk of visiting Tecumseh and Jonesville.

Additional machinery is being placed in Clark's brick and tile yards at Morenci, which will double its capacity next season.

The Adrian Record has secured a telegraph franchise and hereafter it will contain all the latest telegraphic news each day.

Morenci Observer: Failing to get office, we notice that our old friend Stearns has gone to braying and kicking at Gov. Begole with all the persistence of a Jerusalem mule.

Fitts Bros. established a fruit-drying factory at Blissfield last spring.—Factory ran 73 days, using 7,300 bushels of apples, the average price paid being 25 cents a bushel. Thirty-four operators were employed, and the cost of running the establishment reached $3,300.

Hudson Post: The Morenci stage took a sudden start Saturday afternoon at the depot while the driver was a moment away. They took in several streets north of the railroad, and unloaded the main part of the vehicle near the Comstock house ere their progress was stayed.

The Lenawee County Temperance Alliance, which met last week in Adrian, elected the following officers for the ensuing year: C. Quick, president; J. B. Tenbrook, secretary; J. C. Rowley, treasurer. The report also favored keeping the present vice-presidents in office for the following year.

Adrian will probably have an adequate water supply system at an early day. There are two plans proposed: One to let a private corporation put in the works under contract, the city to pay a yearly rental, and the other to have the city itself construct the works. The contract plan will probably be adopted.

Morenci Observer: The loss occasioned by the burning of Peleg Lee's cheese factory last week was probably not far from $3,000, and falls heavily on a very worthy and industrious citizen. It would be doing just the right thing if the patrons, who have been so greatly benefited by the concern, would put their hands in their pockets and aid Peleg in replacing the factory.

Hudson Post: A sleigh load of towns-people returning from a country dance one morning last week, in the wee sma' hours, were overturned at the corner of West Main and Grove sts.—Inhabitants thereabouts thought there had been an earthquake, or the injunction had been taken off the pavement and the whole thing had flew up, but the inevitable female scream reassured them and they settled back to slumbers sweet.

SOMETHING WORTH KNOWING.

The best and most successful mills now days are the Roller Mills. The corrugated rolls make a whiter and a stronger flour than the mill stone. The rolls granulate the flour evenly and do not salve and destroy the life of a portion of it as is done by the old system. Hundreds have found this to be true by using Comfort's Roller Flour. Farmers go twenty, and even twenty five miles to Comfort's Roller Mills to exchange their good wheat for Comfort's Roller Flour. Comfort pays the very highest market price for good sound wheat. Grown and unsound wheat he does not want at any price. Cannot use it. The careful selection of sound wheat and the roller system of milling, with many other improvements which he has adopted, is what makes Comfort's flour so popular."

ANOTHER YEAR.

BY GEO. HENRY HOPKINS.

The embers are dying one by one
On the cold hearth-stone,
The last song has been sung,
The last prayer wrung
From the aching heart,
And we must part.

And as the scroll of '82
Glideth softly through
Our hands, we read its tale
With many a wail;
We only read,
Nor change a word.

It tells of pleasures forever gone
From the heart's hearthstone,
Of wrongs we've done or met,
Of many a regret
That came too late
To make things straight.

It tells of joys whose beginnings were
During one brief year,
And short-lived joys they too;
For scarcely one fresh dew
Lingered in their bloom
Ere they were dead.

There are faces bright we'll meet no more
Save on the shining shore;
And gentle fingers brushed away pain
That never will again;
There are loss to mourn,
When we are gone.

But still God's blessings crown the year
With their sweet cheer;
And the hand that divideth the day
Shall guide all the way
Up through the gloom,
To the shining home.

Tecumseh is bound to have a fair next fall, and don't you forget it.

The Hudson Gazette says that a gentle racket in that town costs fifty dollars or ninety days. No postponement on account of the weather.

John Ed. McCollum, formerly with Dave Silvers at Clinton, has opened a clothing store at Mason in company with C. J. Robison, of Manchester.

The "Robbers' Roost" Association of Adrian held their annual banquet last Thursday evening. Ex-Mayor Navin was not present, either in person or by proxy.

We desire to call attention to the advertisement in another column of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich., the great seedsmen, whose mammoth establishment is one of the sights of the chief city of Michigan. They do the largest business in their trade in the United States, reaching even across the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.—Their annual Seed Catalogue just issued for 1883, replete with information and beautifully illustrated, will be sent free on application.

The North American Review for February opens with a symposium in which six prominent theologians, representing as many religious denominations, give expression to their views upon the question of the "Revision of Creeds." Prof. Alexander Winchell, in an article entitled "The Experiment of Universal Suffrage," institutes a profound inquiry into the essential conditions of stable popular government, which he finds to be substantially virtue and intelligence; but these conditions, he maintains, are absolutely unattainable under our existing political system, where an electorate, either ignorant or vicious, or both, by the mere force of superior numbers, practically nullifies the suffrages of the better and wiser portion of the people, whose right to control the government of the commonwealth is grounded in the very nature of things. Bishop McQuaid writes of "The Decay of Protestantism," and in essaying to prove his thesis, makes a very adroit use of the admissions of protestant writers. "The Political Situation" is the joint title of two articles; the one by Horatio Seymour, the other by Geo. S. Boutwell, who offer their respective views upon the causes of the recent overthrow of the Republican party. An article by Dr. D. A. Sargent, on "Physical Education in Colleges," treats a subject of prime importance to the welfare of the youths in our higher educational institutions. Finally, there are two articles on "The Standard Oil Company," Senator Camden of West Virginia defending that corporation against its assailants, and John C. Welch setting forth the reasons for condemning it as a dangerous monopoly. Published at 30 Layfayette Place, New York.

DIED.

STOCKING—In Tecumseh, Sunday morning, Dec. 24th, 1882, Mrs. Chas. Stocking, sister of James McGillvrae, late of this place.

She was a consistent member of the Presbyterian church; faithful in discharging all the duties of her daily life. Tender and thoughtful in caring for her husband through the failing health and increasing feebleness that came upon him with declining years. Of her it is truly said: "She hath done what she could."

PENNINGTON—In Macon, on Saturday Evening, January 6th, 1883, Mr. John Pennington, aged 69 years, 9 months and 3 days.

The deceased was a native of Perinton, Monroe County, N. Y. He was born on the 3d, of April, 1813. At the age of sixteen he left his native town, and came with his father's family to what was then the Territory of Michigan. The family located in the township of Raisin in 1829, but in the fall of the same year they took up their abode in the township of Macon, being the first settlers in that township. Mr. Pennington assisted to make the first clearing and to raise the first crops in Macon. Often in later life his mind would dwell with satisfaction on the experiences of these early days. The sharing of a log in "the forest primeval" were a frequent topic of conversation.

Ten years after taking up his residence here he was united in marriage to Mary Auletta Herriott, who was a faithful and affectionate companion and helpmeet to him until nearly three years ago, when "death did them part." The deep, deep sorrow caused by her loss and the pathetic yearning of the bereft husband for a re-union in another and better world—a sorrow and a yearning which time did not diminish, but increase—will not soon be forgotten by his acquaintances and friends.

During many years Mr. Pennington led a consistent Christian Life. On Feb. 9th, 1867, he became a member of the Reformed church of Macon village, and at the time of his death he had for some years held the office of Elder in said church. He also donated the land on which the house of worship belonging to the Reformed church, is built.

His last illness was attended with much suffering, which he bore with patience and resignation. The end was peace: God gave his beloved sleep.

Two sons and four daughters, together with a large circle of relatives, are left behind to mourn his departure and to profit by his counsels and example.

The funeral services on the 9th inst., at the family residence were attended by a large number of people. The pastor of the deceased, Rev. J. A. De Spelder, preached the funeral discourse from Heb. 11:13,14.

PENNINGTON—On Wednesday, the 17th of January, 1883, Israel Pennington died at his home in Macon, being exactly of the age of 74 years and 2 months.

Like his brother, mentioned in the obituary notice above, the deceased was born in Perinton, Monroe County, N. Y. He also accompanied his father to Michigan in 1829, sharing the hard labor which, after a brief sojourn in Raisin, procured for the family the first home and the first farm ever settled in Macon township. The next year he bought 240 acres of land (of which however he did not long retain possession) in Dover, which is said to have been the first land taken up in that township. The "History of Lenawee County" states that three years after settling in Michigan Mr. Pennington returned to visit his former New York home, taking passage at Detroit in the steamer "Washington." They encountered a severe storm which wrecked the boat on the Canada shore, but the lives of all the passengers but one were saved. Three years later he again visited the east, stopping at all the prominent cities and remaining for some time at Washington, where he attended daily the sessions of both houses of Congress, and where he saw President Andrew Jackson, Henry Clay, Daniel Webster and other noted men.

Israel Pennington was the first postmaster of Macon, being appointed in 1837, and holding the office twenty five years. In other relations he has also faithfully served his fellowmen and gained their high esteem. He was a delegate to the first Free Soil convention and also to the first Republican convention held in Lenawee County. At many subsequent County conventions and at the State conventions of 1878 and 1880 he was present as a delegate.

He was a benevolent man; a desire to befriend his fellow men or to help them on toward better and happier lives, was a marked element in his character. His benefactions to the poor are held in grateful remembrance. He was a friend of the slave, pleading his cause during the days of oppression and tyranny; and when in recent years the refugees to Kansas were reported to be in distress, the spirit of former days awoke within him, and caused him to arouse the whole community to the relief of those destitute exiles from the South. From first to last he was a thorough temperance man, becoming a member of the first temperance organization in the county; and he also strove to enjoin temperance on others, as well by precept as example.

In 1841 he helped to organize a local society, of which it was a "fundamental principal," (as the records of that year declare) "that all its members shall entirely abstain from the use of intoxicating liquors." As chairman of the executive committee of this society, appears the name of Israel Pennington. Besides he was an ardent lover of nature. The first nursery of the county was set out by him, and to this it was his delight to give attention and labor. During fifteen years he was a director of the County Agricultural Society, and in 1879 attended the American Pomological Convention at Rochester, N. Y., as a delegate. Best of all he was a christian. A devoted member of the Society of Friends, he was also in full sympathy of all true children of God, of whatever ecclesiastical name.

On June 26, 1844, he was married to Mrs. Hannah Dennis, who after many years of pleasant companionship, survives him. Four children of his own, together with Hamilton and Frank Dennis, to whom he has been as a father, live to cherish his memory, grateful amid their sadness.

For the touch of a vanished hand
And a sound of a voice that is still.

The funeral services were held at the Baptist church. At the request of the deceased, Rev. Richard Harkness, of Raisin, and Rev. J. A. De Spelder, of Macon, conducted the exercises. Rev. Jos. Stanley, of Ohio, who was present, also took part in the services.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

There is a flock of capitalists in Washington seeking to lease Indian lands for pasturage purposes.

The star route trial drags its weary length along, and no end of general interest has been disclosed for many days.

Among the nominations sent to the senate by President Arthur was that of George D. Perkins, of the Sioux City Journal, to be marshal of the Northern district of Iowa.

Wells, Fargo & Co. partial guaranteed the safe delivery of the key containing $50,000, and which was stolen, will have to make good that amount to the government.

In the police court, [illegible] were imposed upon [illegible] for neglecting to remove the snow around their sidewalks after a Christmas was noticed for the arrest of Attorney General Brewster.

The national board of trade, composed of representatives from [illegible] and the manufacturers of American [illegible] and access to the [illegible] Washington [illegible].

Senator Beck says that if he [illegible] in his reelection [illegible] he will not accept this having sent to Boston a dispatch which caused his friends to support Hoar although he requested no transfer of votes. Ben Butler has attached his signature to the credentials of Senator Hoar.

The house committee on elections, not having time to settle the legal way the contest against Shelley, of Alabama, will report in favor of sending to that state a commission to take testimony. The Iowa case of Cook against Cutts, which has been under consideration for two years, has been greatly complicated by the alleged mutilation by Cutts of books brought from Iowa on the order of the elections committee.

Ricardo Orozco, chief engineer of Grant's Mexican Southern railway, has arrived in Washington. He states that an extension of six months in constructing the track has been granted by the government. The purpose of his visit is the securing of capital to drain the valley in which the City of Mexico is located, toward which work the government will contribute money and lands. Two companies have been organized in the United States to undertake the work, which is expected to cost $12,000,000.

ARTHUR'S DISAPPROVAL.

The senate bill directing the secretary of the treasury to redeem five bonds stolen from Robert Stodart Wild and destroyed by thieves, having become a law by lapse of time, the president improves the opportunity to express to the senate his disapproval of this class of legislation in the following words: "I have carefully considered the provisions of senate bill No. 561, entitled, 'A bill for the relief of Robert Stodart Wild.' I am of opinion the general statute is sufficiently liberal to provide relief in all proper cases of destroyed United States bonds, and I believe the act above referred to constitutes an evil precedent. It is not however, so objectionable as to call for my formal disapproval, and I have allowed it to become a law under the constitutional provision; contenting myself with communicating to the senate, in which the bill originated, my disapproval of special legislation of this character."

CHICAGO'S RIVAL.

Michigan City harbor was one of the objects provided for in the last river and harbor bill, of which Secretary Lincoln recently reported that the appropriation was not in the interest of commerce and did not benefit navigation. At this Michigan City is wroth. Haryey R. Harris, the mayor of the said-hill town, has written a very fresh letter to Representative Calkins, protesting against the reflection on Michigan City, and presenting the fact that 856 vessels arrived at that port last year, bringing more than 100,000,000 feet of lumber, besides many thousand tons of coal, iron-ore, pig-iron and other commodities, nearly the whole of which trade has been built up within two years. Michigan City is described as a distributing point for six states, and the appropriation of $20,000 for the inner and $60,000 for the outer harbor is cordially approved. Mr. Harris complains that Chicago is jealous of Michigan City; that the lumber interests of the former city have tried to get the railroads to discriminate against the latter; that a congressman from Chicago voted against the appropriation for Michigan City, and, in short, it is the mean envy of the small Illinois town that led to the depreciatory comments of the secretary of war, himself from Chicago, regarding the great metropolis in Indiana. The city clerk certifies that the mayor's letter was read to and approved by the city council.

THE PORTER BILL IN THE HOUSE.

The friends of Gen. Porter are quite hopeful of action in the house this session on the senate bill, and they derive much encouragement from the fact that Gen. Grant is showing a personal interest in the measure, and has carried it so far as to go to the house and personally talk with members and urge them not only to support the measure, but to aid in securing early action. He has seen many members, and this fact has greatly encouraged Gen. Porter's friends, and caused others to entertain strong hopes that the house will pass the bill early this session. On the other hand, opponents of the bill are very active and determined to defeat the bill. Fifteen of the members of the house have formed themselves into what they call a "Porter vigilance committee" to secure the defeat of the bill.—The members of this committee have pledged themselves that one or more of them will be present at all times when the house is in session, and object to the bill being taken up out of its order, unanimous consent being necessary in order to have it done. In this way these members expect to defeat the bill. If these members persist in their course, the only way which the bill can be reached is for the military committee to come in on "suspension day" with a motion to pass the bill, but this will require a two-thirds vote.

PENSIONS.

The house has fixed a day for the consideration of the bill that provides for giving pensions to all surviving soldiers and widows of soldiers who served in the Mexican and Indian wars. This bill includes soldiers of the Mexican war who afterward engaged in the rebellion against the union, and embraces every survivor of the Mexican war, without regard to whether he was wounded or disabled or is now poverty stricken or rolling in wealth. In these respects it gives him a great advantage over the soldiers who suppressed the rebellion, for none of the latter are allowed to be put on the pension rolls unless they suffered some disability in the service of their country. Some of these facts have been pointed out but quite a number of representatives thought it would only be fair to the really meritorious claimants among the Mexican war veterans to give them a chance to be heard. When the bill comes up for consideration it will either be amended so as to exclude ex-confederates and include destitute and disabled veterans, or it will be defeated. Similar bills have been defeated in the senate or house by tacking on an amendment providing that all union soldiers of the war of the rebellion be put upon the pension roll.

A COUNTY'S REMARKABLE PLEA.

Thursday afternoon Mr. C. C. Bonney argued before the supreme court the case of Chapman and others against the county of Douglas, Nebraska. The county bought land for a poor farm and gave certain notes and mortgages for it. Subsequently these were declared invalid and the county would neither pay the price in money nor return the property. This suit was to compel the county to do one or the other. There is no dispute about the facts. Counsel for the county admitted that the county was in possession of the farm and meant to stay in possession, and had never paid for it. The coolness of this proposition nearly took away the breath of some of the members of the court. It goes several degrees below what is called readjustment in the southern states. The only plea made for the county was that the legislature had repealed the venders' lien law, and that the state statute of limitations barred the proceedings. The way a court looks at a case can generally be inferred from the remarks made by the justices, or the questions asked by them. Justice Miller, before whom the case was argued in the circuit court, admitted that the case was not exactly what he supposed it to be. Justice Bradly said that if the county admitted that it had taken the farm and had not paid for it, he should think that disposed of the whole case.—Justice Matthews said he proposed to be very astute, if it were necessary, in order to find some way of giving the former owner of that farm his money or his land. Douglas county is the one in which Omaha is situated. It will have to pay or get out.

TINKERING THE CONSTITUTION.

Representative Moore of Tennessee has prepared a joint resolution which he thinks will give him some reputation and which he proposes to introduce in the house. The pith of the matter is that Mr. Moore proposes to add a new article to the constitution of the United States, the first section of which repeals article X of the constitution and the second section of which gives congress the power to provide by appropriate legislation for the enforcement of the obligation of contracts entered into by every state. Mr. Moore says that he is satisfied that his joint resolution will meet with the approval of congress. He believes that the great majority of the people of the country, of both political parties, concur in the strongest terms the spirit of repudiation which is abroad in a number of the states. The damage, he says, which the effort to repudiate the public debt of his own state has done to Tennessee is beyond calculation. If states refuse to pay their debts, they ought, in Mr. Moore's opinion, to be made to pay. He wants to get his resolution adopted before the supreme court decides the case of New Hampshire vs. Louisiana. If the supreme court holds in that case that one state can sue another, the vitals will be taken out of his resolution. It is hardly possible, however, that Mr. Moore's resolution will meet the sanction of congress.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

JAN. 15.—In the senate, remonstrances were presented against a reduction of the duty on tin plate, against an increase of the duty on china, and against the interference with the duty on cotton-seed oil. Mr. Voorhees offered a petition from Indiana favoring legislation to end the monopoly of the regular school in medical service under the government. Some work was done on the tariff bill.

JAN. 16.—In the senate, Mr. Logan reported favorably the bill to authorize the sale of the Baton Rouge arsenal and grounds. Mr. Dawes reported a measure for the allotment of lands in severalty to the Ottawa Indians. Mr. Hill made a favorable report on the house bill to modify the postal money-order system. The tariff bill was considered at great length.

JAN. 17.—In the senate, Mr. Edmunds introduced a bill to provide for a commission to investigate railroad transportation. The postoffice appropriation bill having been taken up, Mr. Plumb, explained how $185,000 had been expended in fast-mail facilities. The tariff bill consumed the remainder of the session.

JAN. 17.—In the senate, an amendment to the postoffice appropriation bill was agreed to, setting aside $185,000 for fast-mail service. Some items in the tariff bill were considered.

JAN. 18.—In the senate, Mr. Harrison reported a bill authorizing the county of Yankton, Dakota, to issue bonds, but Mr. Garland gave notice that the scheme would be fought by three members of the committee on territories. An adverse report was made on the bill to establish in Kansas a home for indigent soldiers and sailors. A joint resolution was passed for the purchase of steam launches for use in the harbors of Mobile and Galveston.

JAN. 20.—The senate passed the postoffice appropriation bill, after refusing to strike out the provision for a reduction of letter postage to 2 cents, to take effect July 1. Mr. Sherman took occasion to urge the construction of a postal telegraph system, but opposed the purchase of existing lines.

HOUSE.

JAN. 13.—The house passed the pension appropriation bill, which sets aside $86,575,000 besides an unexpended balance of $15,800,000, and the fortification appropriation bill, which covers $825,000. The speaker laid before the house a letter from the clerk, calling attention to the necessity of making some provision for the increased representation in the next congress.

JAN. 15.—In the house Joseph Wheeler was sworn in for the Eighth district of Alabama. A petition was presented from stockholders in the Centennial exposition, asking for an appropriation to pay the deficit. A bill was introduced to convene the next congress on the first Monday of March. Mr. Belmont offered a resolution asking the ways and means committee to report forthwith whether any class of industry requires support from the federal government, in the form of bounty, subsidy, or charity. Mr. Geddes introduced a bill allowing newspapers to be sent free to actual subscribers.—The speaker presented the report of a naval advisory board in favor of completing four iron-clads.

JAN. 16.—The house passed the bill for the removal of causes from state to federal courts. A joint resolution was adopted authorizing the loan of one hundred tents for the competitive drill at Nashville. A bill to pay the state of Massachusetts $239,100 for expenditures for coast defense during the war was defeated. The judiciary committee reported that Thomas H. Majors, the contingent member for Nebraska, gave false information, in which he was aided by state officials. Joseph E. Taylor was sworn in from the Sixteenth district of Ohio. A bill was reported for the erection of a library building on any of the government reservations, to be selected by a commission, the entire cost not to exceed $1,500,000.

JAN. 17.—In the house, Mr. Belford presented a memorial for the establishment of railway communication with Central and South America. Charles T. Doxey was sworn in for the Ninth Indiana district and J. T. Caine as delegate from Utah. A joint resolution was passed for a new mixed commission on Venezuela claims, to sit at Washington. A memorial was presented for the retention of high duties on tin plate.

JAN. 17.—In the house, Mr. Anderson reported back the resolution calling on the secretary of war for certain information in regard to telegraph lines built by the army. Mr. Robeson explained the provisions of the naval appropriation bill. The death of Hon. J. W. Schackleford, of North Carolina, was announced and the house adjourned out of respect to his memory.

JAN. 20.—In the house, consideration of the naval appropriation bill was resumed. Mr. Calkins said he was tired as an American of seeing his country snubbed, laughed at and derided by other nations on account of its weak navy. Mr. Whitthorne attacked the retirement clause and various other provisions. The bill seemed to appropriate $15,000,000, but really it appropriated over $22,000,000, and the next congress must appropriate the deficiency. He mentioned the appropriation of $450,000 for the completion of one monitor by contract, and the provision that no contract shall be entered into for the completion of any of these vessels until the terms thereof are approved by a board as being the best for the government, at a total cost not exceeding the amounts estimated by the advisory board. He believed this clause intended to confer the authority on the secretary of the navy to complete these monitors at a cost of $4,000,000 to $6,000,000.

Hot Work, Hard Fighting with Quick Results!

Last fall a party left New York city in high spirits for a pleasure tour through some of the western states.—They had thrown aside the cares and responsibilities of business for a few weeks, and were determined to enjoy themselves and have a good time generally. "Begone dull care" was their motto, and they intended to act up to it. Everything went as pleasant as could be wished for for a time, until one day, while tamping out in Wisconsin, a spark from the camp fire set the west on a blaze, and the conflagration was so sudden and unexpected, that the whole party came pretty near being cremated, but after great exertion the fire was finally put out, with the loss of a considerable portion of their property. After all was over, one of the party, who was perhaps the most active in his exertions to extinguish the fire, had his hands and wrists severely burned, which he had, not before covered in the excitement of the moment. The pain was intense and he suffered severely. One of the company had been troubled for some time with rheumatism, and by the recommendation of a friend had purchased a bottle before coming west some of the contents of which were still left. It was speedily found and applied to the burned wrists and hands and the relief was instantaneous, for in a few minutes it soothed the pain effectually. That bottle contained Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, and now it is their stand-by as a household remedy. It has no equal for alleviating pain. Sold by all Druggists.

ALMOST AS BAD.

What the Perplexed Physicians do in Cases of Emergency.

"I'll tell you the honest truth," answered the doctor. "Bright's Disease bothers the medical men almost as badly as cancer does. Having passed a certain stage, both point straight to eternity. It may be unprofessional to let out the secret, but whenever a patient comes to me with Bright's Disease, or any kidney trouble acting like it, I tell him to put on BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER without delay."

The doctor spoke by the card. The Capcine goes right to the spot. If you can be helped, the Capcine will do it. Look out for frauds. Is the word CAPCINE cut in the middle of the plaster? If so, you are all right. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York. Highest awards.

One of the topics of conversation hereabouts is the contemplated Fair at Tecumseh. There are several ways of establishing a Fair.

1. By a stock company.
2. By voluntary subscriptions.
3. By villagers.
4. By farmers.
5. By a combination of both.

The experience of this county for the past decade is to the effect that the only direct financial benefit from a fair is in entertaining the crowd, by way of supplying their temporal wants, and the additional trade from such gatherings. Therefore the most feasible plan would seem to be for the leading business men of the village to organize a stock company, purchase and prepare grounds, with necessary buildings, &c. In the mean time soliciting subscriptions of other villagers and the farmers around about, to be paid when the grounds are thus purchased and prepared, and applied in dividends on stock to replace money expended in purchasing and preparing grounds. Nearly every person would give something for the privilege of attending a fair at Tecumseh, and those interested in a business way should give liberally. But neither will give without hope of success; it would be too much like former railroad schemes.

SUICIDE OF JOHN WELLMAN

The sad news has been received at Adrian of the suicide of John Wellman, formerly of that city. On the morning of Jan. 26, a German, named Frederick Wahn living a few miles up the river from Pueblo, Colo., started out in search of some stray cows. In a thicket of bushes and willows he found the body of a dead man. The coroner was notified and an inquest held. The corpse was that of a well dressed young man who had evidently committed suicide. A bullet hole was plain to be seen in front of the head on the right side, just above the temple. There was no beard. The body is thought to have been lying there for five or six weeks. The flesh from the hands had been eaten by the birds. The man was dressed in a suit of navy blue clothes and a light overcoat of good material, white shirt, gold studs, and the head rested on a battered plug hat. In the fleshless fingers of the right hand was clasped a revolver of forty five calibre of the English bull dog pattern. The clothing had to be cut off. In the various pockets were found numerous papers and trinkets. Among other things a lady's gold watch of beautiful pattern, thirty five cents in money, a gold ring, with brilliant missing, and other things. He had many papers and letters in his pockets, but they were only glanced at. The address on most of the letters was "John Wellman, Denver, Colorado." The memorandum book contained a package of cards, on which were printed these words: John H. Wellman, attorney at law, room No. 3, King's block, Denver, Colorado. Among the papers were found several having connection with the Wild West, and other mining properties, and some shares in the Moqui Cinco tunnel, made out to John H. Wellman. The deceased had been a Justice of the Peace of Adrian and at one time was looked upon as a man of much promise. Dissipation was probably the cause of his downfall.

The question relating to holding a fair at Tecumseh the coming fall was generally discussed. The farmers of northern Tecumseh and southern Clinton were pretty well represented, also of Macon. The general feeling was in favor of holding a fair. A preference was given in regard to organization, but it was decided to await the report of the committee sent to Adrian, and also to find out the feeling of the meeting to be held at Tecumseh Feb. 3d.

THE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Annual Meeting—Report of the President and Election of Officers—Looking for a Home.

The Agricultural Society of Lenawee county, held its annual meeting at Adrian on Friday last. President Horton submitted a lengthy report of the condition of the society, from which we gather a few items. After speaking of the organization of the society, he says:

Owing to favorable circumstances we were able to make satisfactory terms of lease of what is now called "Lawrence Park." The amount of rent paid, and the enterprise and interest manifested by Mr. Lawrence, in arranging and fitting the grounds, proved this in many particulars, to be about as well for us as though we owned the grounds. The life of this lease was five years. That checkered period of existence has now expired. A new home must be secured, and taking all things into account, the present is a very important period of our life as a society. We have no home, no place for holding the next fair. The best terms offered by Mr. Lawrence are, perhaps, as low as he can afford. They are certainly more than we can afford to pay. They would, under the most favorable circumstances, leave us at the close of each exhibition, with nothing left, and in case of bad weather, or other contending difficulties, we should fall short of paying expenses and obligations. We cannot buy for we have not the money, and it would be unwise to assume much debt, if our by-laws permit. But two ways present themselves, as calculated to perpetuate the life of the society. First that grounds and buildings can be rented at rates the society can afford to pay, and that with an opportunity to save something under favorable circumstances, and to tide over seasons when the elements are against us, and for the purpose of some day being free from rent. Second, that the society get such aid from some source, as will enable them at once to have a home of their own. With the first arrangement we can live and do much good for the purpose we organized. But we can never be so efficient and aggressive in good works as if we owned our own exhibition grounds. Other ways have been mentioned, but none seem so practical to me as to secure for ourselves a permanent home at once, if it is possible. If only the ground could be secured, the society could safely manage the rest. One of the other ways mentioned is for the society to move about the county, after the plan of the state fair. But few counties are so well calculated for such a method. Blissfield, Tecumseh, Morenci and Hudson are all towns of sufficient importance to entertain the county fair, and probably would give liberally for such visits. I think such propositions have been made. Our by-laws permit us to meet anywhere in the county. Still another plan is that the city, or some company of men, lease to the society on easy terms and long time, suitable ground and the society improve them and put on the permanent fixtures. In such case to use temporary halls and stock sheds, until they could gradually be replaced by substantial structures. To bring nearer the time of building, the county might grant what the state allows. A fortieth or twentieth of a mill tax. If ever assistance was needed it is now, and we must have it if the society ever takes its place among like institutions of the state, where it justly belongs. These are the circumstances. What is to be done? The incoming committee will have these facts to meet.

The election of officers for the coming year was then proceeded with, when the following named persons were chosen:

President—Geo. B. Horton.
Secretary—S. B. Mann.
Treasurer—T. J. Tobey.
Board of Directors—Arthur Bingwood, Woodstock; C. A. Blackman, Cambridge; E. L. Mills, Franklin; W. B. Keyser, Tecumseh; David Woodward, Clinton; Humbolt Pennington, Macon; I. N. Pilbeam, Ridgeway; Jas Cook, Raisin; Cornelius Knapp, Rome; William H. Wiggins, Adrian; John F. Harkness, Rollin; Geo. D. Moore, Hudson; Edward Beals, Dover; H. C. Brattish, Madison; M. H. Cogswell, Blissfield; Geo. V. Sisson, Deerfield; M. T. Cole, Palmyra; J. A. Towler, Riga; Geo. P. Robertson, Ogden; J. H. Cole, Fairfield; Caspar Rorick, Seneca; E. H. Hume, Medina; Calvin Crane, first ward; Andrew Burger, second ward; Dr. Owen, third ward; Joseph R. Bennett, fourth ward.

Under the head of miscellaneous business, J. R. Bennett offered the following resolution which was adopted.

Resolved, That steps be taken by this society to procure the passage of a law by the legislature, authorizing the board of supervisors of this county, to purchase lands on which to establish permanent fair grounds.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer, which, with the exception of a few minor details, agreed fully, showed the finances of the society for the past year to have stood about as follows:

Cash on hand January 27, 1882	$ 688 68
Admission receipts at last fair	2619 41
Cash received from grand stand	55 15
" " " school tickets	95 75

" " " dinner tickets	60
Total Receipts for fair of 1882	$3707 87
Cash paid on Secretary's orders	2919 25
Cash on hand	$ 788 63

The Tecumseh committee appointed for that purpose were present and held an informal conference with the members of the county society. They will submit their report at the opera house meeting next Saturday afternoon.

WHAT LIFE HATH.

[Evangelical Magazine.]

Life hath its morn of years,
When blossoms fall unkindly down
When ripened treasures fade to crown
The summer toil, with children's frown
Looks coldly on our tears.

Life hath its fairless days:
The golden prime [illegible]
That seemed for hopes and pleasures born,
Meant only noon-tide, where and morn
Hushed hary [illegible] of praise.

Life hath its noiseless nighttime;
Its ghost fruitions, its soul-starved prayer,
Sweet for waiting long, whose long care
Drawn [illegible] breathing forth its rare,
Grand speech by love distilled.

Life hath its harvest months,
Its tasselled corn and purpled vine,
Its gathered wheat, [illegible]
Of plenteous repose, broad and sure, rich kine
Full barns for harvest times.

SENATOR JONES' POKER GAME.

How he Lost $70,000 and How he Had his Revenge on the District Club.

George F. Waters, the colored janitor of the city hall, related an incident to-day to a Mail reporter concerning a big poker game in which Senator Jones of Nevada was a player. Waters had been in the employ of certain congressmen around the capitol at Washington for many years, and his statement may be accepted as true. It was several years ago, before the millionaire had become thoroughly posted in the ways of Washington society. Almost before he had comfortably settled in his seat in the senate he was introduced into the District club, of which Boss Shepherd was a prominent member. Poker at that time was the prominent recreation of the club, and Jones was induced to take a hand. Although a good poker player, he retired from the game a loser to the amount of $70,000. The senator, having a few silver mines at his back for pocket money, was game, and did not allow the least expression of chagrin or distrust to escape him.

The next morning he telegraphed to one of the most expert card sharps in Virginia City. Eight days thereafter the gambler arrived in Washington dressed in a very expensive suit of clothes and sporting a small fortune in the way of diamonds. Jones introduced him to the club as a mining millionaire from Nevada, and the star-route frauds and navy thieves immediately made arrangements to pluck him. He accepted the invitation to play. The stakes ran high and the spurious millionaire was well supplied with Jones' money. At the end of the tournament the stranger rose from the table the winner of $80,000 of the clubs. It was a severe blow to the gamesters, but they made the people of the United States pay it back to them indirectly and in short order. Jones did kill the swag with his friend, and never was not in the chair once again.

Nat Goodwin's Notions.

Spirit of The Times.

"I have had no time," writes Nat Goodwin, "to struggle with grammar and join McCullough and the other great tragedians in The North American Review in publishing my views on the subject of 'Success of the Stage.' Besides, I prefer another medium of communicating the thoughts which are too much for me in the world at large. To a beginner, I should advise one of two things. First, he may join a good old stock company, if he can find one in the woods anywhere, and remain a member of it for about forty years. By that time he will have so worked himself up as to receive a living salary, support stars and be prepared for a testimonial on the fiftieth anniversary, whacking up with the manager, of course. This reward of merit virtually amounts to a half clear benefit every thirty years. If very healthy and successful the actor may catch two of them and die. Second, if the beginner does not fancy that way, he can join some variety show; purchase a sparkling comic song from some good writer; have it set to music; get W. Carleton, Charles Gayler, McDonald or McCloskey to write a plot around the song, and he will be engaged for a forty weeks season, and may be long on, at a high salary. But if the beginner takes the second way, he must never own that success was easy. I find that all the really great actors, who have been boosted to the top of the tree by chance, notoriety or money, are very fond of referring to their days and nights of toil and struggle, and of hinting how very hard they work now. I have had toils and struggles and hard work myself; but it was generally after the performance was over, and I might better have been at home in bed. The midnight oil theory is beautiful; but I never saw it in practice, did you? It is so easy to study and struggle when you feel the Bank of California at your back. I believe than an actor should study acting; attend to his business like other people, and, when he draws a prize in the lottery of the profession, thank heaven for it; endeavor to deserve it, and keep quiet about the price of midnight oil, and his wrestles with the wick. The Review may copy."

The Grand Divisions of a Newspaper.

Cincinnati Enquirer.

If you look at a newspaper you will observe that it is divided into a few departments, broadly distinguished from each other. These departments are: First, the record of cases at law, usually embraced under the head of court news. Second, the list of prices—that is, the page of financial and commercial matter, and whatever pertains to trade throughout the paper. Third, the leader, that is, the expression of opinion on political affairs which the editor of the paper makes, whether he chooses to make it in long-winded essays or in short, crisp paragraphs. Fourth, the general news, which modern convenience has divided into local, telegraphic, correspondence and miscellany—that is, selections from other newspapers, but which in point of origin are practically identical. Cincinnati news written for a Cincinnati paper is local; telegraphed to Chicago it becomes a dispatch; rehashed in a letter to New York it becomes correspondence; clipped and credited, or uncredited, in a London paper, it becomes miscellany. Births, deaths and marriage notices were of old considered very important events, and they form a distinct and very prominent feature of the modern newspaper, but journalistic law now places them among those matters of purely personal interest, which should be paid for by the people who insert them.

It's Natural.

Chicago News.

The west side is bending forward in an attitude of intense listening. A scandal, partly smothered but threatening to break forth fiercely, is reported in one of the churches, and expectation is on tip-toe.

"What a shame," said one good brother to another yesterday, "what a shame that such a thing should get into the newspapers. I never could understand this disgusting curiosity."

"Nor I," returned the other. "What's the latest about the matter?"

And then these two old coons fell into discussing the case and to expressing opinions like a couple of ancient women at a tea party.

The Montreal Man's Experience.

A Montreal man sent several barrels of Canadian apples to Queen Victoria, Gladstone, Lord Dufferin and Gen. Wolseley. He received letters of acceptance from all except the queen, whose secretary wrote: "Her majesty commands me to say that she fully appreciates your kindness in sending the apples, but it is a rule that favors of this nature shall not be accepted. However, on account of their perishable nature, the apples cannot be returned." What became of them was not explained.

A Conscientious Man's Testimony.

Rev. Isaac Aiken, Pittsburgh, Pa., writes: I take great pleasure in stating that, after having suffered with Dyspepsia for about fifteen years, I have been entirely cured by the use of Coe's Dyspepsia Cure. For years I knew not what it was to pass five hours without intense pain. My case was considered so marvellous that, for a time, it was feared it might be fictitious, but I am now so well convinced that I have been not merely relieved, but permanently cured, that I can conscientiously recommend Coe's Dyspepsia Cure to all sufferers of Dyspepsia.

In the Summer Time.

Elephus Lyon, of Nelson, Madison Co., N. Y., says: I was afflicted with Diarrhœa three years ago, which resisted all the remedies of several physicians, and confined me to my bed for three or four months, when I applied to Dr. Ford for advice. He gave me a bottle of his Tonic Cordial, and in a week I was [illegible] and have not been to my bed since.

From Major Doyle, Military Instructor, Mt. Pleasant Academy, Sing Sing, N. Y.: During the very cold weather I was suffering with Catarrh. My head and throat ached so severely that I was obliged to give up everything and keep quiet. Ely's Cream Balm was suggested. Within an hour from the first application I felt relieved, the pain began to subside. In two days was entirely cured. W. A. Downs. Feb. 15, 1881.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

TECUMSEH, MICH., FEB. 4, 1888.

Nothing new has transpired in the Senatorial contest at Lansing. Perry's chances seem to be growing no better every day.

No railroad horror has been recorded in the newspapers for three days. If this thing keeps on the coroners will soon be out of business.

The Senatorial dead lock in Colorado has been broken. The members of the legislature can now spend their time eating peanuts and enjoying their railroad passes.

The real effect of a protective tariff is to take money from one man's pocket by act of law and put it into another man's pocket. Free trade says: A fair field and no favor and let the best man win.

The Morenci Observer asks: "What is the great lever that shoves the newspaper forward?" Well, in our case it is the dollar and a half a year in advance." Bro. Allen's head is level and no mistake.

Prof. Ewing, of Ionia, has issued an order that no teacher in the city schools shall become a member of any whist club. The next thing will be a decree excluding them from the privilege of attending protracted meetings.

Adrian is agitated over a remarkable prayer cure in the case of Miss Lottie Holmes. The remarkable feature of the case is that for one week prior to her alleged recovery she has taken regular doses of Warner's Kidney and Liver Cure.

The fact is elicited by the coroner's inquest that the telegraph wires strung around the Newhall House prevented the use of firemen's ladders. Could the ladders have been used many more lives would have been saved. Put the telegraph wires under ground.

The combat deepens; on ye brave. The champions of Senator Ferry having been refused the use of the Republican newspaper, have started a paper of their own called the "Daily Observer." It is unnecessary to state that the observations of the new organ indicate the election of Ferry.

Let Congress revise the tariff and internal revenue laws to bring about an equitable and just reduction of the revenue to the extent of one hundred millions annually. This of itself will end river and harbor steals, check outrageous appropriations, kill off the lobby, and send adrift an army of useless office holders.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., has improved on the prevailing system of hotel, railroad and steamboat accidents. That city is located over a coal mine. The earth caved in the other day, precipitating several blocks of buildings down into the mine. Thus the good people of that city are sent to purgatory while quietly sitting at their own firesides.

The constitution guarantees to every man the enjoyment of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." One of the essentials of liberty is the privilege of selling one's property at the highest price and buying one's goods at the lowest price. This is the essence of free trade. Any infringement of this liberty, except for extraordinary reasons, is tyranny.

As an illustration of the manner in which the lobby interests log roll their pet projects through Congress this little bit of congressional history from the Evening News hits the mark exactly:

Miller's frankness was the result of a direct bargain between himself and Representative Russell, of Massachusetts, and Senator Sherman, of Ohio. Russell is interested in the manufacture of a certain kind of cotton goods on which the Senate bill reduced the tariff. Miller's wood pulp had been put on the free list in the house bill. Sherman was anxious to have the whisky bill passed. The result of the agreement was that Russell, a member of the ways and means committee of the house, had wood pulp restored to the tariff list in the house bill; Miller secured the increase of the tariff on Russell's cotton goods in the senate bill, Sherman voting for it; Sherman secured miller's vote in the senate for his whisky bill, and expects Russell to aid it by his vote and influence in the house. It was this bargain that wood pulp Miller had in mind when he practically said to the protectionists of the senate: "We know our bargain and we must now stand together."

THE WAGES OF WORKINGMEN.

The following facts demonstrate that the wages of workingmen are not increased by a protective tariff. In England, where the policy of free trade has been adopted, the wages of laborers have been higher than where the system of protection prevailed. In Germany, where there is a protective tariff, wages are lower than in countries without a tariff or with a tariff for revenue only. The average wages of American laborers since the adoption of the present tariff have, for the ten years past, been less, allowing for the difference in currency, than under the revenue tariff for the ten years preceding 1860.

THE RESULTS OF PROTECTION.

The effect of "protection" upon trade and manufactures can be predicted. It may bring large profits to those engaged in manufacturing that which is assumed to be protected, it soon, by these very profits, invites many persons into the business, from which result over production, overstocking the market, low prices, reduction of hours of labor, shutting down, at least temporarily, all workshops, embarrassment of proprietors, and in many instances final bankruptcy, in which the large profits made at first are swallowed up, and the large wages at first paid workingmen, if saved up at all, are consumed in waiting for a business revival, which, if it does come, will ever be attended by the same consequences.

THE QUESTION OF TAX-REFORM.

Commenting on the action of the protectionists in opposing reform and fighting it off, the New York Herald says:

If the present tax system is right, let its friends defend it, and prove to the country that it should not be changed. If it is wrong, as so large a part of the country has come to feel, then it is the immediate and imperative duty of Congress to amend it. But what the advocates of the present system are doing is to smother and crush discussion even of the evils which the taxpayers feel. "Not only will we not allow reform," they say, "we will use our superiority in votes even to prevent you from discussing reform, or the evils which make reform necessary. You shall not tell the country that we are wrong," they add; "we will keep you silent on this subject, and meantime we will go on and distribute the surplus, wrung from the people, to subsidy mongers and jobbers of all kinds, and when it is all given out there will be no surplus revenue for you to talk about."

There is the attitude of the extreme protectionists in the House; and they will not change it unless the people demand it. Of course these cormorants are unwise. That kind always are short sighted. They do not see that to resist all reform is to dam up the demand for reform for a while, only that it may by and by break down all obstructions and sweep away good and bad legislation together. Sensible protectionists ought to welcome and demand discussion, and action as well, now, at once; for just now the public mind will be content with moderate reform. By and by it will demand more, and sweep away, indignantly, the whole system which is so misused to the public injury.

HOW HE VOTED FOR THOMAS W.

Dundee last fall contributed to the legislature a young but shrewd and spirited member named French. In that body he proved one of the implacable anti-Ferry men who for a long time firmly held out against the persuasions of the taffy gang of Ferry's band and even resisted like a Spartan, the bamboozling and bluster of "Boss Beal." On Tuesday of last week, however, French, after having been labored with a couple of hours by "Boss Beal" in the latter's peculiarly effective way, and hearing described the awful consequences of opposing Thomas W. Ferry, seemed to weaken, and finally told Beal that the next day he would vote for Thomas W.

"God bless you, my boy, shake!" said Beal extending his hand. "Now you will stick to that will you?"

"Stick!" said French, "of course I will, I have given you my word to vote for Thomas W. to-morrow, and I keep my word."

Beal gratefully wrung the representative's hand once more and withdrew to acquaint the Ferry crowd of French's change of heart.

"The break is coming," said Beal gleefully. "It will begin to-morrow. French has caved and will be with us on the next ballot."

There were sounds of a carousal and Bacchanalian revelry heard from the Ferry headquarters that night, and a better feeling lot of fellows could not have been found in Lansing. Some of the anti-Ferry men heard about it and they hurried in alarm to French, who quietly told them to keep on their small clothes.

Next day when the ballot was being taken Beal edged up near to his convert, to brace up his strength and spur him on to an open profession of his new faith.

At last the clerk called, "Mr. French."

That gentleman rose and slowly, distinctly articulated his choice.

"Thomas W.," and then gazing all around the gallery, "Palmer!" concluded the representative from Dundee.

The galleries rang with applause and something like a rat-trap was heard to snap.

It was Beal's jaw that had fallen. And yet French had kept his promise.

THE NEW NORTH-WEST.

The Holiday Season and Other Notes from Oregon.

GERVAIS, OR., Jan. 2, 1888.

ED. HERALD:

So many friends from the old home have expressed a desire to hear something about the Holiday season in the far northwest that it seems impossible to gratify all, save through the columns of your widely read paper.

Here, as elsewhere, Christmas is a time of happy home gatherings, with joyous preparation and delightful secrecy. Not less than the citizens of the eastern town, does the Portlander loiter before the splendid display of jewels or millinery, with thoughts intent on the ladies of his household, see him himself irresistibly attracted by the cheerful din of the toy shops. The small boy goes wild over the automatic toys and seductive bicycles, while rosy little girls gaze in ecstacy over the most charmingly dressed dolls. If anyone fails to recognize these signs of the times, he cannot mistake the meaning of the continuous procession of fir trees traversing the streets to their destination, some in church basements, many to decorate spacious bow windows, and some even crowded into the small windows of the tiniest homes. The pretty, straight young firs; not an Oregonian, native or naturalized, but loves them, unless it be the discontented individual whom I once heard remark that the *fur*ther he was from them the better. In the course of time these transplanted trees blossom with pop corn, and bear wonderful fruit very similar to that of Michigan evergreens, except that here the gorgeous sleds and bright skates are conspicuous by their absense.

Probably not many people living above the 46th degree of latitude saw a Christmas day so pleasant that the peppermints were springing up, and the sunny atmosphere was like a day in spring. But we have had that experience in the Willamette Valley. One could not but think of the old hymn which makes December as pleasant as May. The green grass, growing grain and singing birds made it hard to recognize old Father Christmas, sans fur, bells and icicled crown. But the New Year comes on with a thin coat of ice and a chilly breath. It is with a good deal of complacency that the people of Oregon review the events of the past year and note the good prospects for the future. The great enterprises that have been undertaken have made very satisfactory progress. The gap in the line of the Northern Pacific railroad is rapidly closing. From the western end the work is pushing well into the limits of the Territory of Montana, and we are given to understand that the road will be completed in about eight months.

Another road called the Oregon Short Line is hastening to completion with the N. P., via the Baker City branch, and thus constitutes another direct route to the east. Besides these, early in 1884, we may expect connection with California by extension of the Oregon & California line, or what is commonly termed the Valley road, running south. And by the way, not the least confusing thing to the newcomer here are such local expressions as "down the road," meaning north, and "up south." At the completion of the roads above mentioned, we shall have three connections by rail with the wide world. The construction of branches will no doubt go on rapidly, developing many fine sections of country. This complete system of railroads, supplemented with our facilities for navigation, promises a wonderfu future to a land of great natural resources.

The little town of Gervais, near where we are located is an enterprising place, distant about forty miles from Portland on the O. & C. R. R. It is an excellent market, and supports three dealers in general merchandise, each of whom owns a large grain warehouse, three hotels, two meat markets, and all the enterprises usual in such a place. It has rather a peculiar history, being a compound of the villages of St. Louis, Belpassar and Euconda, the orthography of the latter somewhat doubtful, as it is usually pronounced with a broad O-conda. When the road was surveyed through this place, the three towns simply moved their respective houses across the prairie to the more favorite site. It is favored, certainly, with a fine view. Westward the course of the Willamette is outlined for many miles by the hills of Yamhill Co., green or bright, golden with grain throughout the summer and autumn. To the east beyond the heavy fir timber, rise the Cascade Mts.; north and south the Valley opens, revealing miles of fertile cultivated prairie dotted with towns. All this in summer: during the winter months, we have some pleasant weeks, but for the most part a gray mist curtains the hills and peaks, and overhangs the plains below; ready at a moment's notice to send sharp sprinkles of rain dashed through with sunshine, or to sustain a monotonous drip playfully called "Oregon mist."

Appropos of the rain, I read an item not long since in an eastern paper, which stated that Portland, Or., has the greatest wealth in proportion to its size of any city in the United States, supposedly because it rained so much that the women could not get out to spend the money. The theory is ingenious, but unfortunately its author was too far from the scene of action. The truth is, the streets never seem more lively than on a rainy afternoon when ladies and children encased in gossamer cloaks, peer with bright contented faces from underneath huge umbrellas. C. J. H.

Malaria is a broad name for many diseases—all originating in blood poisoning. Bilious fever, the typhus and typhoid fevers and chills and fever are prominent members of the family. Malaria defies alike the builders, the plumbers and the physicians. Despairing of ordinary treatment, the latter almost unanimously recommend BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER as the greatest anti-malarial specific of the age. These plasters act upon the liver, spleen, bowels and kidneys.

Worn over the region of the liver, and upon the back over the kidneys, they ward off malaria like an armor. No other plasters do this.

When you purchase, satisfy yourself that the word CAPCINE is cut in the center of the plaster.

THE VILLAGE VS. VAN VLEET.

This case, which was on trial last week when the HERALD went to press, was brought to a close on Tuesday afternoon. The suit was closely and thoroughly contested at every point, and resulted in a verdict for the village, the jury only being out a few minutes, a result that must be gratifying to this community. A large number of our citizens attended the trial as witnesses, and several were in Adrian a day or two simply by reason of the interest they felt in the result.

The suit developed many incidents connected with the early history of the village which were of much interest. The testimony brought out upon the trial showed that the remains of at least one hundred and fifty of the early pioneers and their families still rest in this park, known as the "old cemetery," the exact location of whose bodies cannot now be marked. John McConnell, who has officiated as village sexton for the past forty-four years, testified that the following names are among those buried there, nearly all of whom he buried, and over whose grave no stone or monument has ever been erected:

Dr. Stowell, Amos Winard, Philip Gilman, Samuel Willard, Sr., Samuel Willard, Jr., sister-in-law of Timothy Mitchell, infant child of Judge Stacy, two children of Luke Pennock, two children of E. Wilson, a stranger who died at Mrs. Thorp's, David Orr, died at A. Sherman's, wife of James Murter, Mrs. Grow, Mrs. Hannah Butler, Black David, Wm. Boulton, a boy died at starch factory, a boy called DeShay, Geo. Springer, Mrs. Harrison, Thomas Fleming, Ralph Stocking, Wm Balton, Jerry Bowen, two children of P. Van Ness, two children of John Traynor, two children of John Farleman, a man who hung himself in Brownville, boy named Moore, Joseph Harris, child of A. Stearns.

In the year 1857 Gen. Brown gave a deed of the old cemetery ground to the village of Tecumseh. The consideration for the same was that the village should set apart a lot in the new cemetery to each of the families of Gen. Brown and Musgrove Evans and remove the deceased members of those families from the old cemetery to the new lots at the expense of the village. This consideration was faithfully carried out on the part of the village. It was on this deed chiefly that the village claimed title to the old cemetery park. There appear to be abundant reasons why the village authorities should defend their title to this property against individual claimants, and we think the general verdict will be that the council have done no more than their official duty required of them in this matter.

The charge of Judge Howell to the jury is highly spoken of by all who heard it, not only for the legal learning displayed in his discussion of the legal points involved, but for its clearness and judicial fairness in their presentation to the jury. Judge Howell is gaining a fine reputation among the members of the bar as an able and impartial judge. A few years' experience will place him among the most eminent of our circuit judges.

The verdict of the jury appears to give very general satisfaction to our citizens although it was generally expected that the result would be as it has been. We have not learned whether Mr. Van Vleet intends to carry the case to a higher court.

W. A. Mestayer, the jolly genius of comedy, appeared at the Academy of Music last night, surrounded by a jolly company, in the entertainment called "Tourists in the Pullman Car," for want of a better name for something that is not an opera, comedy, burlesque, tragedy, or anything else in particular, and which has one act in Newport, and another act somewhere else on the road. The idea of the "Tourists" is to make as much fun for a dollar as any one person can take during an evening. The "Tourists" in short, present the best organization of the kind that has ever been seen here. It captured the audience last night, and went well throughout.

This celebrated troupe will appear at Adrian, Saturday evening next, Feb. 3rd.

The local telegraph company will meet at the office of Drs. House & Jones next Monday evening at seven o'clock.

"Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty, let the whole earth be filled with thy glory." Come one, come all.

We understand that the Heck Bros. have for some time been contemplating the erection of a grain elevator in the vicinity of their mill. The mill itself is inadequate to hold the grain which they could and should have on hand at certain seasons of the year, while by having a large storage warehouse they could put additional machinery into their mill and thus increase its capacity. They have finally determined to construct an elevator in the spring with a capacity of 50,000 bushels of wheat.

Tuesday afternoon about 4 o'clock while two men were carrying a ladle of molten iron from one building to another, at the Peninsular car works at Adrian, they slipped and the iron was spilled on the icy pavement. It instantly exploded with terrible force, throwing one of them, John Ray, a young unmarried man, through a window 10 feet from the ground, laying bare his backbone and badly burning him about the breast and abdomen. The other man, Adelbert Smith, is horribly and perhaps fatally burned, while a third man was badly burned about the head. The building was set on fire, and the department was called out, but the flames were soon extinguished.

RAILROAD NOTES.

The large square timber for the new railroad bridge across the Raisin in this village is partly delivered, and will all be on the ground within a few days. The piles for the bridge are mostly driven.

The severe weather of the past few days has interfered considerably with the progress of grading. But little was done in that direction last week.

Gangs of men have started work in the vicinity of Addison, and the timber is being cleared from the land on those farms where the line runs through timbered lots.

The company advertise for 100,000 ties to be delivered at points in this county. People having ties to sell will call for particulars on E. C. Baird, Ass't Engineer, at Tecumseh.

It is rumored that not a depot on the line will be located until the iron shall be laid.

The construction gang at Montieth are using a brand new 40-ton engine.

Iron was laid on a section of the road near Monteith belonging to John Monteith on Sunday of last week. The company purchased the old Coldwater and Mansfield roadbed of the Pennsylvania Central company, which foreclosed a mortgage on it some time ago. Mr. Monteith claimed that he had never been paid for the right of way, and to avoid an injunction the T. & M. put the iron down Sunday, finishing at 3:30 P.M. The injunction was served Monday morning. Mr. Monteith owns another piece of land three and a-half miles this side of the village, at Gun River, and may make another effort to stop the work of ironing at that place. An injunction can have no effect on the running of trains if the iron is once laid. The difficulty is to avoid an injunction served on the gang stopping the work of ironing.

COUNTY CONDENSATIONS.

Deerfield has a bal masque to-night.

The Clinton Woolen Factory shut down two days last week.

Ogden is exporting large quantities of ship timber this winter.

Morenci is stricken with another severe attack of the Dakota fever.

Hon. John K. Boies, of Hudson, has returned from his Washington trip.

The T. & A. A. railway bridge at Dundee is being strengthened and repaired.

The Petersburg School building was damaged by fire last week to the amount of $200.

Weaver, of Hudson, is buying timber to weave out 5,000 new wheelbarrows next season.

The hammer caught on the chair, and the gun discharged its load into the young man's face, killing him almost instantly. Dakin was a young man of industrious habits and had been employed in the Palmyra paper mill. The accident caused great excitement in Palmyra.

A DAY'S TRIP TO ANN ARBOR.

Last Friday morning we took the 8 A.M. train at Chicago st., sped to the Junction in good time, changed to the Monroe train and alighted at the T. & A. A. crossing. After half an hour's halt at this point, the Ann Arbor train arrived and we took that train for the University city. The "Toledo, Ann Arbor & Grand Trunk" as the road is now called, is rapidly taking a position as one of the leading railroads of Michigan. Two passenger trains each day run between Toledo and South Lyons, which are all well patronized, and the road is gaining a large and lucrative freight traffic. The politeness and attention to the comfort of the passengers shown by the train officials makes one feel at home at once. After a man has enjoyed one ride on the road he looks forward to the next route again at the first opportunity.

Arriving at Ann Arbor at 10:30 A.M., we proceeded directly to Prof. Frothingham's office and transacted our business there before noon. In addition to his professional cases the Doctor now has the Register newspaper on his hands, having purchased the entire property, of which he formerly owned only a share, consequently he has plenty of work to keep him busy. And, by the way, the Register has improved very decidedly under his management. It is without doubt the best newspaper published at Ann Arbor to-day.

We then made Judge N. W. Cheever a call. Judge Cheever prepared for the University at our High school during Prof. Lawton's administration, went through college, studied law, acquired a lucrative practice, and has been Judge of Probate of Washtenaw county for four years. He is the author of a work on Probate Practice, which is extensively used in this state. The Judge has a beautiful home in the Southern part of the city, distant about two blocks from the University campus, where we enjoyed his hospitality at dinner.

We next called at Fred Wood's boarding place, expecting to have a chat with him, but he was attending lectures and hence that visit was cut short. After taking a stroll through the new museum building and down State and Huron streets to the Cook House, we took the 3:30 train on the T. & A. A. road and came down to Milan. Getting off at the Wabash Junction, the first man we met was Albert Hayden, and we accompanied him over to the stave factory. They have been putting in full time at the factory since Jan. 1st, except on Monday and Tuesday of last week when they shut down to keep from freezing. They are now finishing up about ten cords of heading and twenty-one cords of bolts per day. The heading is mostly sold in New York and the staves in St. Louis. The factory is located but a few rods from the Wabash depot, and convenient to both railroads. A. S. Hayden's family occupy a fine house in the northern portion of the village. He seems to like the location and business, and is evidently prospering. Joe Turner, who is one of the main spokes in the wheel at the factory, occupies a nice little house but a few rods from the railroad junction, and his folks seem to be well satisfied with their new home. At 6:30 the Wabash train came along on which we rode to Britton, where we were met by "Jap" with the horse and cutter, and we had a jolly sleigh ride home. A cup of tea and a quarter section of gingerbread put us in trim for a good night's rest.

SOMETHING WORTH KNOWING

The best and most successful mills now days are the Roller Mills. The corrugated rolls make a whiter and a stronger flour than the mill stone. The rolls granulate the flour evenly and do not salve and destroy the life of a portion of it as is done by the old system. Hundreds have found this to be true by using Comfort's Roller Flour. Farmers go twenty and even twenty-five miles to Comfort's Roller Mills to exchange their good wheat for Comfort's Roller Flour. Comfort pays the very highest market price for good sound wheat. Grown mud unsound wheat he does not want at any price. Cannot use it. The careful selection of sound wheat and the roller system of milling, with many other improvements which he has adopted, is what makes Comfort's flour so popular."

New Drug Store.

Last Tuesday we dropped into Marks & Russell's new drug store in the Hewitt block to see what was going on in improvement there, and what kind of a place they had. The gentlemen have a very neat store, one side devoted to drugs and the other to groceries, and with their experience in business we have no doubt of their success. The store is newly painted, refitted and clean, and makes one of the best business places in town.

To the Citizens of Tecumseh

EDITOR HERALD:

I feel that the citizens of Tecumseh are under great obligations to village attorney E. B. Wood and to Judge C. A. Stacy for the very able manner in which they managed our case in court. I overheard lawyers commenting upon it and all agreed that the suit was conducted on our part in a thoroughly systematic and efficient manner throughout.

DIED.

DRAKE. At Cambridge, Mich., Jan. 27, Mr. John B. Drake, one of the early pioneers of Lenawee Co.

Mr. Drake was borne May 3d, 1812, in Allamuchy township, Warren Co., N. J. In his native state he learned the trade of a stone mason, which was a special benefit to him in this county. Nov. 26, 1836, he was married to Miss Clarissa Sheeler; and in the year 1837 moved with his wife to Cambridge. Here he bought of the writer of this sketch 40 acres of land, and erected a log house on the bank of Dewey's lake. At that time he had but one neighbor within a mile, and it was over a mile to the nearest laid out road from his land. Mr. Drake has always been a very industrious citizen, adding 120 acres of land to his first purchase, with large improvements and good farm buildings. After over a year's illness, to which he seemed composedly resigned, he leaves his home of 45 years and six grown up children, and a dutiful wife to mourn the loss of a good husband. A citizen has gone who has been a great help in the improvement of the town.

Rush's Medical Association:

Doctors—The three bottles of Dr. Rush's Regulator I ordered were received by express last week. I have taken nearly one bottle, and am truly satisfied with the result. For over two years I have been troubled with sharp pain at my heart. My physician, upon examination, pronounced enlargement of the heart, and was unable to say how soon it would be all over with me. The trouble grew worse, and became convinced that I could not live. While in New York City last week, I called on one of the most prominent physicians there, who charged me $5 for an examination, and then recommended your "Regulator." Knowing you to be a regular Medical Association, and not a patent medicine scheme, I ordered the three bottles. I have not been troubled since I commenced taking it, but shall continue and take the entire three bottles, so as to obtain a permanent cure. You have my sincere thanks. It is announced from Kansas City that a colony of thirty families will leave Monday for Indian Territory, led by Captain B. S. Walden, the last man of Payne's party to leave when driven out by federal troops two years ago. It is said that five colonies will be met at Coffeyville, and that a march will be made 120 miles into the territory.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

President Arthur openly declares that unless the revenue from the tariff is largely reduced he will call another session of congress.

A deed recorded Thursday conveyed to Theodore N. Valle the house and lots of Thomas J. Brady and wife, near Farragut square, the alleged consideration being $12,000.

Secretary Teller has concluded not to permit the ratification of leases of lands in Indian Territory to cattle men, whether made by individual Indians or by the councils.—Pasturage privileges from season to season can still be granted.

General Grant is said to have been surprised at the opposition of congressmen to the clauses of the proposed commercial treaty with Mexico. It seems certain that no further concessions can be obtained from that country, and that the scheme will fail.

Twenty Republican members held a conference Thursday and agreed upon a course of proceeding calculated to further the passage of the tariff bill. Twenty democratic senators gathered and resolved to avoid the appearance of obstructing legislation. The measure

The house agricultural committee at Washington has agreed to report favorably a bill to create nine commissioners to investigate the movement of products to market, the cost of their transportation to the carrier, and the charges made to the shipper.

The marquis of Lorne on Saturday occupied a seat in the members' gallery of the house with Speaker Keifer while Mr. McKinley spoke on the degradation of labor in England. An introduction to members followed, when the visitor was conducted to the senate chamber and presented to leading senators.

Red Cloud claims that Gen. Crook seized and sold for $5,000 a large number of Indian ponies, the agreement being that the money was to be expended for cows for his tribe, which was not done. A search of the records of the Indian bureau proved fruitless, and an explanation will be asked from those who made the sale. A similar transaction at Cheyenne agency was faithfully carried out.

THE NEXT HOUSE.

Clerk McPherson has made up the roll of the next house. All the districts are represented except the Sixth Louisiana, Second Mississippi and Third North Carolina. The Louisiana and North Carolina representatives have died since the elections last fall. In the Mississippi case Mr. Manning, who holds the certificate, has asked that his name be not put on the roll until it is determined whether Chalmers or he is to represent the district.

THE NAVY.

All of the general legislation introduced in the naval appropriation bill was stricken out by the house, except that relating to commodores. The naval officers and their sisters, cousins, and aunts, who were in the galleries were delighted with the outcome of the controversy, and immediately deserted the capitol. The bill as it stands now abolishes the rank of commodore and paymaster by prohibiting promotions or appointments to these grades, and providing that both grades shall cease to exist when the present incumbents die or resign or are retired.

A RAILROAD BILL.

The subcommittee of the senate committee on railways, appointed a month ago to consider and report upon Senator Miller's bill to consolidate certain lines of railway with the Southern Pacific railway, so that the roads leading from New Orleans to the Pacific coast should constitute one line, met for the first time Tuesday. The committee discussed the bill at considerable length; and, while no action was taken the unanimous opinion of the committee appeared to be that no consolidation should be permitted unless the roads agreed to accept a freight and passenger rate that would be satisfactory to the people along the lines of the road. If congress ever intends to control interstate commerce, this bill of Senator Miller's presents a good opportunity to make a beginning. The roads interested are asking a favor, and, if they get what they want, ought to be ready to give something in return.

THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

A great many anxious inquiries are heard here about the president's purpose in regard to the civil-service commissioners whom he is called upon to appoint, under the Pendleton bill, recently signed. There are many gentlemen in Washington ready, and even eager, to serve on this commission, and it is an interesting fact that one of them, an intelligent literary man, with a good knowledge of government affairs, has talked with his friends about the expediency of securing signatures to a letter to the president urging him to appoint his servant to a place. The [illegible] a letter was dropped when the [illegible] was pointed out [illegible] taking place under the Pendleton bill, which directly [illegible] "influence" in obtaining appointments. The president, it is said, has considered the subject of the nomination [illegible] upon anyone, and does not [illegible] upon him [illegible] commission [illegible] important a work.

AGITATION OF LAWS ON THE TARIFF.

The session is expected to members of congress the interest he feels in the pending propositions to reduce internal and custom revenues. He says, in terms, that he deems it very important that such reductions as he mentioned in his message should be made. He regards it as essential that there shall be a sharp reduction in internal taxes and a considerable revision of the tariff. In the matter of internal revenue, it will be remembered that in his annual message he recommended the abolition of all taxes of this class, "except those upon tobacco in its various forms, and upon distilled spirits and fermented liquors, and except, also, the special tax upon the manufacturers and dealers in such articles." In the matter of the tariff, he still urges, as then: "An enlargement of the free list, so as to include within it the numerous articles which yield inconsiderable revenue; a simplification of the complex and inconsistent schedules of duties upon certain manufactures, particularly those of cotton, iron and steel, and a substantial reduction upon those articles, and upon sugar and molasses and silk, wool, and woolen goods. If a general revision of the tariff shall be found to be impracticable at this session, I express the hope that at least some of the more conspicuous inequalities of the present law may be corrected before your final adjournment." Some of those who have heard the president talk express the opinion that, if congress adjourned without acting on the directions indicated by the president, he will call an extra session very soon after the 4th of March.

AMERICAN PORK.

Mr. Sargent, United States minister to Germany, has made to the state department an official report with regard to the threatened exclusion from that country of American products. Sargent says:

I have the honor to report that a very strong feeling of opposition has been aroused in Berlin and other German cities, as well as in the manufacturing districts generally, against the threatened exclusion of American pork products. Strong protests are being sent in to the bundesrath, and committees of merchants and others have visited the capital to protest against the measure. Editorials in leading papers have fully exposed the falsity of the excuses for the exclusion. If this were strictly a government of public opinion in the American sense, these general public appeals, backed as they are by solid reasoning upon indisputable facts would prevent the project would be abandoned. [illegible] ght by all apt means to oppose [illegible] and have lost no opportunity to [illegible] true character and to show that [illegible] of American swine is unimpaired and American swine products entirely wholesome. I do not think these latter propositions are now seriously disputed by people of intelligence. The movement is purely sectional and in disregard of the interests of the United States. The only argument which would be effective would be the fear of reprisals. We could not insist upon any people receiving from us articles deleterious to health, but we can as little submit to the exclusion of our products upon false pretenses—pretenses so obviously false as in this instance.

A CONGRESSIONAL PLAN.

The latest plan proposed for remedying the inconvenience of the dates fixed by the present law for the beginning of the sessions of congress is advanced by Representative Blanchard, of Louisiana. Under his plan the sessions of the forty-eighth congress would begin on the 4th of March and the first Monday in December as provided by the present law, leaving that congress having been elected, however not much, it would be wise to place any change in its sessions. The session of the forty-ninth congress would begin on the 4th of March succeeding the March session of the forty-eighth congress, and that session would begin the first Monday in January, 1885, and end on or before the 1st day of December in the same year. The terms of members elected to the fifth congress he proposes should begin [illegible] December, 1886, and last at most until the first Monday in December, 1887, and that the term of each succeeding congress thereafter shall begin on the first Monday of December after its election and on the first day of the second December following the beginning of its term. The first regular session of the fifth congress under this plan would begin on the first Monday of December, 1886, and the second session on the first Monday of December, 1887. The principal objects of this change of time of the meeting of the first session of a congress are to avoid the election of congressmen a twelve months in advance of the first regular meeting of the congress to which they were elected, and to provide for the presidential succession for then there would be a speaker of the house to succeed to the presidency in case of the president and vice president dying or becoming disabled within the meaning of the constitution. It does not avoid the loss of time that results from the nearness of the Christmas date to the beginning of the sessions, but it does away with an enforced short session and leaves congress free to sit during the whole year if the interests of public necessity should require it.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

JAN. 22.—In the senate Mr. Bayard presented a petition for a law to prevent discrimination by railways. Mr. Logan introduced a bill regulating telegraph companies to receive and transmit dispatches from any other line without favor. Mr. Platt submitted an act for the extension of the free delivery system in postoffices. The tariff bill consumed the remainder of the session, the chief debate being on the lumber duty.

JAN. 23. In the senate, Mr. Voorhees presented a memorial from Gen. Herman Sturm of Indiana, setting forth his claim against Mexico for aid in the expulsion of the French forces. A resolution was offered that hereafter no treaty treaties be considered only in open session. The tariff bill was taken up. A motion by Mr. Sherman to make the duty on pig and scrap iron three-tenths of a cent per pound was rejected. The rate on steel rails was fixed at seventenths of a cent per pound.

JAN. 24. When David Davis called the senate to order, the only senator present was Mr. Butler. With the gravity the acting vice president called out: "The senator from South Carolina will [illegible] to order." The senate, when enough members were present, proceeded to the consideration of the tariff. The metals schedule was debated by Sherman, Beck, Malone and Bayard. Motions to make the duty on iron $2, $1, 50 cents and 75 cents were lost in succession and without further action the senate adjourned.

JAN. 25. To-day having been set apart for services in honor of the late Senator Hill, of Georgia, on motion of Senator Brown, immediately after the reading of the journal, remarks eulogistic of the deceased were begun. At the conclusion thereof the senate adjourned and the republicans resumed their caucus on the tariff.

JAN. 26. In the senate, an adverse report was made on the bill to increase the pensions of one-armed and one-legged soldiers. Mr. Platt introduced a bill to add $6 per month each to all pensions of $24 or $30.—The committee on agriculture reported in favor of holding a world's centennial cotton exposition in 1884. Consideration of the tariff bill was resumed. The duty on flat bar iron was reduced to $18 per ton, and on round or square bar iron to $20 per ton. On iron or steel rails the rate was made eight-tenths of a cent per pound and on tin plates 1 cent.

JAN. 27.—In the senate, a petition was received from the council of Six Nations of Indians, asking a recognition of their interest in certain lands in Kansas. Some work was done on the tariff bill.

HOUSE.

JAN. 22.—In the house, Mr. Rosecrans introduced a bill empowering journalistic writers to procure copyrights and receive protection after the publication of articles. A joint resolution was passed appropriating $200,000 for the work of the census bureau. Mr. Luna introduced a bill to grant pensions to the children of Kit Carson, now living in poverty at Las Vegas.

JAN. 23.—In the house, Mr. Butterworth introduced a bill for the appointment of seven commissioners to investigate questions relating to railroad or steamboat tariffs for passengers or freight. Bills were reported to retire Rufus Ingalls with the rank of major general; to place Representative Smalls on the retired list of the navy, and to send a special committee of three members to take testimony in the election contest in the Fourth Alabama district. In committee of the whole on the naval bill an amendment was adopted for the gradual abolition of the pay corps of the navy.

JAN. 24.—The house went into committee of the whole on the naval appropriation bill. A paragraph was adopted to provide for the completion of one of the double-turreted monitors, either in a navy-yard or on proposals from ship-builders. The bill was reported to the house, and the amendments were adopted in bulk, except the one providing that chiefs of bureaus shall receive no additional pay.

JAN. 25.—The house passed the naval appropriation bill, after rejecting an amendment to provide that chiefs of bureaus shall receive no additional pay and adopting a clause to give Asa Weeks $50,000 for the use of his torpedo invention. Tributes to the memory of Senator Hill were offered by Messrs. Hammond, House, Hooker, and Cox, when an adjournment was taken.

JAN. 26.—In the house, three members presented petitions against the transfer of the revenue marine, lifesaving, marine hospital, and signal service. A bill was reported granting the right of way for a railroad through the Fort Smith military reservation. The tariff bill was taken up in committee of the whole and Mr. Kelley declared it the best ever submitted to congress. It was agreed that general debate on the measure shall close at 5 o'clock today.

JAN. 27.—The house spent the day in committee of the whole on the tariff bill.—Mr. Bland charged the republicans with endeavoring to choke the pending measure through congress under threats by the president of calling an extra session. Mr. Kelley asked the authority for such a statement, and Mr. Reagan said it came from a senator who had discussed the matter with the president. Useless debate consumed the remainder of the session.

Thomas Delaney, who was night clerk of the ill-starred Newhall house, testified Wednesday that he could have awakened the guests on the north side of the hotel, but was engaged in business he considered of more importance. It is believed that John F. Antisdel will be arrested for criminal negligence in management.

RIDGEWAY RUMBLINGS.

Look out or you will slip up.

A skating park everywhere and no danger of drowning.

A rare thing but we have it. Everybody has the skating fever. Some could not wait until Monday morning.

People get tired very easy this week. Almost any time some one can be seen lying or sitting down on the crust; we suppose to rest.

We tried to say last week that Miss Lorane Remington was visiting her sister in the village, but was made to say quite a different thing.

Quite a number of our people availed themselves of the chance to hear Geo. W. Bain, at Grange Hall, and were delighted with his lecture.

Chas. Gove, who purchased George Dibble's farm, has taken possession. George will move to a farm recently purchased near Adrian.

Jonathan Hall met with a painful accident last week. While out in the yard he slipped, falling heavily upon the ice, causing a fracture of the thigh, which, considering his age, will probably render his limb useless even if he should rally from the shock and continue in good health. His condition however is considered very critical.

The annual M. E. church donation will occur next week Thursday evening. Everybody and their friends and neighbors are invited to attend. The ladies, of course, understand that they will be expected to furnish the table.

A mistake in the names of the contracting parties occurred in the marriage notice which appeared in these items last week. The parties were Henry Clark and Miss Ella Dibble.—The wedding was largely attended and the gifts were numerous, a list of which is given below.

Mr. & Mrs. Jno. P. Whitt, knives and forks; Mr. & Mrs. Frank Smith, lamp; Geo. T. Clark of Toledo, silver table spoons; Mrs. A.W. Smith, towel; Amelia, Mary and George Whitt, Fred Kammerer, extension table; Mr. & Mrs. Pattison, wash-bowl and pitcher; Ada Dibble, brush holder; Mr. & Mrs. Nathan Dibble, glass tea set; Mr. & Mrs. Chauncy Dibble, bed spread; Mr. & Mrs. Chas. Gove, glass sauce dish; Mr. & Mrs. Geo. Dibble, lamp; Mr. & Mrs. Chas. Dibble, glass pitcher; Ella Pattison, set goblets; Edd. Clark, lamp; Mr. & Mrs. Francis Dibble, three table spreads; Emma Dibble, silver teaspoons; Chas. Dibble, towel; Mr. & Mrs. Frank Dibble, large glass sauce dish and set small ones; Bertie Anderson, three cakes toilet soap; Chauncy J. Dibble, butter knife; Mrs. G. Russel, silver piece; Mr. & Mrs. Geo. Getty, clock; Henry Clark, set chairs; Miss Tilley Getty, set goblets; Mrs. Clark, Sylvester Clark, Isabella Clark, Waller Clark, set dishes; Mr. & Mrs. Henry Dibble, tureen.

WEST TECUMSEH TIDBITS.

Commercial Telegraph Line.

Have you been skating yet?

Dewitt Bowen and Atwater Mangus skated to Adrian and back last Monday.

Much anxiety is felt in regard to the crop of wheat under the ice crust.

Twenty six years ago in this vicinity the fields were one vast skating rink as to-day.

Mrs. E. C. Coryell is on the sick list; also Jacob McNeil is confined to the house by sickness.

Henry Lancaster, of Evans lake, had a stack of straw tip over one day last week; burying three horses beneath it. Two were rescued alive and one was found smothered to death.

CLINTON CULLINGS.

Miss Flora Parker, of Ypsilanti, is spending a few days with Miss Fullerton, at Dave Woodward's.

Gracie Spafford is on the sick list.

Herbie, David Silvers' little boy, fell down stairs a few days ago, and is threatened with a serious run of sickness in consequence.

Mrs. George Kies was in town Monday.

Chas. Burroughs and Chas. Johnston and wife, of Detroit, spent last Sabbath in Clinton.

Several young fellows skipped the crystal 'beautiful' from Manchester to Tecumseh on skates Tuesday, stopping in Clinton only for a short rest.

Married, in Clinton, on Sunday, Feb. 4, by Rev. E. W. Miller, Mr. Geo. Mead and Miss Mary Osborn; both of Macon.

A livery-man from Tecumseh started to take a load from that place to Manchester last Saturday, and after reaching Clinton was obliged to turn it over to Ed. Clark who finished the journey, but not without considerable damage to his team.

Clinton is to have a milk wag a about the first of March.

Dr. Burchard visits his patients on skates.

The Congregational society will hold a social to-morrow Friday, evening, at the residence of Jas. B. Hause.

Dr. Adams horse took exception to the crystal carpeting upon being hitched in Wednesday, and quickly spilled the doctor and Rev. J. W. Payne out in the snow. The cutter was somewhat demoralized.

The great temperance lecturer spoke to a fair audience at Town Hall last evening.

Rev. E. W. Miller has as guests at his residence, mother-in-law, brother, wife and two children, and a sister.

Surprise party at Katie Millspaugh's last Saturday.

Happy little gathering at Miss Ella Bartlett's Monday evening last.

THE DIAMOND MORNING.

You saw the diamond morning,
And you know what I mean,
When I say that every tree top
Was crowned like a queen;
That every branch and every shrub, and every drooping vine,
With diamonds gleamed, with diamonds hung, with diamonds were enshrined.

You saw the king of daylight
Coming forth in royal sheen,
With a crown of peerless jewels
For the brow of his queen;
And the crowns upon the tree-tops
Caught the glory of the glow,
And reflected it in colors
To the whitened earth below;
And enraptured with the radiance of the day thus proudly born,
Said you not: "O! king of daylight, tis thy diamond wedding morn."

Oh! diamond spangled branch and vine,
Ye have a maxim choice, I ween,
'Tis where thy jeweled pendants hang,
A blossom lies between;
But the jewels, ah the jewels, they must vanish from our view
By the magic art of nature be distilled in gentle dew;
And when the springtime wakes the buds, the dew from off the plain
Will kiss those buds in blossom
With the sunshine and the rain.

And that's not all, oh jewels,
That now ye brightly glow;
When those blossoms bright are withered,
There is left a germ, I know.
That will ripen into richness
By the summer's lengthened days,
And with plenty fill our baskets,
In those bright autumnal days;
We will feast on fruitful plenty, and with grateful hearts will bless
Thou who camest to us with beauty in thy gem-bespangled dress.

Would you e'er behold this radiance
That endureth but a night,
You must seek it in the splendor
Of the city out of sight;
Whose bright walls are all of jaspar, clear as crystal and as pure
As the fountains of the river, that shall ever more endure;
Ye are clothed, therefore, with purity, and when the bridegroom comes,
He will take thee at his bidding to those jaspar palace domes,
Oh! the rapture and the radiance of the ransomed who shall rest
In the city called "celestial," in the regions called the "blest."

You saw the diamond morning,
And you know what I mean,
When I say that every tree-top
Was crowned like a queen,
That every branch, and every shrub, and every drooping vine,
With diamonds gleamed, with diamonds hung, with diamonds were enshrined.

TECUMSEH, Feb. 5, 1883. E.A.D.

IMPROVE THE RURAL SCHOOLS.

The Educational News for February has these sensible words to say on the effort which is making in certain quarters to break down our graded schools. The true solution of the school problem is to make the country schools better, not to make the village schools worse:

Our common schools are greatly in need of a system of grading which will do away with the present custom of beginning at the beginning of each study every term. Since the introduction of the union school system in cities and larger villages, great progress has been made, and we may justly be proud of this class of schools.—On the other hand little or no effort has been made to grade what may properly be called the rural schools. This has led to an unequal development, and is the basis for the cry that too much time is given to develop the graded schools, while the rural schools are allowed to retain about their normal condition. From the nature of the rural schools, they never can attain that degree of perfection in grading that is secured in larger schools; but what we need is legislation which shall allow and require the rural districts to have as good schools as their nature will permit. It is not less perfection and less system in the graded schools that we need, but more system and more perfection in the common schools.

Prof. Tice's weather predictions for February: 1-2, clear and fair; 2-6, clouding and threatening weather, with heavy storms about the 6th; 7-8, clear or fair; 9-13, cloudy with heavy storms about the 13th; 14-15, clear or fair; 16-19, cloudy, threatening and heavy storms; 22-25, cloudy weather and local storms; 26, clear and fair; 27-28, cloudy weather and very heavy storms. The warmer days will be about the 5, 12, 18, 23 and 28, and the cooler days about the 2, 7, 14, 21, 25.

The National Relief and Accident Association will occupy their new office at an early day.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

Brother Gardner Delivers an Oration on Lawyers.

Detroit Free Press.

"Each day as I look ober my paper," said the old man as the lights were turned up, "I see a case of embezzlement, wholesale robbery, breach of trust or misuse of odder people's money. One day it am de cashier of a bank, de nes' day it am a city or county treasurer, de nex' it am some confidential clerk or a bank president, or de treasurer of some corporation. It is an era of 'stealin' an' embezzlin' an' trade. No man who has money in de hand of a friend or employe feels safe. No man who depends upon another man knows what a day may bring forth.

"What being dat dis state of affairs? Who prodds dem? What makes de lawyers so active?

"There was silence throughout the hall as the president paused and looked up and down. Sandy Pole was about to rise up and explain that he hadn't made a dollar out of lawyer, and didn't expect to, when Pickles Smith hit him.

Gardner continued:

"I arraign de lay of de kentry an' charge de lawyers, big an' little, wid bein' de direct cause of dis reign of knavery. Three men outer five am honest only until der am a chance to make a haul by bein' dishonest. One man outer three will be dishonest on all occashuns whar dar am a chance to escape consequences. If dar was no law to punish dishonesty, we wouldn't find one man in twenty doin' de honest thing fur' principles' sake. It am de fear of consequences which keeps thousands of clerks an' cashiers, an' treasurers honest.

"An' what do de lawyers say to ebery man who's fingers itch to make a haul? Dey might as well advertise at reg'lar rates-dat dey will guarantee to clear 'em of de law fur a sartin sum. Let me steal $75,000 in cash an' nine-tenths of the lawyers of Detroit will be eager to defend me—to effect a compromise—to hush it up—to clear me of punishment. About de best legal talent in America makes a spec'alty of defendin' criminals. Any lawyer am looked upon as good 'nuff fur prosecutin' attorney, while de werry keenest talent am reserved fur defense of thieves, burglars and odder law-breakers.

"Time after time men have stolen or embezzled, an' de lawyers have taken a shear of de plunder to clear 'em. We've had half a dozen cases right yere widin two y'ars, an' we am sartin to have mo'. Let me steal a ton of coal, an' up I go. Let me get my claws on $50,000 an' I doan' go up for shucks. I may be 'rested an' toted off to jail, but inside of a week de case am settled up, an' I walk de streets a hero. De lawyers return $40,000 of de money, pocket $9,950 an' han' me fifty as a reward fur bringin' 'em a fat case.

"Suppose it war' known dat ebery burglar dat is convicted would receive twenty years in prison, and no possibility of pardon, would we have one burglary whar' we now have two? Who makes burglary a payin' purfeshun? De lawyer.

"If a clerk who embezzled was sartin to receive a five or ten y'ar sentence, how many cases of embezzlement would you h'ar of in a year? An' who makes embezzlement a payin' bizness? De lawyer.

"If dat Rochester bank president am sent to state prison for twenty years, what will be de effeck on odder Rochester bank presidents? But he won't be. De lawyers have gathered to his aid, an' will defeat justice.

"I am spokin' what I believe to be de solemn truf, when I say to you dat law has become a farce, an' lawyers de middle-men between robbers an' de robbed. De question am how to break de law—not how to enforce it. It am not how to put a thief into prison, but how to keep him out. It am not how to punish dishonest officials, but how to gently squeeze out as much as dey kin restore, an' forgive the remainder. Let us purceed to bizness, feelin' dat whatever crimes we commit we stan' two chances of gom' clear to one of punishment."

Fishing on Florida Keys.

American Angler.

I need not mention what you are to take in the way of comforts, luxuries and knick-knacks, but you will want plenty of guns and fishing tackle, not spoons, flies, etc., as used in the little streams through the interior, but genuine hooks and lines—not pin hooks and spool thread lines, but steel hooks from one-eighth to one-half inch in thickness, with always a small chain of five to six feet in length, which is to be fast to the hook, in case, as is often true, a shark should take hold. The bait generally used here is mullet; these fish do not readily bite at the hook, but may be had by casting the net which your boatman or guide will be sure to take along. Now, so far as fishing is concerned, you have but to wait for the flood tide, and be located at or near some "pass," and your fun begins.

Look out, now! See that large red fish making for the bait—your blood may curdle and hair stand on end for now you are "into business." We will say that you have been fishing two hours and have some twenty-five of the finest fish in the world, these ranging in weight from five to twenty-five pounds, and embracing many varieties, such as sheepshead, trout, pompano, red fish, and two or three small sharks, called cubs, shovel-nosed, etc. But as the fun is yet in store, you must clean these fish when they are caught, while the tide is ebb, that the blood and offal may be washed into the gulf.

As the tide begins to flow prepare for one of the greatest events of a fisherman's career. Bring the ax, cut a solid stake four to six inches in diameter and five to six feet long, sharpen and drill it into the ground two-thirds or three-quarters of its length; now get out the "business" line and the devil fishes, put on five or six pounds of this red fish, and all hands "stand by."

There! there! he's on, hold fast—keep the line from slipping or working up and let one man hold the top of the stake—let him worry a little—all hands now for a pull.

His head being out, the ax will be serviceable. This is a shark—a whale—the lion of the deep! One feels that he never wants to bathe in the surf again. We will take this fellow's jaw bone and dry it for a trophy—a keepsake, a frightful curiosity, plenty large for a small man to crawl through when open.

An apology is due our subscribers for the omission of the regular appearance of our paper last week. We foolishly yielded to a weakness which we would make any sacrifice to be rid of—a appetite for that which stands to-day the world's greatest curse—and, as we have always openly criticised the faults of others, thus plainly do we acknowledge our own.—Carroll (Iowa) Sentinel.

A Hero.

Dr. J. H. Hanaford.

He is a hero, an illustrious conqueror, who assails and conquers his prejudices, charges upon and routes his youthful errors and unfortunate tendencies, is brave in the great conflict between the animal propensities and the higher nature, restoring harmony by bringing the whole body-realm into subjection to the mind and conscience. No man ever waged a fiercer warfare than this, demanding the struggles of a life time.

Don't give up and say there is no help for Catarrh, Hay Fever and Cold in head, since thousands testify that Ely's Cream Balm has entirely cured them. Price 50 cents. Apply into nostrils with little finger.

From Major Downs, Military Instructor, Mt. Pleasant Academy, Sing Sing, N. Y.: During the very cold weather I was suffering with Catarrh. My head and throat ached so severely that I was obliged to give up everything and keep quiet. Ely's Cream Balm was suggested. Within an hour from the first application I felt relieved, the pain began to subside. In two days was entirely cured. (W. A. Downs. Feb. 18, 1881.)

A quick, agreeable and thoroughly effective remedy. Catarrh, Hay Fever and Cold in Head.

Beware of Fraud.

A good article and has achieved success and attained a world-wide reputation by its merits. Catarrh and wonderful results follow its use. Hence imitations. Ever is the most popular of King's Sarsaparilla, Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Already unprincipled parties are endeavoring to delude and unsuspecting public with imitations of this great and ultimate discovery. Do not be deceived, but insist on having the true remedy and take no other. Trial bottle free. Large size $1. Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

NEUTRALIZED.

In what way a Prevalent Evil may be Shorn of its Power to Harm.

Malaria is a broad name for many diseases—all originating in blood poisonings. Bilious fever, typhus and typhoid fevers and chills and fever are prominent members of the family. Malaria defies alike the builders, the plumbers and the physicians. Despairing of ordinary treatment, the latter almost unanimously recommend HENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER as the greatest anti-malarial specific of the age. These plasters act upon the liver, spleen, bowels and kidneys.

Worn over the region of the liver, and under the back over the kidneys, they ward off malaria like an armor. No other plasters do this.

When you purchase, satisfy yourself that the word CAPCINE is cut in the center of the plaster.

TECUMSEH, MICH., FEB. 8, 1883.

The prospects for the passage of a tariff bill are improving every day. The bill will be tacked to death.

It will be Edwin Willetts or, Perry Hannah. Wait and see whether our prediction amounts to anything.

The Union renegades who voted for Tom Ferry in the Legislature should be presented with a leather medal by their constituents.

Treasurer Park of Tennessee and Treasurer Vincent of Alabama should organize a new firm and start a bucket shop in Chicago.

The Ferry boom is shaky and in need of repair. A new man will be taken up during the recess, and Ferry will quietly drop out of sight.

Persons owning mill property should take extra measures to avert the effects of a flood. A big freshet now would carry off a good many mill dams.

Ferry has the sympathy of a good many friends in his financial and political misfortunes. His creditors especially will weep tears over his downfall.

Hubbell has packed his grip sack and left Lansing for the more congenial clime of Washington. The good man has gone but he will not soon be forgotten.

At the revival in progress at Hudson, several converts were baptised by immersion through holes cut in the ice. This is taking religion, rather coldly we should say.

The girls in Iowa are taught to cook and do general housework. This is the right kind of woman's rights. And it is gospel. Democracy, also. Give the girls a chance.

The heavy sleet storm of last Saturday has never been equalled before in this section but once, that is, since the first settlement in 1824. That occurred in the neighborhood of thirty years ago.

The Cincinnati Times says: "Perhaps the Michigan Legislature in a lucid interval will adopt our suggestion and elect Thomas M. Cooley." The Michigan Legislature does not seem to be troubled with any lucid intervals this winter.

Jay Gould weighs one hundred and ten pounds. His usual dinner is a bit of steak about as large as his finger, and a cup of black coffee. He started business with a capital of fifty cents, and is now, at the age of forty-six, the richest man in America, with one exception.

The scientific savants of Adrian are greatly agitated in their search for a water supply for the new water works. A big mud puddle in the northwestern quarter that is dignified by the name of Springbrook pond will probably be chosen. At least this puddle is the favorite in the pool sales.

After a breathing spell of a few days, why not turn in, all hands, vote for Judge Cooley for U. S. Senator and make it unanimous? The people of Michigan would be pleased to see a representative in the Senate once more who could reflect the same honor upon the state which it enjoyed in the days of Gen. Cass and Jacob M. Howard.

The failure of Ferry Brothers of Grand Haven will put a quietus upon the Senator's campaign for re-election. The liabilities of the firm will exceed $500,000, and about $300,000 will cover all assets, and these have been secured to creditors in Chicago, Grand Haven and Grand Rapids. Creditors who are not secured will probably not get a cent.

A crisis arrived in the senatorial contest last Saturday. An effort was made to elect Ferry by the aid of democratic and greenback votes, but enough Republicans deserted his standard to leave him a few votes short. Representative Harkness of this county cast a vote for Willetts. Four ballots were taken amid intense excitement. Thus the last desperate game of the Ferry managers has miscarried.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5th, 1883.

The re-interment of the great Archbishop Hughes in the crypt of the new Cathedral last week, was one of the most solemn and impressive funeral pageants ever witnessed in this city. When at the conclusion of the services the choir of nearly three hundred voices thundered out Beethoven's grand Miserere the effect was absolutely thrilling. One poor servant girl was so overcome by it that her mind became unbalanced. She laughed and cried hysterically and had to be carried out of the church and conveyed home in a cab. The next day the poor lass became entirely and was sent to an insane asylum.

The solemnity recalls to mind the celebrated religious controversy the Brooks some twenty five years ago. Erastus and James W. Brooks at that time owned and conducted the Express which in those days had both a morning and an evening edition. James was the active man of the concern, the fighter, the writer of vigorous, pungent, short editorials, while Erastus was more the scholar and the student. He was well versed in religious matters, and for a layman had a remarkable knowledge of theology. The public school system was at that time in its infancy and the discussion arose whether the Bible should be read to the children. Mr. Erastus Brooks wrote some articles on the subject not favorable to Catholicism, which attracted so much attention and aroused so much comment that the Archbishop replied in a "letter to the editor." This brought out further remarks, and in a few days all of New York was interested in the controversial duel between these two brilliant men. Bishop Hughes then proposed that the discussion, which now had assumed large proportions and wandered from its original field to an argument as to the truth of the Catholic religion—should be conducted in another paper. He thought it would be fairer than if Mr. Brooks would have his say in the Express and the Archbishop his reply in his own organ, the Freeman's Journal.

About this time the only paper which was really making money was the Express and some of the great dailies of the present had indeed a hard time of it. The Brookses advanced them all money, and this was quite a power in the fraternity itself. Among their heaviest debtors was Webb's Courier-Enquirer, a paper long since extinct. Despite all assistance and all coddling the paper continued to retrograde, and for a while it looked as if the Messrs. Brooks would never be able to get back their money. Then when the Archbishop proposed to have the discussion in some independent paper the Brookses suggested the Courier-Enquirer.—Bishop Hughes was satisfied, and then the circulation of the paper went up with a bound, advertisements began to pour in, and in less than no time the paper was able to pay its debts. The discussion lasted for quite a while. As an old New Yorker expressed it, "it was a beautiful race, neck and neck." Towards the end Bishop Hughes seemed to be winning, but in an unfortunate moment he lost his temper and made use of an ugly expression against his antagonist. As one of the conditions of the controversy was that it was to be conducted in a purely objective manner, Brooks stopped at once, claiming that if a man was compelled to leave argument for vituperation he had lost his case, and public opinion awarded him the victory.

The Archbishop afterwards was very sorry for his words, and I believe the quarrel between the two men was made up. He was a warm-hearted, impulsive man and was frequently led into words and acts which he afterwards repented. The Irish people in the city were intensely bitter against Brooks and the Express, and it was frequently necessary for him and the employees of the paper to leave through back doors to escape violence, but Bishop Hughes rebuked them severely for it. Mr. Brooks however had the Americans proper with him, and they elected him to the Senate with an overwhelming vote. The Courier-Enquirer after the discussion ended rapidly retrograded again and soon after expired; but the Brookses had their money and did not complain.—This is a bit of secret journalistic history which I think has never been written before.

It strikes me that nowhere else in the country are the authorities so ready to make spasmodic efforts to satisfy a momentary craze or demand as in this blessed Gotham of ours. The case of Mace and Slade is an instance. These two distinguished gentlemen of bruising proclivities proposed to give an exhibition of "science" at Madison Square Garden. There was to be no knocking out. They were simply going to put on soft gloves and show what sparring was when reduced to a fine art. Then a number of goody-goody people wrote to the Mayor declaiming against this "brutal exhibition. The Mayor sent for the Police and the police to show how eager they are to make New York a sort of New Jerusalem stopped the performance and arrested Mace and Slade.

THE LAST UNIVERSITY TROUBLE.

The Regents or Faculties of the University seem destined to have some trouble on their hands most of the time, and in most cases it is occasioned by the meddlesome efforts of outside parties to shape the policy of the institution in educational matters, or to control its officials and professors for some sectarian or partisan purpose.

The latest muddle is a move against Prof. Frothingham for daring, as is alleged, to lead infidelity to the medical students. This attack is instigated by the same old ring that drove Prof. Watson out of the University, and has deprived the institution of some of its ablest instructors during the past 15 years. The inception of the trouble was given publicity last November in the following item which appeared in the papers:

"The Medical Faculty of the University of Michigan have just considered the charges made by student Morgan against Prof. Frothingham, of attacking the Christian religion, and the counter-charges of falsehood by Prof. Frothingham against Morgan. The Faculty on Nov. 24th decided that as to Prof. Frothingham they had no jurisdiction, but that the charges of the latter against Morgan were not sustained. This is claimed to be a victory for Morgan against Prof. Frothingham, and it is stated that the matter may now be taken into consideration by the Board of Regents as against the Professor."

This action was taken by a hostile minority at a partial meeting of the medical faculty, and was reversed at a full meeting the next day. Strange to say, the associated Press agent never learned of the action taken by the entire faculty, which sustained Prof. Frothingham, and that action was not generally known until recently. The Detroit Ministerial Union having published a series of resolutions reflecting upon Prof. Frothingham, the actual facts in the case are now made public. In last Friday's Post and Tribune appears a communication signed by nearly one hundred Medical students exonorating Prof. Frothingham fully from the charges made by the Ministerial Union. It is astonishing that a worthy body of men like the Ministerial Union should allow themselves to be imposed upon so egregiously as to pass a series of resolutions attacking the University and one of its ablest professors, on the supposed existence of certain facts which have no existence at all.

The open letter of Prof. Frothingham given below sets forth the position occupied by him in this controversy:

To the People of the State of Michigan: In the Detroit Evening News of the 29th inst. there was published a copy of a petition purported to have been adopted by the Detroit Ministerial Union, and designed by them to be circulated for signatures with a view of presenting it to the Board of Regents. It is difficult to conceive how a body of men, laying any claim to respectability, could have adopted this petition, founded as it is upon falsehoods, and falsehoods that have so lately been corrected by the almost unanimous voice of the medical class. But reasonable time having elapsed and no disclaimer having been published by any member of the Union, it is fair to infer that the paper was prepared and adopted by them as published. It therefore becomes my duty to state to the people of this commonwealth, that this petition, so cunningly worded, is a covert, false, and malicious personal attack upon me, and the Detroit Ministerial Union has allowed itself to be used through the influence of some personal enemies of mine, for that purpose.

So far as I know, I am the only teacher at present in the Medical Department of the University against whom such charges have lately been made, and I desire to say that they are false. I have never assailed true Christianity, as I understand it, nor have I gone out of my way to attack the ministerial profession, nor have I ever referred to them in the lecture room except in the legitimate discussion of the subject which I teach in the University. The charges lately made by one Rev. G. F. G. Morgan have been proved false by the overwhelming testimony of the medical class.

Some extracts of a lecture delivered by me in 1875 have been published, giving a garbled and false impression as to the whole tenor of the discourse. I have to say that that lecture was not delivered in my capacity of teacher in the University, but by invitation before the Senior Medical Lyceum, at a time when numerous clergymen were making a most unjust and abusive attack upon the reputation and character of Prof. Tyndall, for some of his scientific views, and when in the University the professor of physiology had been assailed and ultimately refused re-appointment largely because he had expressed views favoring Darwinism, and was therefore charged with atheism.

The lecture delivered by me was a criticism of the blind zeal that has led the majority of clergymen to oppose scientific discoveries, but true Christianity was spoken of with a reverence, and commendation that ought to satisfy the most devout. In conclusion I will say that I have no desire to retain my position in the University against the wish of a majority of the people who support it, but I feel it my duty under these aggravating circumstances to announce to the people of the state that since I have been in it attempts have been made to intimidate me in the honest and dignified discharge of my duty as a teacher. Men whose views accord with the commonly accepted theological dogmas have full liberty in the class-room and out of it to express their views, but upon all others a restraint is imposed. Those who dissent from the popular creeds have no rights or feelings that are considered worthy of respect.

In my opinion it would be wiser for the people to petition the Regents to eliminate all sectarianism from the University, than to invite them to persecute an individual member of the medical faculty for daring to express his honest and well-founded convictions upon subjects connected with his profession.

I have no appeal to make for myself, but I call upon all lovers of truth and fair play to investigate thoroughly the workings of the University and see whether the views of a majority of the tax payers are respected, or only the views of a fanatical minority. The people who own the University have a right to decide this question and to them I leave it.

G. E. FROTHINGHAM.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 31, 1883.

ACCIDENT ON THE T. & A. A. ROAD.

Last Friday while going to Ann Arbor on the morning train over this road, we passed the wreck of a passenger coach about a mile south of the morning train going south on the same day, a broken rail having thrown the rear coach from the track and turned it over into the ditch.

The train was in charge of Conductor McDowell who, the instant the train struck the rail, which was afterwards found broken in three pieces, pulled the bell cord and rushed to the rescue of the passengers in the coach. Engineer Rigg Spokes at once reversed the engine and stopped the train as quickly as possible, all the employes being promptly on hand to assist in the work of attending to the passengers in the coach, which was seen to careen over the bank, going down about 15 feet and turning almost bottom side up. The rest of the train was backed to the spot where the coach went down, and all on board at once proceeded to do what they could to extricate the imprisoned occupants of the coach who were found in a state of confusion and terror. Mr. A. W. Hamilton and wife, of Ann Arbor, Miss Mary Berringer, of Raisinville, Mich., a little girl named Edith Phillips, a daughter of the newly appointed agent of the road at Ann Arbor, G. W. Halford, publisher of the Ann Arbor News, Mason Brown, brakeman, residing in East Toledo, were all found quite badly hurt. Mrs. Hamilton was transferred to the first train returning to Ann Arbor, and was suffering severely from the tremendous shock she received, besides injury to her spine. Miss Berringer was left at Dundee and said she escaped with a few bruises outwardly, but felt that she was badly hurt internally. The rest of the passengers were brought to this city and are doing well although terribly shaken up. In the coach was John R. Rosenburg, of the university hospital, at Ann Arbor, who escaped unharmed.

It is wonderful that some of the passengers were not killed outright, but at last accounts they were all recovering from the slight injuries received.

A Correction.

ED. HERALD:

I noticed in last week's HERALD that in the notice of John Pennington's death etc., that the writer of the notice was silent in regard to how the deceased had stood in regard to the temperance and anti-slavery causes, while just and honorable mention was made in the notice of his brother Israel's death in regard to these causes. From that silence on these grand subjects, the public would naturally infer that the deceased was neither a friend of temperance nor a friend of the slave, but from early manhood he was a strong temperance man, and a staunch friend of the slave, ever voting, as well as talking, on the side of freedom and equal rights.

THE CIRCUIT COURT.

The Gareis murder case has occupied most of the time in court during the past week. This case was called last Friday morning, and the entire day was consumed in getting a jury. Saturday the evidence was begun, which was continued on Monday and Tuesday. Yesterday was taken up with the argument of requests, and the pleas of the opposing counsel, and the case was given to the jury late in the afternoon.

SOMETHING WORTH KNOWING.

The best and most successful mills now days are the Roller Mills. The corrugated rolls make a whiter and a stronger flour than the mill stone. The rolls granulate the flour evenly and do not salve and destroy the life of a portion of it as is done by the old system. Hundreds have found this to be true by using Comfort's Roller Flour. Farmers go twenty, and even twenty-five miles to Comfort's Roller Mills to exchange their good wheat for Comfort's Roller Flour. Comfort pays the very highest market price for good sound wheat. Grown and unsound wheat he does not want at any price. Cannot use it. The careful selection of sound wheat and the roller system of milling, with many other improvements which he has adopted, is what makes Comfort's flour so popular."

RAILROAD NOTES.

Hanover Times: A gang of shovelers are at work in the big marsh looking for a bottom on which to build a railroad. The manner of their daily forthgoing reminds one forcibly of the flight of the festive cygnet.

The January report of the civil engineer and contractors on the new railroad will show numerous patches of greater or less length graded between Tecumseh and Marshall. They have a certain method of coloring by which it can be told at a glance at just what time the work was performed.

Marshall Statesman: The driving of piles for the bridge at the mill pond commenced the first of the week and has attracted a large crowd of visitors. The hammer is an immense one and weighs 1,800 pounds. Twenty-five piles have been driven, averaging between 50 and 75 feet in length, and about 60 remain to be driven at the pond and 82 at the stone mill. Mr. P. E. Lacey estimates that there are only 400 piles to be driven on the Marshall division and thinks that it will be done by next week.

Blissfield Advance: "S. B. M., in a communication elsewhere favors the purchase by the county of grounds for holding annual county fairs, and thinks Adrian the most central point, of course.—We think, with the new court house to be built, the people have a debt heavy enough saddled upon them for the present." The Dundee Ledger says: It is rumored that the new railroad is controlled by Vanderbilt, and that it will stop at Tecumseh, and go from there on the Lake Shore road, in which case Dundee will get the go by.

The silliness of this rumor is demonstrated by the fact that thousands of dollars are being expended by the T. & M. in constructing a big bridge over the Raisin, east of the village.—The piles are nearly all driven and the timber for the bridge all contracted for.

To the Common Council of the Village of Tecumseh:—The special committee on Public Grounds, assigned the duty of employing counsel and prosecuting trespassers upon the public ground at corner of Kilbuck and Ottawa streets in this village, known as the old Cemetery Grounds, would respectfully report that the Hon. C. A. Stacy was some months ago retained in connection with E. B. Wood, the village attorney, and a suit commenced in ejectment against Peter J. Van Vleet for the recovery of said grounds.

The committee further report that such suit was brought on for trial in the Circuit Court for this county on the 24th day of January ult., before a jury and his honor Judge Howell, Circuit Judge, presiding. That the suit at the trial was warmly contested by Mr. VanVleet by able counsel, and that three days were consumed in that part of the trial in taking the testimony, and a portion of two days more was involved in the arguments on request of the court to charge, and still another day in arguments to the jury and charge of the court. The jury retired at 4 o'clock p. m. on the 31st ult. and after twenty minutes returned their verdict in favor of the village.—The village authorities therefore are sustained in its claim of title to and control over such ground.

All of which is respectfully submitted for your consideration.

In the Tecumseh letter to the Clinton News last week "Pearl Diamond" says: "The habit so universal among the boys and girls of catching on to sleighs and cutters has become such a nuisance that nothing less than an act of the city fathers will insure safety to all parties concerned, horses and vehicles included. There are many teamsters who are perfectly willing to give the children a ride, but decline because of the risk it involves. If the council do not take active measures in the matter all drivers will be compell to adopt the plan of prohibition.

Rush's Medical Association:

Dr. Doctors—The three bottles of Dr. Rush's Regulator I ordered were received by express last week. I have taken nearly one bottle, and am highly satisfied with the result. For over two years I have been troubled with sharp pain at my heart. My physician, upon examination, pronounced it an enlargement of the heart, and was unable to give me any relief. The trouble grew worse, and I became convinced that I could not live. While in New York City, last week, I called on one of the most prominent physicians there, who charged me $5 for an examination and then recommended your "Regulator." Knowing you to be a regular Medical Association, and not a patent medicine scheme, I ordered the three bottles. I have not been troubled since I commenced taking it, but shall continue and take the entire three bottles so as to obtain a permanent cure. You have my sincere thanks. THE STAGE BALD HEAD.

A Delusion and Snare of Theatrical Device.

Bill Nye.

Most everyone who was not born blind knows that the stage bald-head is a delusion and a snare. The only all-wool, yard wide, bald-head we remember on the American stage is that of Dunston Hicks as Aunt Jo, the celebrated Confidence. Lew Fisher wears his own hair and so does Confidence, but Confidence wears his the most. It is the most worn of the two.

What we object to most in the stage bald-head and the average stage wig is that it is usually put on the actor's head in a manner that leaves the impression that it is a wig. The bald-head is usually put on the actor's head in such a manner that it leaves the impression that it is a wig. The bald-head is usually put on the actor's head in such a manner that it leaves the impression that it is a wig. We do not know whether it is the carried idea, but we think that the bald-head is put on

How Candor Pays.

Atlanta Constitution.

"We had better understand each other," he said deprecatingly, as he sauntered into the editorial room, "before we begin. I'm a book-agent."

Unmindful of the groans that met this statement, he went on:

"I'm not a white-haired philanthropist from New Haven, who has come south through sympathy for your stricken people. I'm a fair, square, bald-headed book-agent."

Encouraged by the reception of this frank avowal he took a seat, and dropping his feet in a waste-basket, said:

"I'm not a retired clergyman, who seeks to scatter religious instruction while he binds up his worn out frame in your balmy clime. I'm not an apostle of art who has consented to seek your benighted region and educate your people by parting with a few picture books in parts. I'm not a temperance lecturer from Bangor who pays expenses by dispensing of literature on vivisection while modified book-agent, with none of the corners rounded, running on check in pursuit of fame."

"Here's candor at least," remarked the young man who writes the puffs of hardware stores.

"Yes; candor at best. I'm not a gilded sham. You don't pick me up for a prince in disguise or art or morality going incog. I do not fly the skull and crossbones hid behind a holiday flag till I've grappled and boarded you. I've got the regular old death's-head nailed to the mast, and I'm a pirate from keel to centerboard, and if you don't want that sort of company blow me out of the water."

He had the whole force on deck at this point.

"I've got no off-hand preamble to my bloody work. I do not lead you through the flowery paths of ease to where I've got the trap sprung. I do not beguile with anecdote, inspire with eloquence, soothe with persuasion, or pique with local gossip. I was not directed to you as a leader of culture or a person who'd be likely to buy. I won't show you a list of high-toned decoys who have put their names down to get rid of me and to draw you in. I don't show the work I'm selling, and I've never been able to learn the idiot's soliloquy that explains the pictures."

Here he paused while the manager called for the cash-boy.

"That's about the size of me and my business. The book's right here—fifty parts, fifty cents a part, plenty o' pictures and big type for the reading, written by somebody or other and means $10 clear money to me every time I work one off. Do you take or do I go?"

By this time eleven copies of the first part were ordered, and the "eleven able" resumed their work, while the office boy indites this tribute to a man who ain't ashamed of his little racket.

The Era of Rapid and Cheap Communication Near at Hand.

Irish World.

It has remained, however, for Prof. Albert L. Parcelle, a talented inventor, to produce a mechanism by which the barriers to rapid and cheap telegraphy are swept down, and which by simple applications of known principles, promise to entirely revolutionize the telegraphy of the world. His system is called "Harmonic Automatic Telegraphy," and differs from that in use by the Rapid Telegraph company in two important points. The first is an improved and abbreviated construction of the alphabet, in which position is used to the great saving of characters and consequent saving of time in preparing the copy in the perforator. The second is the employment of a system of a sympathetic resonance by which, with the use of a single wire and unskilled operatives, the same amount of work which is now done by ten wires and skilled labor can be accomplished.

Thus, for the first time in the history of telegraphy, the Morse alphabet and system are done away with, as are also the translating and transcribing by receivers. Instead of requiring the ordinary handling and delay, the message, be it long or short, is rapidly prepared in a perforating machine fed into the transmitter, and is instantly reproduced in clear Roman letters on sheets of paper ready to be sent by messenger to the party addressed. The actual number of words sent on an average, by the American rapid is from 600 to 700 per minute, while the lowest computations, made from results obtained from an instrument only partially completed, show a speed by the new method of 5,000 words per minute. A great advantage, too, is that, being sent over a single wire, the matter comes consecutively, and is, therefore, free from liability to error, as is often the case where several wires are used for the sending of a single dispatch. For press work the new method will prove of inestimable value, as by the use of this device a message of 2,000 words, occupying about one column of a closely printed newspaper, can be perforated, sent over the wires, and given to a messenger at the other end of the line for delivery, and all ready for the type setter, in three and a half minutes.

Inviting Fields for New Inventions.

Hon. John D. Caton, in an address delivered in Chicago some months ago, stated that in his opinion the only thing about a railroad that had come to stay was the arrangement of two inflexible bars of iron placed in a parallel position. He questioned if they would long remain on the surface of the ground. As to the motor and the carriage, they would all be changed. Another force would most likely be substituted for that of steam. Greater speed, more security and less cost were all desired, and would all be obtained in a near future. The improvement of country roads presents an inviting field for original inventors. A durable, cheap, and easily made pavement for the streets of large towns and cities is yet to be invented. There is an opportunity for great improvement in the construction of vehicles that move over roads of any kind. Even the saddle is far from being what it should be.

The machines now employed for making paper, weaving cloth, printing, sewing, shaping brick and working in lumber will soon be displaced. A very valuable invention is seldom very valuable in itself beyond the term for which it is patented. It is improved to such an extent that only a single principle remains to be kept in operation.

The Boston Journal of Chemistry says there is need at the present time of some electrical devices by which easy communication can be had between houses, manufacturing establishments, stores and offices; between dwellings and stables, conservatories, libraries, etc. It is not necessary that words should be transmitted, but signals representing words or specific wants, suited to the needs of parties as they are found in all neighborhoods and towns. What is wanted is something that may be a substitute for the telephone, something which any one can use, but it may be much less extensive in its capabilities. It would seem to be easy to devise appliances suited to this want, but it needs the aid of the exercise of a considerable degree of ingenuity. If this need can be satisfactorily met, it will serve an important end, and do much to break down the oppressive and outrageous monopolies connected with telegraphy and telephony. The latter as a monopoly is fast becoming more intolerable in its exactions than the telegraph has ever been.

A Deserving Class.

Boston Globe.

General Grant says: "No pension can compensate the men who have lost one or more limbs, and I should have been glad to see that class of pensioners provided for, instead of the indiscriminate pensioners, some of which are physically as good as they would have been if the war had never been fought."

A Nice Distinction.

Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle.

A little Augusta three year old girl rebuked her mother for alluding to a black cat. She said it was a "colored" cat.

How the Senses Are Fooled.

Immerse the forefinger of one hand in water at 104 degrees Fahrenheit, and then plunge the whole of the other hand into the water with a temperature of 102 degrees Fahrenheit. The latter, although two degrees cooler, will be judged to be the warmer of the two, from which it appears that the intensity of the sensation of temperature depends not only upon the relative degree of heat to which the parts are exposed, but also upon the extent of surface over which it is applied. From this cause a bath which is not uncomfortably warm, when a few fingers are dipped in it, appears scalding hot when the whole body is immersed. The sense of temperature is likewise entirely at fault when required to determine which is the warmer of two substances, say a piece of iron and a piece of wood, for if they both have the same temperature, the iron will feel the hotter of the two, because of its being a better conductor. A slight difference of temperature, however, between two substances of like nature is easily discerned, and we may here describe a simple but highly-entertaining trick which is founded on this fact.

The performer, having placed his hat behind him, requests the people present to place in it three or four pennies. He shakes it up behind him, and then asks some person to take out a penny and closely examine it. He has then to pass it to the others for examination, the last one pitching it back into the hat again. The pennies are then reshaken up, and the performer now, placing one hand behind him, picks out the penny which has been examined, although throughout the whole operation he has never seen it. When the experiment has been done some two or three times successfully, all sorts of unlikely suggestions are made as to the way in which the feat has been performed, but very seldom the right one, which is exceedingly simple. The people, in handling the penny which was selected from the others, make it warm. It is, therefore, easy to pick it out from the others when it has been pitched into the hat again. This sufficiently demonstrates the fact that at ordinary temperature the sense of temperature as localized in the fingers is sufficiently sensitive to discriminate between several pieces of metal so as to say which is the warmest.

But for the extremes of hot and cold, touch is thoroughly deceived, a piece of frozen mercury giving a burning sensation like a red-hot bar of metal. The touch which attains to such perfection in persons afflicted with blindness is readily deceived. This is shown forcibly by the experiment of Aristotle. Cross the index and middle fingers and run them over a marble placed on the table with the eyes shut. Under such circumstances one has difficulty in avoiding the belief that he is dealing with two marbles instead of one. The idea of roundness which has been obtained by a complex judgment, founded on the coalescence of several sensations, is here appealed to, but the usual conditions being reversed, we draw a wrong conclusion. The sense of taste may be likewise confounded by altering the conditions under which the gustatory operation is always carried on. Thus, if the nostrils be held firmly, it is impossible to distinguish between applying an onion or an apple to the tongue.—Science for All.

A Curious Clock.

A jeweler and watchmaker of Middlebury, Conn., has recently constructed a curious clock, which acts out to perfection the assassination of President Garfield. The machine is a common cuckoo clock; under which is a miniature depot. At one window is a ticket agent dealing out tickets, while at another a telegraph operator is seen busy at his work, and truckmen, porters, train dispatchers, etc., are all flying around as natural as life. All of the figures are of wool, about two inches long. At the end of each hour the cuckoo announces the fact, and immediately Garfield appears on the platform on which the scene is enacted, accompanied by Mr. Blaine. Guiteau is seen to follow him, having just alighted from a truck-wagon, and as he fires at the President the latter falls. Just then a train of cars comes dashing in, and in the confusion all the principal actors are carried into the depot out of sight. After the train-dispatcher has given the signal and the train has gone, a small door at the left opens and a priest appears, book in hand, in the act of reading a funeral service, while at the same time another door at the right opens and Guiteau appears on the gallows. The priest retires, and shortly after the gallows disappear with Guiteau, and the doors close. This is acted out at the end of each hour and takes about three minutes.

Fish in the Great Lakes.

The whitefish in Lake Erie average three and a half pounds, but occasionally one or more are taken weighing ten to eighteen pounds. I speared one in 1844, at Copper Harbor, Lake Superior, that weighed twenty-five pounds. On the north side of Isle Royale, Lake Superior, the whitefish average fourteen pounds. The lake herring are the most uniform in size of all our fishes, averaging less than a pound in weight, and this average will hold good if you count them by millions; but, nevertheless, I have had brought to me specimens that would weigh three, four, and even six pounds. The whitefish of the Yonkon River, Alaska—so say the Government reports—weigh as high as forty pounds. The sturgeon of the "Great Lakes" average fifty pounds, but now and then one is taken that weighs 100 pounds and over. I saw myself, at the Sault Ste. Marie, one taken that weighed 125 pounds. The catfish of our lakes are of the most superior quality, bringing in the Southern markets a better price than any of our lake fishes, whether fresh, salted, or smoked. The average size is twelve pounds, but I saw a specimen taken with a hook and line that weighed fifty pounds. In the waters of the Mississippi valley it often attains double that weight.—American Angler.

"In this state, you know, education is compulsory," remarked the teacher. "All children must learn to read." The visitor listened to the only one in class murdering their reading lesson for a few minutes, and then replied: "Yes, but why don't they?"

ELDER MOSE KITE.

His Hair Breadth Escapes from Seen and Unseen Foes.

Troy, Kansas, Chief, Jan. 18, 1883.

Most of our citizens well remember Mose Kite, (who lived in Petersburg Bottom) the hero of our state's early political history, who was of stalwart build and powerful physique; who in 1858 led a colony of our people to Pike's Peak, who fought the Indians on the plains and was shot through the body; who on his return here after the rebellion was converted and baptized by Elder Benshall, of the Christian church at Petersburg Bottom, and became a revival preacher of celebrity all through this section. They will also recall the fact that, attacked with consumption and reduced to a skeleton, he was obliged to remove to the Rockies in hope of saving his life. None thought he would succeed. But still, however, the editor of this paper met him at the head of the Republican river, bigger and more robust than ever. "Why, I thought you had died of consumption long, long ago, Elder?"

"Me? I never had consumption, man! though people thought that was what ailed me, and I thought so myself. But the doctors had sent me on a wild-goose chase after a dozen other diseases, just as fatal, and this was the wildest one or all."

The good Elder then recounted to us, in a charming vein, his many adventures in the rough and ready life he had led; "but," he said, remarkable as you may think my warlike life has been, I have a much more interesting story to tell you."

"You know what a rough, noisy fellow I used to be; and I could stand any hardship. Why, on a wager, I have knocked down an ox and a mule with my fist. I have fought ruffians, border outlaws and Indians; but I was

by a more dangerous unseen enemy that was ever getting me more completely in his clutches. I was shot at by an Indian in a fight on the plains, but the wound healed readily and gave me but little trouble. After I returned to Kansas and commenced preaching, I first began to give way. I had a dull feeling, accompanied with a pain in the right side. Dr. Butler, our family physician, said my liver was out of order, caused by the malaria of the bottoms. I had always had an appetite like an ostrich, but my digestion became seriously impaired. While on the circuit preaching, I consulted a doctor, who said I had dyspepsia. After that distressing palpitation of the heart followed, and the physician said this was caused by my indigestion and diseased liver which would probably terminate fatally. Sometimes I had a ravenous appetite, at others none at all. I was feverish and then chilly. My food seemed to do me no good. A specialist told me I had a tape worm! Then I was troubled with unusual quantities of water and a frequent desire to urinate which was done with difficulty and great pain. The specialist said I had a touch of the gravel, caused by use of the alkaline water of the plains. I then began to suffer severe pains in the loins and the small of the back, accompanied with sudden attacks of dizziness, during which I had to sit or lie down to avoid falling. I was forced to abandon because I could no longer ride on horseback, or trust myself out alone. I began to be seriously alarmed, and sought the advice of the most noted physician within reach. He said that my frequent horseback riding had jolted and jarred me until the old indian wound, which had injured my kidneys, had become inflamed. He treated me with medicines and electricity also, but gave me no permanent benefit. My painful symptoms all returned. I began to cough, got very thin and my legs were disagreeably numb. I began to despair. At each attempt to cure, my ailments became worse, with new symptoms. I next consulted a celebrated physician from the east, who, after thumping and examining me, stated that I was in an advanced stage of consumption and threatened with diabetes and paralysis! He thought I might possibly prolong my life for a year or two, by seeking a higher and dryer climate. This was my condition when the people in your part of the country last saw me.

Then I started for the Rockies but liked this country and settled here. At first the change helped me, but about three years ago the benefit ceased. Then I failed so rapidly that I could be out of bed only a part of each day. All my old symptoms returned. At this crisis, a party of Eastern gentleman, made my house their headquarters. In the party was a Dr. Wakefield, who informed me that I had a bad case of incurable Bright's Disease, and gave me a preparation which might, he said, ease me for a few weeks or months, but that was the best that could be done. Around the bottle was a newspaper. Now a newspaper was a rarity in our home, and I sat in my chair looking it over when my eye providentially fell upon an article relating a most wonderful cure of Bright's disease—the very malady that was killing me—by the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, (of Rochester, N. Y.). Convinced that further delay would be fatal, and everything else failing, the next morning, I dispatched one of my boys to the nearest railroad station, many miles distant, to obtain a bottle of the Safe Cure. The druggist said the demand for the Cure was so great he could not keep it in stock, and he had to send to Kansas City for more. It was more than a week before it arrived, and I was daily getting weaker. But it came at last, and I at once began to take it. When I told Dr. Wakefield what I was was taking, he gave me a look, half of scorn, half of pity, as much as to say,

ON A BUFFALO HUNT,

'POOR FELLOW!

He is putting his trust in a humbug.' Nevertheless I persevered and for the past year and a half I have been as strong and rugged as I ever was in my life. After escaping the attacks of Indians and half a dozen doctors, I was lying at the mercy of a still more dreadful foe that was about giving me the finishing blow, when that great remedy stepped in, slew my adversary, and placed me firmly on my feet once more. I have commenced preaching again, for I look upon the circumstances and manner of my cure as a direct interposition of Providence, and to Providence are my services due. That is my story. I think it is as good as a romance—and much better, for it is true."

Such is the substance, and very near the language of Elder Kite's narrative. Those who read it, and are suffering, may benefit by his experience, if they will, follow his example.

A 7-yr-old:—Papa, are all sycamore trees hollow?

Papa:—Most always hollow or shaky at the butt? Why do you ask, son?

Son:—Why the preacher said Sunday night some men were like sycamore trees.

Two Tecumsehites, lonely and tired of their own company, and having no faith that their own sex would allay their eagerness for a social flip, caught sight of a star in the East last Friday evening, and each provided with a horse and cutter started this way to look for a Mate and her sister who had strayed from home. A farmer's residence, just north of the village, over which the star rested, was where the halt was made. A Minnie-ha-ha inside fell upon their ears, which thrilled those lonely mortals until their chests heaved like a blacksmith's bellows. One anchored his horse to a post as Tit-us tight could be; the other forget to do it and left it to stay or flee. The "Yes, we'll be ready in a minute," soon followed the pounding of the door-bell; and then followed the good night to the cousins who were to be left behind. The kids, elated by their good luck, thought nothing now was in their way. But it was not to be so. Only one horse and cutter could be found. The quartette dropped their heads in disappointment and meditation. During the silence bells were heard toward the village which were at once recognized to be those which were to chime in with the wooing. The girls were asked to wait and the boys started in pursuit. They drove like sixty without avail. When near home they were full of confidence that the runaway would be in the yard. Disappointed again they took a back track, after taking a fresh horse. Fourteen miles drive brought them to where the first halt was made. Another consultation was had, during which a familiar sound greeted every ear. "Where are those bells? Can it be that the horse went through the gate into the yard? Let's see." There was a Russell of excitement, and sure enough there was the rig not five rods from where it was left. The joke began to dawn on the minds of the Tecumsehites, and although they perhaps will never forgive that cousin yet it was purely an accident of course. It was agreed not to tell.

He was and is as crazy as a bed bug, but being a poor devil without money, friends or influence, there has been no difficulty in convicting him. He certainly is not fit to be at large, but his conviction, when compared with certain acquittals down in Lenawee Co. makes one wonder if he would have been sent up under other circumstances.

The Morenci Fair Association held its annual meeting last week. They have a stock company organization. The association is now out of debt and has $600 in the treasury. We have $50,000 or over to raise for a new court house, which is all the tax payers of the county will be willing to assume for some time to come. If the farmers in the central portion of the county want fair grounds let them do as the people of Morenci and vicinity have done—buy the ground and go to work and pay for it."

JOURNALISM.

Dickens was Simply a First-class Reporter---The Absolutism of the Press.

George Alfred Townsend.

I will tell a story that Mr. Osgood, the Boston publisher, gave me during the week. He said when Mr. Dickens wanted to come to read in America, a few years before his death, he was very sensitive about the reception he would have after his lampooning the country in 1842. So he sent his agent, Dr. Dolby, ahead, who called on Fields & Osgood and asked them to take the agency in the newspaper offices in Boston and New York. Among other places he was carried to the office of James G. Bennett, the founder of The Herald. The Herald was pelted in the face for Dr. Dolby. Mr. Bennett was called a Chinese compositor on Ningpo, who, when [illegible] Bagdad. Now, the American people are great enough to overlook the errors or impudence of a young man who meant to sell his wares about as in England. After Dolby got through, he was [illegible] any way. He is nothing but a reporter. I have got four or five men in my office who are better reporters than Dickens." The old man was perfectly serious about it, too.

After Mr. Fields told this story a gentleman present said: "Do you remember that at the Dickens dinner George William Curtis, who made the best speech there, described Dickens as a reporter all the way through, and said that the reporter's faculty in all great literary men was the foundation of their power? Even in Hawthorne, who became a reporter in garrets and back-yards, among the bugs and cobwebs and rays of light, instead of out among the crowd."

"Well," said Mr. Osgood, "I could not help feeling that the strong points of Dickens were, as a reporter, closely observing the dialect and behavior of man. To me, the Pickwick Papers remain the most delightful things Dickens ever did, and they are reporting throughout."

"There are few men in this world fit for absolute power, and to control a newspaper is as near absolute power in this country as anything I know of. Not even an Indian chief or Jesse James can always have his own way with his band, but the newspaper publisher can. He is apt to live his philosophy, therefore, and to criticize opinions against contemporary men, and to emulate the eripping of his father by some charming Tom, or Dick, or Harry as magnetic influence. The publishing of a newspaper like the writing for them, is a matter of good hard sense and unremitting industry. There is a democracy in the newspaper business. Its weakness of men is soon found out. Their strength no man can take from them by lying or backbiting. To honest aspiration it is ever open.

"The only friend to rely upon, after all, in the newspaper art is that great general public which responds to the daily budget and season. This forming of little Masonic lodges among the newspapers to bolster up another up, and never mention another person's name, is all folly; and the idea of any newspaper editor or publisher dying without forgiving anything to any person who has been in the same business is to falsify the Lord's prayer, which says, "Forgive us our sins as we forgive those who have sinned against us;" and who that publishes a paper is not doing that all the time? There are some of the most arrant cowards in charge of newspapers. He who cannot receive a word back, who is perpetually exploding fire-crackers under other people, had better stop this game.

Gas and Electricity.

Demorest's Monthly.

When electricity was first successfully used for illuminating purposes there was a great fall in the price of gas stocks in all the large cities of the civilized world. There has been a recovery since then, and it really seems that Dr. Siemens was right when he claimed that the use of gas would increase, notwithstanding the employment of the electric light. He expressed the opinion that the latter can never be used economically in the household. But gas, he said, would take the place of coal for heating and cooking purposes, and this prediction is being partially verified. We are now promised a revolution by the use of petroleum to produce a gas which gives out an intense heat. A patent has been taken out in every civilized country for the production of a gas by some combination of petroleum with lime. The companies have been formed, and it is said that within a short time, and by the pipes used for carrying ordinary gas, that burning material will be introduced into our households which will heat our rooms and cook our food at one-third of the cost now necessitated by the use of coal or wood. The recent speculative excitement in petroleum is said to be due to the practical application of this patent by some of our gas companies. Petroleum has never commanded a fair price in view of its production in excess of the demands of the consumers. Our wells have pumped out about 27,000,000 barrels per annum, but heretofore the world has been searched in vain for a market for this ocean of mineral oil. Should we make use of it, however, for a heat-producing and cooking gas, there will be an abundant demand for all the petroleum we could produce. It would add marvelously to human comfort if so bulky a product as coal could be dispensed with, and our dwellings were warmed by a cleanly and comparatively inexpensive gas.

Killing Rats by Electricity.

West Chester Local.

Ralph Corbit, an ingenious 12-year-old boy of Honeybrook, Chester county, Pa., has devised a novel plan of getting rid of the rats which infest his father's cellar. He has constructed out of old fruit jars a battery of three Leyden jars, which he connects and places upon a large iron plate which touches the tinfoil on the outside. The bait is so arranged that when the rat steps upon the plate and seizes the bait he at once makes the connection between the outside and inside of the jars, and they are discharged through his body, killing him literally as quick as lightning. He charges the jars by means of an electric machine, also constructed by himself. He ran a couple of wires through the floor to the cellar from the room above, and as soon as he would hear a rat squeak he would immediately recharge the battery. The first time he put the machine in operation he slaughtered twenty-five rats in a space of three hours, and in two days the cellar was entirely cleared of the pests.

English Snobbery.

Harper's Bazar.

It would seem as if snobbery could not go much farther than in those English newspapers which tell of the "paroxysms of delight" manifested by the baby princess of Connaught on recognition of her father when he returned home from the war, as she was six months old when he left, and he was away twelve months.

Took It in Dead Earnest.

Harper's Weekly.

Students at Harvard printed a circular purporting to be issued by a "Society for the Reform of the Social Habits of Foreigners," and addressed especially to the consumption of Limburger cheese and sour kraut. The circular came into the hands of European journalists, and was severely and gravely commented upon by them.

Not Too Much Learning in a Judge.

New York Sun.

Chief Justice Sharwood of Pennsylvania said, in a speech at a Philadelphia banquet, given in honor of his retirement from the bench: "Indeed, it may be questioned whether great learning is a desirable quality in a judge. He is apt to wish to display it on all occasions, by elaborate and tedious opinions, and delivering charges unintelligible to juries."

THAT BAD BOY.

The Tricks He Played on His Pa in Chicago.

Peck's Sun

"When pa and I got to Chicago," said the bad boy, "we walked around town all day, and went to the stores, and at night pa was offul tired, and he put me to bed in the tavern and went out to walk around and get tired. I was tired, and I walked around the bed. I thought pa had gone to the theatre, and that made me mad, and I thought I would stay up for all I was worth. Our room was big, and the next room was big, and there was an old maid, with a switch and a right on her head. I saw her room and she left the door open, cause she thought I was a good boy. That made me mad, and I thought I would play a trick on the old maid, so I put the chairs in the middle of the room, and put the old maid's pumps on our door and our door knob, and then I went to bed. I tried to keep awake, so as to help pa if he had any difficulty, but I rather guess I got asleep, but I woke up when the dog barked. If the dog had not woke me up the woman's screams would, and if that hadn't pa would. You see, pa came home from the theatre about 12, and he had been drinking. He says everybody drinks when they go to Chicago, even the minister. Pa looked at the lounters on the doors all along the hall till he found 210, and walked right in and pulled off his coat and threw it on the lounge where the dog was. The old man was asleep, but the dog barked, and pa said, 'That cussed boy has bought a dog!' and he kicked the dog and the old maid woke up and said, 'What is the matter, pet?' Pa laffed and said, 'Nuthin' the mazzer with me, pet,' and then you ought to have heard the yelling. The old maid covered her head and kicked and yelled, and the dog snarled and bit pa on the pants, and pa had his vest off and his suspenders unbuttoned and he got scared and took his coat and vest and went out in the hall, and I opened our door and told pa he was in the wrong room and I knowed it, and he came in our room and I closed the door, and the bell-boy, and the porter and the clerk came to see what ailed the old maid, and she said a burglar got in her room, and they found pa's hat on the lounge, and they took it and told her to be quiet and they would find the burglar. Pa was so scared that he sweat like everything, and he was offul warm, and he pretended to go to sleep, but he was wondering how he could get his hat back. In the morning I told him it would be hard work to explain it to the law he happened to get into the wrong room, and he said it wasn't necessary to say anything about it to me. Then he gave me $5 to go out and buy him a new hat, and he said I might keep the change if I would not mention it when I got home, and I got him one for ten shillings, and we took the 8 o'clock train in the morning and came home, and I s'pose the Chicago detectives are trying to fit pa's hat onto a burglar. Pa seemed offullly relieved when we got across the state line into Wisconsin. But you'd a died to see him come out of that old lady's room, with his coat and vest on his arm, and his suspenders hanging down, looking scart. He dasent lick me any more or I'll tell ma where pa left his hat."

The Popularity of Novelists.

George Alfred Townsend.

Mr. Osgood, the publisher, remarked to me during the week that he rather though Walter Scott as a novelist would outlast Dickens. Scott kept nearly even with Dickens in sales at the present day, while Dickens' influence was yet recent, and it was therefore fair to conclude that when a few more years had passed Scott, rooted in romance and history, would continue to be the necessity of many and the delight of some. Mr. Osgood said that he thought Scott's poetry in the present period found more sale than that of Byron, who once outstripped Scott in contemporary popularity. The novels of Mr. Howells had a fair though not extraordinary sale of perhaps 15,000 copies each. Hawthorne had never sold extravagantly, and probably never would become the favorite of great masses of people, since he worked for too fine an element and rather wrote over the heads of the multitude. The two distinctive successes in fiction had been Mrs. Stowe with "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and Mr. Tourgée with "The Fool's Errand." Mrs. Stowe might have realized $75,000 in all from her books. Mrs. Burnett had not made much money from her tales and novels, but was reputed to have realized well from her play. Mr. Cable had a ready market for his wares, but was not a wealthy man, though he was a religious one, and a devout Presbyterian. Mr. Rice, of whom the literary public knew little, published a set of goody stories which had a very considerable sale.

Dealing With a Patient.

Dr. Boutelle, of Hampton, Va., writes: "One day, not long ago, I was called here, at Hampton, Va., to see an old colored woman of the 'fo-de-war' type, black as the ten of spades (which is ten times blacker than the ace), extremely voluble, and anxious to impress me with the importance of her 'simpsons,' of which she was determined I shall have a full and clear understanding before I prescribed. I produced pencil and paper, and told her to begin again, which she did with great gusto.

"My mis'ry, doctor, wuks right up from bofe my legs, an' up through my stummick, an' den crost my bowels, all a shaky an' a wig-waggy! Den my right shoulder, doctor. Law sakes!!! Dat yer mis'ry in my right shoulder pow'ful bad sometimes. Den I has shootin' pains all up an' down my spine, dreadful' an' jumps in my flanks, an' a burnin' all over my right side, an' a roarin'! yes, honey, an awful roarin' in my head, an' de bones all loose in my head. Den I has pains in bofe shoulders! an' I has a thraggin in my stummick an' my stummick very bad. Ef you b'lieve me, doctor, dar's a patch o' mis'ry in de small o' my back, an' when I stan' up 'pears like my insides dey stick to my spine! an' a wallowin in my head, and I don' got no appetite. I can't drink no fresh water, 'cause all my water dried! In de night you can hear my head roarin' an' a buzzin'. Den I has a hotness in de bone o' my neck, an' at times a pang riz up right across my neck, an' riz an' burst! I knowed it wasn't a blood vessel else I'd a died sure!"

Robert Collyer.

The Rev. Robert Collyer told a congregation at Springfield, Mass., how he had made his way from the anvil to the pulpit. Fifty years ago he was a child in England, with unlettered but industrious parents, who put him at the trade of blacksmithing. He worked eight years with an employer who died of drink, and he thinks it was only the love of reading which saved him from the same fate. His first preaching was as a Methodist exhorter, and for the first ten years of his ministration his income from that source averaged seventy-five cents a year, his living being earned as a blacksmith. He came to America with his bride in 1869, a stranger, & the panic of 1873 he earned a hard for awhile. Twenty years ago he became a salaried preacher, going over from the Methodists to the Unitarians, and has since been very successful.

The Order of Nature.

If you shake up a basket of truffles or gravel the smaller portions will go toward the bottom, the larger ones will come toward the top. This is the order of nature. There is no way of evading it. And the same order prevails in the basket of human life. The world's shaking will send the small characters downward and bring the larger ones toward the top. The larger ones are not to blame for this. The smaller ones have no right to complain of it. It is the shaking that does the business.

"Two-Ten."

What Is It?

It is an article that is having greater success than any other preparation of like nature for the time it has been before the people. It has cured, and is still curing to-day, more obstinate cases of Indigestion and Dyspepsia than any other preparation known. It is guaranteed to give satisfaction, or money will be refunded, for the following ailments:—Liver and Kidney Complaints, Impurity of Blood, including Pimples and Blotches, or other skin eruptions, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, etc. It is not a beverage nor a violent purgative. Is pleasant to take, safe and sure in its effects, quick in its action, and lasting and permanent in its cures, the component ingredient being purely soothing to the system. They derive their virtues chiefly from the rare merits of the old Burdock plant, combined and chemically prepared with other great curative medicines. Our grandmothers and grandfathers used the Burdock root alone, with the greatest success. Burdock Blood Bitters is a compound that is giving such universal satisfaction that the proprietors instruct all druggists to refund money when relief is not given by its use.

More than fifty years ago, when I was a boy and suffered from a cold or any throat or lung affection, I took Downs' Elixir, and considered it a sovereign remedy for all such difficulties. And from its frequent use in all the subsequent years I have seen no reason to qualify my opinion of this standard remedy for those diseases which are so fatal in our climate.

TECUMSEH, MICH., FEB. 15, 1883.

This is a good winter for pump makers and plumbers.

A fair deal and no favor. This rule applied to business is what free trade means.

The week of truce having ended the Senatorial contest has broken out again at Lansing.

The Boston Herald aptly observes that any public officer who desires a future should let futures alone.

New York politicians are more numerous in Washington than formerly. They are crowding out the office men.

Senator Ferry and weather prophet Wiggins can mingle their tears. Both have suffered disappointment. Wiggins's storm didn't come, and Ferry did.

Floods are making sad havoc in the Ohio valley. Wait a few days until the thaw touches this latitude and we may be enjoying canoe navigation ourselves.

There was an earthquake at Cassopolis last week. Can this be intended as a Providential rebuke to Cass Co., for the large Union vote poured there last fall?

The Senate voted last week to put books on the free list. This is a move in the right direction. A tax on intelligence is one of the most oppressive of all taxes.

Hubbell lays his defeat to Ferry and Ferry attributes his position on the ragged edge to Hubbell. The Chicago Times thinks that the nation can spare them both.

Wiggins, the latest Canada weather prophet, predicted the worst storm of the season last Friday. Wiggins had better retire. Wiggins has wiggled around as a weather prophet about long enough.

Gov. Pattison, of Pennsylvania, has made a bold stroke for reform. His special message is creating as much consternation among the office holders as a bumble bees' nest in a camp meeting.

Tariff reform is gaining ground. Skeletons have been put on the free list, and hereafter, as Senator Vance remarks, every citizen of this great Republic can have a skeleton in his closet free of duty.

Adrian is still in search of a water supply. Why should the good people of that town wish to destroy one of their most promising industries? A good supply of wholesome water would knock the saloon business of that city higher than a kite.

The Adrian Times has been hauling the Detroit Post & Tribune over the coals for its opposition to Senator Ferry. The editor of the P. & T. must feel awfully about it, but we presume he will keep right on writing anti-Ferry editorials the same as before.

Treasurer Vincent, of Alabama, is missing. He has not been heard from in over two weeks. Perhaps he is looking for Navin, "Vincent & Navin, Brokers and Loan Agents," would make a handsome firm name painted in gold letters on a shingle.

An exchange says: "The extraordinary session of congress will give the Democrats extraordinary opportunities for blundering." Perhaps so, but present appearances indicate that the locomotive called "Political Blunders" is pretty securely hitched to the Republican train now.

The outcome of the litigation between the Western Union and the Mutual Union telegraph companies results in the Western Union lion swallowing the Mutual Union lamb, the former company having leased the latter on a perpetual lease. Another victory for monopoly. The telegraph problem is becoming a serious one.

The faith cure has reached its climax in Pennsylvania. A minister in West Middlesex owns a dog that had been paralyzed in its hind legs for three years. The other day a big strange dog chased a rabbit across the minister's lawn, and the invalid dog suddenly became whole, jumped through a window, joined the chase and caught the rabbit.

THE HIGHWAY TAXES.

A New Method of Making Good Roads by Using Wagons with Wide Rims on the Wheels.

The Free Press of January 10th contained an interesting communication on this subject, in which the writer says:

"I believe I am running no risk of successful contradiction when I say that we have no material in Michigan, excepting stone, of which to construct highways that will withstand the wear and tear of the wagon wheels now in almost universal use among the farmers of this state. These wheels are constructed with a narrow rim, the iron tire of which, when worn round, forms a round and almost sharp surface. In this condition, loaded down with a load of more weight and following in quick succession, sometimes hundreds of times daily, they become formidable instruments for the destruction of the road bed, and will, in a short time, pulverize any macadamized highways where the best gravel drawn from pits has been ground to dust in the short space of three years, and the beautiful road became a wreck.

"Suppose the rims of the wheels of our wagons for heavy drafts, denominated lumber wagons, were built with a four inch rim instead of a two inch rim. Every such loaded wagon drawn over our own highways, it matters not whether it be built of marl, clay or sand, would improve that highway. Instead of injuring it the rims will act like a succession of rollers upon soft land, each succeeding day, month and year, making the road bed more compact, its surface more and more level.

"In last week's Michigan Farmer a writer comments favorably upon the above plan and adds:

"Now, it seems to me that this is a move in the right direction. The cost of making and keeping our roads in a passable condition is a great item, which can be reduced from one-third to one-half in a space of three or four years, if we can have a uniformity of four inch rims on our lumber wagons. It must be conceded that a load can be drawn as easily, if not more so, on a wagon with such rims, where the roads are not rutted or cut up with a narrow tire, and since the cost of construction is the same at the factory, the durability of the wagon increased, and the weight no more, it seems very clear that for the best interests of the farming world, and to all concerned, a law prohibiting the use of lumber wagons, with a rim less than four inches wide, would be just and expedient, allowing sufficient time, say one or two years after passing the act, for the change. During such time all new wagons purchased would be wide rims, and all wagons repaired would be to the standard, consequently the law would fall heavily on but a few for the benefit of all. Now, it seems the proper thing to do would be to petition the Legislature from as many parts of the state, with as many names, as soon as possible, asking action on a matter that is of so much interest to the tax-payer, and the lover of good smooth highways.

"This is a question of much magnitude and certainly deserves careful investigation at the hands of the Legislature. The highway tax of this state amounts to more than two million dollars annually, and if the roads can be improved, and this tax materially reduced at the same time, there would seem to be good reason for some legislative action on the subject."

THE LAW AGAINST BRIBERY.

The law of Michigan against the use of corrupt means to influence a senatorial election, as found on page 206, acts of 1876, is full and properly severe. It reads thus:

"SECTION 8. Any person who shall directly or indirectly by himself or by any other person on his behalf, offer or promise any office, place or employment under the government of the United States, or promise to procure or to endeavor to procure any such office, place or employment to or for any member of the Legislature, or to or for any other person, in order to induce such member of the Legislature to vote or refrain from voting for any person for the office of United States Senator from this State, or shall corruptly do any such act as aforesaid, on account of any member of the Legislature having voted or refrain from voting as aforesaid shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for a period not exceeding five years, or by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars."

In commenting upon this law, the Ann Arbor Register says:

"This is the law which the News and the Post and Tribune charge that the Ferry managers have violated. The language of these papers clearly means that Rice A. Beal is the chief offender against this law. It has long been known to the Republicans of Washtenaw that such methods have been resorted to in local elections, and they also know who is responsible for putting them into operation. Even regents of the University have been approached by this man with similar offers if they would do his bidding, in persecuting members of the faculty for whom he entertained a dislike, or who stood in the way of the ambitious schemes of those who, through his instrumentality, hoped to gain control of the University and its treasury. It is through such trickery and meanness that so many Republicans have been driven from the ranks in this district and that Democratic representatives were elected last fall. It is time for all ambitious politicians to pause and consider whether as in everything else, in the long run, honesty is not the best policy."

The Kalamazoo Telegraph says: All or nearly all the peach buds in this vicinity are killed by the cold weather. An examination shows that some of the very hardiest sorts growing in the lower part of the trees may yet come forth. At South Haven and other points on the Lake Shore, however, the peach buds are untouched and a bountiful harvest and big prices are expected.

WHAT CONSTITUTES OVERWORK.

Mr. Seymour Haden, one of Mr. Spencer's countrymen, in a complimentary reception speech, expressed his quite emphatic disagreement with Spencer, and his admiration of the spirit of American enterprise and the splendid activity of the American people. As to the injury done by overwork, he did not believe in it, and the eminent physician, Sir William Gull, told him that he never knew a man who had died from it. It is worry, not work, which kills, said Mr. Haden.

Undoubtedly, but is not the healthy worry one of the inevitable accompaniments and consequences of the overwork under the conditions of competitive enterprise in this country? It is work carried to such extremes as to engender anxiety and harrassment under the pressure of multitudinous rivalries and the eagerness of unchecked ambition that is condemned. It is not claimed that the man who kills himself at fifty by unremitting labor has done it by too much physical exertion. He has done it by assiduous mental solicitudes without break or reaction, and the neglect of the conditions of health which that absorption of thought and strain of the feelings imply. Spencer's criticisms were leveled at the want of regulation and of a corrective in the shape of systematic relaxations that shall give more contrast in life, and greater freedom to the play of agreeable feeling, in place of the vexatious solicitudes which spring from devotion to work. To say that it is not overwork that kills, but the worry that is entailed, is merely to quibble with the subject. Sir William Gull might as well have declared that he had never known a case of death from cholera or consumption because it is the lack of power in the constitution to resist these diseases that is really the cause of death. It is only by such caviling that the notorious fact can be evaded, that thousands of men in this country sacrifice health and life to the passionate eagerness of business pursuits. Every observing person can give examples within the sphere of his own acquaintance of such premature break downs by the score.—Prof. E. L. Youmans, in Popular Science Monthly for January.

The Blissfield Advance, in speaking of the Senatorial situation says: "The Detroit Post and Tribune sent out circulars last week in order to ascertain the sentiments of the people of Michigan on the Senatorial question, and from nearly every county, reports are strongly against the return of Senator Ferry. Nobody seems to want him, except his small army of office-holders who are indebted to him for their places. We believe the Hon. Edwin Willits the most competent and able man for the place, and his election is strongly hoped for hereabouts, among Republicans and Democrats alike."

D. P. Anthony & Co.

GENTS:—The Minneapolis Harvester and Twine Binder I bought of you last year, demonstrated completely its ability to cut and bind all sizes, kinds and conditions of grain in a more perfect and satisfactory manner than I could do it by hand, (and I have been considered an expert at such work,) and as fast as my team would take it to the grain to be cut. I harvested over one hundred acres of wheat and oats with it, about fifty of which were very tall and heavy and a part of the latter down and fearfully tangled.

A. D. HALL.
Tecumseh, Jan. 25th, 1883.

FAIR MEETING.

The fair meeting held at the opera house last Saturday P.M., was well attended. The farmers from all around the county were present and remarks were made by many, all being in favor of organizing a fair association at Tecumseh. Committees were appointed to solicit stock, and a committee of three was appointed to look up and negotiate about suitable grounds. The meeting adjourned to meet at the council building two weeks from Saturday P.M.

Interest is shown from all over the county towards organizing a good fair association at Tecumseh. We have a good locality and by next fall the town will be well supplied with railroad connections, north and south, east and west. The investment will pay good interest on the money as indeed has been shown by the success of every Agricultural society in this section, not excepting the organization at Adrian, and that has worked under every disadvantage possible. Now is the time for our capitalists to "show up" and do something to help the town and yet make a paying investment for themselves.

Jerry Allen, of Goshen, Ind., has been visiting his old Tecumseh friends for a few days. He came out to attend his mother's, Mrs. Murray's, funeral.

An Ann Arbor girl froze her ears the other day while going to church. She probably wore a fashionable butter-plate hat instead of a comfortable fur hood.

R. W. Hillman has sold his splendid farm in the Newburg neighborhood to Wesley Keyser, of this township.—If Mr. Hillman will take gratuitous advice kindly we would say to him: Now buy a handsome place in the village and move into town.

Lumbering is brisk and the woods are full of men. A man in Fred. Smith's lumber camp was killed by a falling tree last week, which is the second accident of the kind in these woods this winter.

Wesley Keyser has bought R. W. Hillman's farm. Having a good farm of his own, an inquisitive person might naturally inquire what he wants of another one. Probably he thinks a good farm is the best investment for a little surplus capital.

Capt. Lawrence, of Co. C, received a letter last Tuesday from Capt. Miller, of Jackson, announcing the death of Col. Griffith, the preceding evening. He died at 10:30 on Monday night, being sick only ten minutes.—Apoplexy was probably the cause.—The funeral will be held at Jackson on Saturday, and will be under the auspices of the military. Co. C will attend the obsequies.

The floods on the lower Ohio river are causing immense destruction. The Southern freight and passenger depots at Cincinnati collapsed, carrying over a hundred people into the water, many of whom were drowned. At New Albany and Louisville hundreds of acres on the river bottoms are under water, and people are leaving their houses in all directions.

An old man would not believe he could hear his wife talk a distance of five miles by telephone. His better half was in a country store several miles away, where there was a telephone, and the sceptic was also in a place where there was a similar instrument, and on being told how to operate it he walked boldly up and shouted, "Hello, Sarah!" At that instant lightning struck the telephone wire and knocked the man down, and as he scrambled to his feet he excitedly cried, "that's Sarah, every time!"

THE SKATING CARNIVAL.

The roller skating masquerade at the Opera House last Tuesday evening was well attended. The fun began about eight o'clock with nearly forty skaters en masque, and a good audience of spectators both in the gallery and below. There were some very grotesque costumes, and taking them all together there was a good variety displayed. There were several gentlemen skaters present from Adrian, all of whom were experts, who added much to the entertainment of the evening. The skaters unmasked at 9 o'clock, after which others took part. The party broke up at eleven and every one who attended voted it to be a very pleasant evening's entertainment.

THE PINK RECEPTION.

Let all who would enjoy a social treat, a feast of good reason, a feast of good sense, and participator in the inner man, accept an invitation en masse to the Pink Reception at the Opera House, Feb. 22. The young ladies of our High School, pink-capped and pink aproned, the young gentlemen pink tied, will cater to the inner man. The bill of fare will be loaded with the delicacies of the season and served upon the European plan, each person ordering only the viands he wishes. Music will be discoursed by the orchestra and the prominent feature will be the "taking of the cake" by the handsomest man present, the person receiving the largest number of votes being the happy recipient.—The proceeds of the entertainment are to be devoted to the interests of the school in purchasing necessary apparatus for original investigations. Come one, come all.

SLIPPING UP.

Did you ever "slip up" on the ice?—If not, why not? And if you havn't slipped up during the past two weeks you are an exception to the rule which has but few exceptions in these parts. Since the sleet storm of ten days ago slipping up has almost developed into a fine art. The old and the young, men and women, short folks and long folks, little and big, homely and handsome, without distinction as to race, color or previous condition, have all engaged in this innocent pastime, and to watch the different styles shown by different people in slipping up is a study for the naturalist or artist.

The urchin of ten years old drops upon his crazy bone. Rys up again to be found in his last Sunday School lesson, and enjoys a laugh at the expense of the old man who slipped up the next moment, while sympathizing with the urchin's misfortune. The young lady losses her balance, comes down on her bustle, looks around sadly to see whether anyone witnessed the mishap, and quietly dodges into the nearest dry goods store to price the last invoice of calicos. The spruce young man of five and twenty meanders down the sidewalk as though he were walking on eggs, when one foot flies out on a tangent; in his effort to plant that foot, the other one flies out; to save himself he then spreads out both arms, his head gives a lurch forward and his heels backward and he comes down at full length on the walk. This exhibition is generally witnessed by the deputy sheriff, the reporter of the local paper and several pretty young ladies who are out on a promenade. The old lady of sixty comes puffing along, steps on an icicle, and settles down all in a heap like a pail of hot ashes in a snow drift. The old gentleman, who talks politics on the street corners and weighs two hundred and fifty pounds, steams up the street like a porpoise, turns round to poke fun at the young Apollo for slipping up, when both feet leave the ice simultaneously and he sits down on the walk with a crash that cracks the store windows and shivers the flag stone sidewalk. The pretty little school girl goes hippity-hopping along, gives a scream, rolls over half a dozen times, gets up and bawls. If you doubt the correctness of these observations, just station yourself in an easy chair, before a plate glass window, and gaze out into the zero weather an hour or so.

RAILROAD NOTES.

Marshall Statesman: The sub-contract for bridges and culverts on the Marshall and Homer divisions of the T. & M. has been let to Mr. Frank L. Sweet, of Cleveland, O. He is a bridge builder of many years experience and can be depended upon to do the work in a satisfactory manner. He commenced work this morning at the mill pond, cutting the piles and sawing the heavy timbers preparatory to placing them on the piles. The pile driver has been removed to the stone mill and when the piles there are driven, will be set to work at the Rice Creek near the hoe factory.

Sylvester Lamb is engaged in the vicinity of Homer closing up contracts on the right of way.

The sharp weather of the last few days has put an end to grading operations in these parts, but work on the big bridge, east of the village, still continues, a large force of men being employed upon it daily.

Yesterday, for the first time, we went down to take a look at the river bridge on the M. & O. railroad, and when the matter is summed up, we find down there the beginning of what will be quite a railroad bridge. When completed the structure will be 880 ft. long, contain 270 piles, 55 bents and 250,000 feet of pine timber, besides the oak braces and ties. The grade is over 50 ft. from the bed of the river, and there were some ties driven on which were put 90 blows. Mr. E. J. Tillotson dropped into the office yesterday and wanted to know if we did not want to go down and see the "boosters" at work on the bridge, and in accepting the invitation we were well repaid. "Floring's boosters," as they are called consist of fifteen Germans, Mr. Floring, foreman, and the work of this gang is simply wonderful. They lift those heavy timbers as one man. The gang has worked for Mr. Hamilton since '72. T. H. Hamilton, of Toledo, has the contract for all the bridge building on this end of the line, and the work in Tecumseh, Franklin and Cambridge is under the supervision of his superintendent, E. J. Tillotson, who informs us that if the weather is good, in three weeks time the timbers will all be up on the structure.

The Grand Rapids board of education referred the following to a committee at its last meeting: "Resolved, that there be immediately established five reading rooms, to be opened every evening except Sundays, three of which shall be on the east and two on the west side of the river, to be located in rooms of primary school buildings, and that the board provide suitable reading matter and for the necessary care of the rooms."

Wheat is still going up.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY.

Saint Valentine, who was a bishop at Rome in the reign of the emperor Claudius, and who was beheaded in the year 270, was early canonized. He was so famous for his love and charity that the custom of choosing valentines upon his festival took its rise from thence, and the custom in some modified form has been observed from that day to the present. In early times the manner of observing the day was by presenting gifts of gloves and jewelry to intimate friends. Of late years, its observance consists almost entirely in sending tender, mushy and caricatures through the mails. The day is looked upon by young masters and misses as an opportunity to reveal their affections or [illegible] be. The day was fitly observed in Tecumseh yesterday. Our postmaster was kept busy handing out huge letters in white envelopes, and from present indications he thinks the day will be extended through the week until about next Saturday.

Apollo has peeped through the shutter
And awakened the witty and fair,
The boarding school belle's in a flutter,
The two penny post's in despair;
The breath of the morning is flinging
A magic on blossom and spray,
And cocks and hens and sparrows are singing
In chorus on Valentine's day.

The Michigan Farmer says: "Mr. Daniel Root, of Hudson, Lenawee Co., sent us last week a sample of amber cane molasses of his own manufacture. It is excellent in every respect. He says he manufactured 10,000 gallons last fall, of which he has yet 2,000 gallons on hand. If as good molasses as this can be made in Michigan, the days of glucose are numbered. There are indications that a large amount of amber cane will be grown in this State next season. Those who doubt the quality of amber cane molasses can apply to Mr. Root for a sample and test it for themselves.

The revival meetings at the M. E. Church are still largely attended and will be continued next week. Pastor Pardington is better and will be at his post again and will still be assisted by Rev. Mr. Crozier of Adrian.

Lew Coller, a whilom resident of Tecumseh, and now a resident of Flint, has invented a fire escape which is said to be best thing out. We hope he has struck it rich.

DIED.

In this village, Feb. 4th, 1883, Mrs. Mary Murray, relict of the late Alonzo Murray.

She was born in Williston, Vt. March 9th, 1809. Her first marriage was with Russell Allen who died December 7th, 1826, leaving one son—Jessie Allen. Her marriage with Mr. Murray was in 1836, when they came to Michigan together and settled in Tecumseh. She was a widow over 10 years. She united with the Methodist Church in this place in 1837, and remained a consistent and valued member till her death. She was greatly beloved by all. While the memories of the past were precious to her yet she did not live in the past, but was cheerful and happy and enjoyed life greatly to the last. She was a great favorite with young people. She devoted much of her time to art, leaving among her friends and in her home some very exquisite specimens of her handiwork.

Her death, though not unexpected was sudden, without a word or a struggle she was free, her Lord had taken her. Her funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. R. S. Pardington, assisted by Rev. C. E. Conley, of the Baptist church. The floral decorations were beautiful. The singing was by the choir of the church, assisted by Messrs. J. S. Strong and J. D. DePuy. Her only surviving child, by her last marriage, Mrs. Dr. Fisher, feels very keenly her loss, but is assured that she has the sympathies of a large circle of friends.

Office of Osgoodby's Improved Safes, 17 North Broad Street, ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 17th, 1881.

Rush's Medical Association:

Dear Doctors—The three bottles of Dr. Rush's Regulator I ordered were received by express last night. I have taken nearly one bottle, and am highly satisfied with the result. For over two years I have been troubled with sharp pain at my heart. My physician, upon examination, pronounced it enlargement of the heart, and was unable to give me any relief. The trouble grew worse and I became convinced that I could not live. While in New York City, last week, I called on one of the most prominent physicians there and he charged me $5 for an examination and then recommended your "Regulator." Knowing you to be a regular Medical Association, and not a patent medicine scheme, I ordered the three bottles. I have not been troubled since I commenced taking it, but shall continue and take the entire three bottles so as to obtain a permanent cure. You have my sincere thanks. Again, gentlemen,

Very respectfully, WM. G. OSGOODBY.

MOTHER'S BOYS

[Lancaster Examiner.]

Yes, I know there are stains on my carpet,
The traces of small muddy boots;
And I see your fair tapestry growing
And spotless with blossoms and fruit.

And I know that my walls are disfigured,
With prints of small fingers and hands,
And that your own household move truly
In immaculate purity stands.

And I know that my parlor is littered
With many odd playthings and toys,
While your own is as tidy as order,
Undisturbed by the presence of boys!

And I know that my room is invaded
Quite fully all times of the day,
While you, all in silence sitting secluded
And dream the soft hours away!

Now I know there are times I am troubled
By your loneliness and lack of noise,
While with me, in my home, I am troubled
With the boisterous voices of boys.

Now I know I'm a sinner in wishing Darkening hours should come to me,
And am half afraid I shall be punished
Yet would not change places with you.

No! keep your hand, sister, with pride on
Its place on the head of your boy,
And keep your own home quiet and orderly,
But give me my home and my boys!

Madame Dr. Pompadour's Career.

"H. B." in Youth's Companion.

Her name—Jeanne Antoinette Poisson—is known to every reader of history. She was a girl of remarkable wit and beauty, with dramatic power of a higher order, a brilliant musician and a lover of the fine arts. Many suitors sought her favor, and at an early age she married a wealthy man—Le Normant d'Etioles. He loved her devotedly, and was almost wholly for her happiness.

Fickle, unprincipled and eager for pleasure, Jeanne soon tired of her beautiful home and devoted husband, and resolved to possess and attract the attention of the king, who had already [illegible] the world, and rather, the Grand Monarque.

She placed herself in his pathway, dressed in most attractive manner, that she might be noticed and admired by her beauty, [illegible] with her rare charms, [illegible] the king's heart.

Her ambition was gratified. He became infatuated with her royal mien, became her admirer, made and dismissed ministers of state, created cardinals, declared war and arranged terms of peace. The court of France was [illegible] in her boudoir. She once declared that her lap-dog was wearied with the attentions of nobles. She virtually compelled Maria Theresa to address her as ma cousine, and jest at her expense is said to have been the origin of the seven years' war.

The age of 40 found her prematurely old, and with a corroding sense of unworthiness in her heart. She had lost her [illegible] what result? Listen to her own words:

"What a situation is that of the great! Only love in the future, and no room for hope! There is no peace in ambition. It is always gloomy; the kindness of the king, the regards of courtiers, the attachment of dignities, affect me no longer.

"I have no longer an inclination for all that once pleased me. My residence at Bellevue is charming, and I alone cannot endure it. I do not live; I am dead before my time. Yes, I do hate the hatred grievous me exceedingly. My life is a continued death."

She breathed her last amid the splendors of Versailles, at the age of 43.

The day of her burial was a pompous one. The king stood at the window of the palace as the funeral cortege moved away. He had long since tired of the woman who had violated conscience and God's law for his favor, and now he looked with silent indifference on her funeral car fading away in the storm. No love of husband or of child followed it, few tears were shed.

"The marchioness has a rather wet day to go out on her long journey," the footmen said.

"Long journey!" The pomps of the palace had faded; the illusion was done. She had sown to sin, had reaped its rewards, and in the pitiless rain the years swept away the form of Madame de Pompadour forever in a fashionable grave.

Various Hints.

Mirrors should not be hung where the sun shines directly upon them.

To relieve hiccough at once, take a lump of sugar saturated with vinegar.

Hemorrhage of the lungs or stomach may be quickly stopped by small doses of salt.

A broom may be kept in good condition for a long time if it is washed once a week in clean hot suds, and then hung up to dry.

An excellent shampoo is made of salts of tartar, white castile soap, tincture and luke-warm water. The salts will remove all dandruff, the soap will soften the hair and clean it thoroughly, and the bay rum will prevent taking cold.

To extract ink from cotton, silk or woolen goods, dip the spots in spirits of turpentine, and let it remain for several hours; then rub thoroughly between the hands, and it will all disappear without changing either the color or texture of the fabric.

Dried bark of sassafras root put around dried fruit will protect it from worms.

Raw starch, applied with a little water, as paste, will generally remove all stains from bed ticking.

To remove spots from furniture, take four ounces of vinegar, two ounces of sweet oil, one ounce of turpentine. Mix and apply with a flannel cloth.

Spirits of ammonia, dilluted with water, if applied with a sponge or flannel to discolored spots of the carpets or garments, will often restore the color.

Small holes in carpet from moth-chipping or cutting may be mended successfully, if the layer is "with all care be laid in without nipping to the carpet.

Unhappy Marriages.

Lord Byron, in one of his letters, had the following to say of unhappy marriages, and their causes: "A man should marry by all means, yet I am convinced the greater part of marriages are unhappy, and this is not an opinion I give as coming from myself, it is that of a very excellent, agreeable and sensible lady, who married the man of her choice, and has not encountered ostensible any extraordinary misfortune, as a loss of health, riches, children, or [illegible]. She told me this more seriously, and I never had any reason to doubt her sincerity. For all this, I am convinced a man can be happy [illegible] without a wife. It is a strange state, [illegible] we live in. A tendency so natural as that of the union of the sexes ought to lead only to the most harmonious results, yet the very reverse is the fact. There is certainly something radically wrong in the construction or society, the times are out of joint. It is strange, too, what little real liberty of choice we expect even from those who marry according to what others think their own inclinations. The decisions which the world plays off upon each other, the ways in which so many ill-sorted couples meet, don't meet, and by accident are coupled, are done by the contrary promptings of a legal match-maker. Many a man thinks he marries [illegible] who only succeeds by accident, in this respect not having the advantage of women than is generally supposed."

What is Due Our Children.

Demorest's Monthly.

Herbert Spencer would have been more nearly correct had he asserted that the Anglo-Saxon people the abundant of bequeathing their fortunes for their children to quarrel over after their death. All that any parent owes a child is a good education and a profession. Our offspring have a right to demand that they should be equipped for the battle of life, the only excuse for leaving superfluous wealth being in case any of the family are disqualified for work. The aged parents, the widow and the helpless child should have, at least, means enough to sustain them comfortably; but fortunes left to children have often wrought their ruin. The girl becomes the prey of the fortune hunter, while the young man but too often spends his father's hard earnings in riotous living. What a vast social change it would make in the United States if American parents generally realized that they owed nothing to their children but the best possible education and a profession or trade, which is the due of the daughter as well as the son.

WOMAN AND HOME.

Mistaken Education of Girls---Artificial Child Incubation---Girls Who Get Tired.

The Career of Madame De Pompadour---American Home Manners.

The Editor and the Cook-Book.

The most painful malady which one pays for increased years and experience is the loss of illusion in the possessing of youthful illusions, the sad realization of the glamour and romance which surrounded all the commonplace objects that adorned the landscape of our innocent and artless childhood. Who cannot remember the pang of genuine pain he felt when Santa Claus resigned his high position as spirit in charge of government and vanished into the native atmosphere of smoke? How depressing it was to find that the terrible awe-inspiring policeman was in an earthy manner with a white-tipped nose and a strong predilection for making himself invisible at a moment's notice! But the greatest loss of all these juvenile delights was the obliteration of the editor of our childish conceptions. What a dazzling halo of immeasurable dimensions and unearthly glory wrapped him every from a those days! He moved up in the scene with gigantic proportions, seemed to occupy the entire firmament, and walked constantly on terms with his maker. Wise as Minerva, wisdom beamed from his brow—what unsounded depths of mystic love shone in his impenetrable, but penetrating eyes! It really seemed as if one ought to carry a pair of smoked glass about through which to safely gaze upon him. But this bubble, too, has been pierced by the cruel pin of fact, the opera-glass has been reversed, and the aforetime colossal editor has become a lessening speck. The veil has been lifted and the penetralia visited. Careful analysis has discovered the editor to be a base mixture, composed of three parts American Encyclopædia to one part of Lippincott's Gazetteer, and the chinks filled in with biographical dictionary, and almanac jokes. He is a being who lives merely to get his paper mixed; he would stand by, with a demoniacal glitter in his eye while his wife fell down the well, and would not fish her out until he had written up the item. It is believed that half the crimes and casualties which disgrace our country are the outcome of the enterprising editor's base suggestions thereto. To this inhuman being friendship is but a name, and the fond ties of domestic relationships but a tinkling cymbal. But the most outrageous crime in the catalogue of his enormities is his unpardonable and reckless treatment of the cook-book. When his wife refuses to fall into the well, or his infant son has failed to chop off the daily finger, or nobody's cow has gored anybody, and everybody has failed to commit suicide, does the editor weep despairing tears? Not a bit of; he has a refuge in every time of such distress; he hies him to the cook-book, and fills up the deficit in his columns with mangled recipes; some having heads and no tails; others in a reversed condition of melancholy dilapidation. Whole families have been mysteriously laid away after partaking of dishes concocted from newspaper recipes; then the unfeeling man writes up a column of mysterious suicides, with no cause assigned for the rash act. Aside from the crime connected with the editor's base use of the cook-book, it is a wicked infringement on the rights of woman which that oppressed class is called upon to resent with promptness. Let the whole race of editors be driven into the wilderness at the point of the carving-knife, and teach the world that this is not a country in which a man can safely crib his editorials from a cook-book. Arsenic Eating for Beauty.

London World.

Another poison of late years has been steadily rising in the favor of ladies, and its consumption is now enormous. No doubt the doctors are primarily responsible for this fashionable vice. It is unquestionably a very efficacious one, and, when used discreetly, an excellent blood purifier. But no sooner does many a fair patient perceive that it makes the complexion very clear and white than it has a fatal fascination for her; and as a preparation of the drug is to be obtained of any chemist, she is not obliged to make the doctor a confidant of her weakness. It is in France, however, where this poison is chiefly in vogue; and we may be sure that, until our ideal of beauty greatly changes for the worse, the habitual arsenic-takers will remain in a very small minority in this country. The effects of the drug are twofold; it makes the skin of marble whiteness, but it also rapidly produces a form of obesity that comes into violent contact with the prevailing notions of feminine charms. Frenchmen and Mussulmans in thinking that the more closely the female form resembles that of a quadruped the more divine it is. We stand aloof from the wholesome compound, and have a little admiration for the fat kind as we have to the lean. Those who are familiar with French life know with what ardor a Frenchwoman cultivates a well-rounded form. With common sense management of padding and puffing the dressmaker may do a great deal to produce an outline of the desired outline of which the sadder leaner is the best excuse; but the result, after all, is only artistic, and in moments of the pitiless exposition must often make those who practice it, when the "fit star rages," exclaim inwardly, "Oh that this too solid pad would melt!" On the other hand, the enlargement which comes of arsenic is natural, and will easily pass as such. If this drug is not the elixir of perpetual youth, it is at all events, the constructive elixir of beauty of the contemporary French type, and the name of its devotees across the channel is legion.

African Decorative Fashion.

"Niger Exploration."

A West African explorer records the following sample of the universal female passion for ornament, as displayed at Gandiko in the province of Nigritia:

"The soft nose had a species of ornamentation which was quite novel to me, and not captivating. Enough, perhaps, amongst men of artistic taste in their country, it might be styled delectable if there were such a word in the Gandiko language. It consisted of a brass nail in the nose.

"At about a quarter of an inch above the edge of the nostril, outside, the bright brass head glistened on the black skin. Its stem perforated the outer gristle of the nostril to the inside, and was then brought out with a curve towards the ear. The heads of the nails were flatter than our tack-heads, nails, the stems longer, square and more obtuse. They were evidently of native fabrication.

"As soon as we had completed dealings with a lady for a pair of these articles, which she exchanged with us for a small looking-glass, there was a regular discussion of parts, with between many noses and brass nails. The mirrors were a decided novelty to them. They had never seen their black faces in a looking glass before."

Mistaken Education of Girls.

Rural New Yorker.

Many a good mother, looking back over the long road of the past, and gazing at her gray hands, resolved that her daughter shall have a better time. The mother is now no longer strong, and Miss Mary is a healthy young woman of 22. Yet the mother goes at the housework, including the sewing and mending for her daughter. The latter makes tatting and edging for her underclothing, and plays very fairly on the piano, which has been "squeezed in" somewhere, for the family is anything but rich. The mother goes without a new bonnet and fixes her dress over and over, in order that Jenny may appear as well dressed as the other girls of her set. When company comes, Jenny entertains them, and her mother goes on with her work in the kitchen. She waits on the table, and if anything is wanted during the meal, Jenny never rises to get it, but passes the empty dish to her mother for replenishment, and adjusts her pretty wristlets in happy ignorance of the thoughts of those looking on. Now this is all wrong. This girl is not naturally bad; her mother is solely to blame. I for one, do not believe in the plan of wearing out the oldest first. Let the younger ones have a good time; don't be so strict as our mothers were with their families, but live some respect for themselves and your health, or your children will doubtless have another you.

Artificial Child Incubation.

Sanitary News.

The report of some remarks by the experimenter called artificial child incubation comes from France. The Glasgow Mail says that the immense success which has attended the artificial incubation of children in France recently called a [illegible] attention of the [illegible] learned and ingenious physician. He was attached to a hospital for foundlings, and was annoyed at the large number of foundlings who died within the first six months of their life. The majority of those admitted to the hospital were weak and sickly, and he resolved to try what artificial incubation would accomplish if applied to infants. The doctor constructed a child incubator on precisely the model of the ordinary chicken-incubator. It was a box covered with a glass slide, furnished with a soft woolen bed, and kept at the temperature of eighty-six degrees Fahrenheit, by the aid of hot water. He selected as the subjects of his first experiment a miserably made infant, one that had come into the world at an injudiciously early period. This infant was placed in the incubator, provided with a nursing bottle, and kept in a dark room. To the surprise of the doctor, it ceased to cry on the second day it was placed in the incubator, and although it had previously been a preternaturally sleepless child, it sunk into a deep and quiet sleep. The child remained in the incubator for about eight weeks, during which time it never once cried, and never remained awake except when taking nourishment. It grew rapidly, and when, at the expiration of sixty days, it was removed from the incubator, it presented the appearance of a healthy infant of at least a year old. Delighted with the success of the experiment, Dr. Tavernier next selected an ordinary 6-months-old infant addicted to the usual pains and cries, and exhibiting the usual fretfulness of French infants. This child conducted itself while in the incubator precisely as its predecessor had done. It never cried; it spent its whole time in sleep, and it grew, as if it had made up its mind to embrace the career of a professional giant. After a six-weeks stay in the incubator it was removed and weighed. It had become so strong and healthy that it resembled a child 3 years old, and it could actually walk when holding on to a convenient piece of furniture. These two experiments satisfied Dr. Tavernier of the vast advantages of artificial child incubation. He immediately proceeded, with the permission of the authorities of the hospital, to construct an incubator of the capacity of 400 infants, and in this he placed every one of the 360 infants who were in the hospital on the 10th day of February last. With the exception of one who died of congenital hydrocephalus, and another who was claimed by its repentant parents, the infants were kept continuously in the incubator for six months, when they were removed in consequence of having outgrown their narrow bed. The result will seem almost incredible to persons who are unfamiliar with the reputation of Dr. Tavernier, and have not seen the report made to the French government on the subject by a select committee of twelve. The average age of the infants last February was 8 months and 3 days; the youngest being less than 12 hours old, and the eldest not more than 11 months. Their average weight was 16 pounds, only one of the entire 360 having attained a weight of 32 pounds. At the end of six months of artificial incubation the average weight of each infant was 24 pounds, and there was not one who would not have been supposed by a casual observer to be at least 3 years old. In other words, six months of artificial incubation did as much in the way of developing Dr. Tavernier's foundlings as three years of ordinary life would have done. The infants were strong and healthy as well as big; they walked within a week of leaving the incubator, and most of them have since learned to talk. These results surpassed Dr. Tavernier's most enthusiastic expectations, and there can be no doubt that his system of artificial child incubation will be adopted not only in every child's hospital in France, but in every private family throughout the civilized world.

Equal Rights in Washington.

"Mary Jane" in Courier-Journal.

"Dickey," said I, as we sallied forth to see the sights, "do you know why Washington suits me better than any city in the union?"

"No," said she, "unless it is that there are so many men here with wives at home that they will make a mash on any woman they see, regardless of age."

"Not at all," said I; "it is because in Washington all men are born free and equal, and the men have no more right to vote than the women have, and the women have none at all."

"Is that so?" said she, becoming interested.

"It is," said I, "or I should not have told you."

"I don't know about that," said she.

"Well, I do," said I, and I rejoice to think that here, in the capital city of this great republic, a woman as big a man as old Grant, and the ballot boxes of no more significance than the hand box—not so much, in fact, for we can stuff our hand boxes, and the men can't do that with their ballot boxes in the district of Columbia."

"Don't any of the men vote?" said she.

"Not a one of them," said I, "nor would they any place else, if I had the disposal of the remains. It is a glorious thought that in all the millions of miles of territory in the United States, there are ten square miles at least."

"Would women make it any better if they voted?" said she.

"They couldn't make it any worse," said I, and the conversation took a rest.

American Home Manners.

American men respect women in the highest sense, and treat them with all the chivalry possible, so far as immunity from insult is concerned. The national character of the American man in this respect is above reproach. But are they at home amiable and polite? Do they treat their wives and daughters at their fireplaces with constant and daily and proper politeness? Are American women modest in their respect? Do they remember to be grateful and polite in little matters of attentions and of compliment? Are they careful to consume their own smoke, and to bring only an amiable face to the dinner table?

We are afraid not. The national home manners need improving. The amenities of home can alone make up for the national disavowals. It is at the home dinner table by the hearth stone, the evening fireside, in the nursery, the bedroom and the sick room, that manners must be taught. We cannot count upon outside influences for our children.

In the Hall Corner.

New York Truth.

A pretty hall corner is easily made by the help of a carpenter. Corner shelves may be fitted into either side opposite the entrance, and serve, school-as an ornamental pot with creeping plants or a bowl with goldfish. Such a niche, if prettily draped, could be a very great help in brightening up a halfway, which is apt, in small houses, to be gloomy and depressing in effect.

STARTLING STATISTICS.

The Shadow Hanging Over New York City and the Entire Country—A Tribune Opinion.

The nation has been horrified at the burning of the Milwaukee hotel, whereby over seventy lives were lost. This event carried terror because it was sudden and appalling; but had the same disastrous results to life and limb come silently they would have been unnoticed, not only by the people of this land but also by the very community in which they occurred. Fatal events of a far worse nature have taken place in this very city, but they have attracted no attention, nor would they now did not the Bureau of Vital Statistics bring them to our notice. "Figures do not lie," whatever else may be uncertain and the reports on the deaths of this city is a startling comment on its life. During the past year the enormous increase of certain maladies is simply appalling. While the total number of deaths has diminished and the death rate on most diseases has decreased, still it is far greater in one or two serious disorders than ever before. More people died in the city of New York in 1882 from Bright's disease of the kidneys than from diphtheria, small-pox and typhoid fever all combined. This scarcely seems possible but it is true and when it is remembered that less than one-third the actual deaths from Bright's disease are really reported as such, the ravages of the malady can be partially understood.

The immediate query which every reader will make upon such a revelation of facts, is: What causes this increase? This is a difficult question to answer. The nature of the climate, the habits of life, the adulteration of foods and liquors, all undoubtedly contribute; but no immediate cause can be certainly assigned. Often before the victim knows it, the disease has begun. Its approaches are so stealthy and its symptoms so obscure that they cannot be definitely foreseen and are only known by their effects. Any kidney disorder, however slight, is the first stage of Bright's disease. But it is seldom kidney disorders can be detected. They do not have any certain symptoms. Mysterious weariness; an unusual appetite; periodical headache; occasional nausea; uncertain pains; loss of vigor; lack of nerve power; irregularity of the heart; disordered daily habits; imperfect digestion—all these and many other symptoms are the indications of kidney disorder even though there may be no pain in the region of the kidneys or in that portion of the body. The serious nature of these troubles may be understood from the fact that Bright's disease is as certain to follow diseased kidneys as decomposition follows death.

It is high time the Doctors in this land who have been unable to control kidney troubles should be aroused and compelled to find some remedy, or acknowledge one already found. The suffering public needs help and cannot await the tardy action of any hair splitting code or incorrectly formulated theories. If the medical world has no certain remedy for this terrible disease let them acknowledge it and seek for one outside the pale of their profession. For the discovery of this remedy and for its application to this disease, the people of the city; the people of the whole land; not only those who are suffering, but those who have friends in danger are earnestly and longingly looking.

The above quotation from the New York Tribune is causing considerable commotion, as it seems to lift the cover from a subject that has become of National importance. The alarming increase of kidney diseases, their insiduous beginnings and frightful endings and the acknowledged inability of physicians to successfully cope with them may well awaken the greatest dread of every one who has the slightest symptoms. It is fortunate however, that the surest relief is often found where, possibly least expected, and there is a specific for the evils above described we have come to fully believe. Within the past two years we have frequently seen statements of parties claiming to have been cured of serious kidney troubles even after hope had been abandoned; but in common with most people we have discredited them. Quite recently, however, a number of prominent and well known men have come out voluntarily and stated over their signature that they were completely cured by the use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. Most people have been aware that this medicine has an unusual standing and one entitling it to be classed above proprietary articles generally; but that it had accomplished so much in checking the ravages of kidney disease is not so generally known. Its great worth has been shown not only by the cures it has effected, but also because a number of base imitations have appeared in the market, fraudulently claiming the valuable qualities of the Safe Cure. If it were not valuable it would not be imitated.

The above may seem like an ultra indorsement of a popular remedy but it is not one whit stronger than the facts admit. Whatever assists the world toward health and consequent happiness, should receive the hearty endorsement of the press and all friends of humanity. It is on precisely this principle that the foregoing statement is made and it merits the careful consideration of every thinking reader.

SCHILLING'S

HEALTH PRESERVING

CORSET.

EVERY CORSET WARRANTED SATISFACTORY OR THE MONEY REFUNDED.

A combination of Coraline, Wire Spring, Whalebone and Corset, has pronounced by ladies

THE NE PLUS ULTRA OF CORSETS.

Fits perfectly a greater variety of forms than any other corsets; yield readily to every respiration and is comfortable in any position the wearer may assume.

Guaranteed to retain its shape until worn out. The wearer will assume by it a more graceful shape than with any other corset. A single trial will convince you of the truth of our statement and you will wear no other than Schilling's Health Preserving corset.

Leading Chicago Physicians express themselves as follows:

CHICAGO, July 14th, 1882.

I am in evidence for the wearing of Corsets, but if the ladies will persist in wearing them I think "SCHILLING'S HEALTH PRESERVING CORSET" the best and least injurious of any I have examined.

DR. V. E. HUBBARD.

CHICAGO, June 12th, 1882.

MR. SCHILLING:

I have examined your "Corset" and think it possesses all the advantages you claim for it, over any other one of which I have any knowledge. W. C. HEST.

CHICAGO, June 23d, 1882.

I fully endorse the opinion expressed by Dr. Hubbard.

P. M. MANNHEIMER.

CHICAGO, July 24, 1882.

MR. SCHILLING.—Dear Sir:

I am no friend of Corsets for ladies, but as long as they wear them, they should get the best and the best I have yet seen is the "SCHILLING HEALTH PRESERVING CORSET."

SOMETHING WORTH KNOWING.

The best and most successful mills now days are the Roller Mills. The corrugated rolls make a whiter and a stronger flour than the mill stone. The rolls granulate the flour evenly and do not salve and destroy the life of a portion of it as is done by the old system. Hundreds have found this to be true by using Comfort's Roller Flour. Farmers go twenty, and even twenty-five miles to Comfort's Roller Mills to exchange their good wheat for Comfort's Roller Flour. Comfort pays the highest market price for good merchantable wheat in exchange and has always kept up with the times. The overall advantage of round wheat and the roller system of milling with many other improvements which he has adopted is what makes Comfort's flour so popular.

B. MINCER

NATIVE OF RUSSIA.

Scientific Optician,

Mr. B. Mincer, Optician, of New York, who has been staying in this town at Adrian for a number of weeks, have testimonials from the best citizens will bear.

Adrian Friday and Saturday of this week. Orders left at Sink's Hotel will receive prompt attention on his rounds.

The delicate construction of the eye makes it necessary to use great care in selecting spectacles.

B. Mincer has made the Eye its special study, and for the years has paid his entire attention to the adaption of spectacles to the same. Having a thorough experience in making and adapting spectacles to the eye, he is enabled to fit accurately in every case of abnormal vision, known as Presbyopia, Myopia, and Hypermetropia, as well as weak eyes requiring various tinted glasses. His improved spectacles are of a perfect construction which assists and preserves the sight, rendering frequent changes quite unnecessary. They confer a brilliancy and distinctness of vision with an amount of ease and comfort not generally enjoyed by persons using spectacles. His lenses are ground on the most scientific principles rendering them as clear as when in the full strength of youth.

B. Mincer has some flattering testimonials of some of the leading citizens and oculists in the state, to acquity in fitting spectacles.

ADRIAN, Dec. 8, 1882.—To whom it may concern: Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily attaining the object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examination, and its application in selecting glasses to the special organ to which it must be adapted, evinces experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes, with which she is well pleased. I recommend all who need glasses and spectacles to their wants. Poor glasses are an abomination.

A. A. BAKER, M. D.

ADRIAN, Dec. 8, 1882.—I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adapts his glasses on scientific principles.

C. BYND, M. D.

ADRIAN, Dec. 15, 1882.—I take pleasure in recommending Mr. Mincer's glasses as being of a very superior quality, and his method of fitting them to the eyes as the very best.

S. A. POWERS.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend them to any one in need of good glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the selection of glasses to adjust properly to the eyes.

DANIEL TODD, M. D.

We subscribe the following testimonials from the Boards of Trustees relative to the merits of B. Mincer's glasses, who has sold a large number of spectacles in this vicinity, and in every instance has given satisfaction:

ANGOLA, Ind., Dec. 18, 1882.

This will to assure all to visit Mr. B. Mincer, who has made this place a point for sale of glasses, from his long practice in this particular business he has perfected himself so as to readily adapt glasses to any condition of the eyes, and I recommend him as a first-class, thorough optician.

L. S. B. WILLIAMS, M. D.

MORENCI, Dec. 9, 1882.

I take pleasure in recommending all persons who need glasses to call upon the kind furnished by Mr. Mincer, who is capable of fitting the eye with the best quality.

REV. J. CRABBS.

FAIRFIELD, Mich., Dec. 7, 1882.

Mr. B. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, has occasionally visited this country, and has fitted me with a pair of glasses for myself; also my wife, with which we are much pleased, and would not part with them, and we take pleasure in recommending him to the public as a thorough optician and skillful surgeon.

J. H. LAVERTY, M. D.

DELTA, Ohio, April 29, 1882.

I take pleasure in recommending all persons who are compelled to use glasses for weak eyes or any other affected by age, or by the use of poor glasses, to try B. Mincer, optician. I have purchased of him a pair of glasses which are the best I ever used.

MACON CENTER CUTS.

We won't say anything about slipping up or slipping down to the foot of the hill and calling for some one to chop a road back—or boys skating to Adrian and Jackson and physicians practicing medicine on skates, or the whole country being a grand skating park, and everybody on skates for the past three weeks—no: that's too common.

A son of Andrew Bain, formerly of this township, met with quite a mishap while shooting a squirrel in front of T. B. Gould's last Saturday. The breech pin gave way and a sliver from the stock cut a deep gash in the side of his nose, requiring seven stitches to close the wound. He killed the squirrel.

No new cases of diphtheria, and Lafayette Gregory is convalescing.

Wilbur Greenfield went to Morgan, Barry Co., Monday morning, in response to a telegram announcing the criticle condition of his mother from a stroke of palsy.

Mrs. Calvin Davenport is very sick with typhoid fever. A grandchild of the same house is also very sick.

Edmund Hand still lives, but the end is nigh.

The inclement weather last Wednesday evening prevented a number from hearing the able lecture of Prof. Beal, of the agricultural college.

Geo. W. Bain stated when here that he had never lectured but once before outside of a village or city, and then not in a course. We thought all the while that Macon was ahead. Who ever heard of a lecture course in the country before? All of our lectures thus far have been splendid. But we are keeping the best of the wine for the last of the feast.

Now all you that have been aching to hear Jesse Harper of Illinois, will please take notice that Monday evening Feb. 26, he will deliver the sixth lecture of the course. Subject, Decline of Civilization.

Wednesday evening, Feb. 28, the Hon. J. J. Woodman, of Paw Paw, Mich., will deliver the 7th lecture of the course. Now the grangers will shout. Yes, but the great granger and master of the national grange, the great sympathizer with the agricultural and laboring classes, in fact the great statesman who has 25 votes now in the legislature for U. S. Senator, and would be the choice of the farmers of this state for that position, will not lecture on the grange this time. The subject will be his "Observations while Attending the Paris Exposition as Agricultural Commissioner under Pres. Hayes." Well, you say that is a grand subject, and I bet there'l be some grange about it. All right, everybody come and hear Woodman, whom to see is to admire. A. E.

McNeil of Tecumseh, last Saturday, to attend the funeral of young Ray S. McNeil. Mr. & Mrs. Ruel Mills of Saline, and Mr. & Mrs. Hendershot of Fargo, Da., at E. R. Smith's the first of the week. Henry Stevens, John Smith, James Eccles, Carl Burger of Tecumseh, Tuesday. Misses Clark and Cadmus, Ridgeway, last Tuesday at Alonzo Clark's.

Mrs. L. Blakeman missed some pork from her cellar lately. Look out for sneak theives.

Elmer Halladay was married to Miss Lillie Crane at Napoleon last Wednesday. There were a great many guests present and about thirty relatives put up for the night with Mr. Halladay of that place.

The donation given Rev. J. W. Payne of the Barnes church at Town Hall, Tuesday evening netted $70.

Van Riper Bros. have sold some fine wool sheep to parties in Ionia co.

Ray S. McNeil's body, expected here last Saturday for burial, did not come until Monday, when it was deposited in the vault.

65 loads of wheat were delivered at the depot last Thursday.

The Musical Society will meet at 7 o'clock Friday eve. to give a chance to attend the exercises of the Blue Ribbon club at Town Hall.

Parties from Tecumseh attended Masonic Lodge in Clinton Tuesday and Wednesday evenings.

Services will be held at St. John's church every Wednesday evening during Lent.

Mrs. Geo. Kies of Tecumseh, is in town for a week's visit. It is needless to say that Mrs. C. T. Cummins of the same place, is expected soon.

"Vet," the landlord of the Silvers House, is making extensive repairs on the barn, which will greatly improve the same.

B. J. Bond has resigned his position at the factory as night watch, and is going to work N. S. Watson's farm in Bridgewater.

We are glad to see Clinton Rowland, engineer at the factory, once more on the streets. He has been very ill.

That roller skate business at the Town Hall last evening was a grand affair, both numerically and financially. But, oh ye wise ones, where and what would it have been, had it not been for much despised Tecumseh? Did you know, Mr. Editor, that it was not safe for a man to run for office north of your place who had dared to buy a flannel shirt at Tecumseh?

RIDGEWAY RUMBLINGS.

Quarterly meeting next Saturday and Sunday. The Elder will not be present.

Chas. Foot and Miss Mary Temple became united in matrimony Wednesday afternoon at the residence of the bride's father. Rev. J. Kilpatrick officiating.

Mrs. George Getty and her daughter have been very low with consumption for some time, and their friends were unable to tell which would first yield to that dreaded disease. The funeral services of the mother was observed last Friday, and the last sad rites of her daughter, Matilda, aged 18, followed on Wednesday of this week. Mr. Getty and the remainder of the family have the sympathy of the community.

COL GRIFFITH'S FUNERAL.

The funeral obsequies of Col. Griffith, late Reg. M. S. T., were held at Jackson last Saturday. A special train went over on the Branch, in the forenoon to accommodate Co. B. of Adrian and Co. C. of Tecumseh. About thirty men from each company attended. The Patriot gives this account of the services:

At the appointed hour the military companies and veterans met at the corner of Francis and Mill streets, and forming in column marched up Main street, preceded by Boos' band. In the column were Companies, A of Ann Arbor, B of Adrian, C of Tecumseh, F of Ypsilanti, G of Jackson, H of Lansing, K of Mason (M.S.T.) Jackson Guard and Emmet Rifles, all in full uniform; also Gen. Withington and staff, and veteran soldiers and sailors. The military marched to the church which they entered and which in a short time was filled with a large concourse of people.

The religious rites were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Pitkin. After appropriate music the funeral service of the Episcopal church was read, and Dr. Pitkin then made some pertinent remarks concerning the life and character of the deceased. At the close the remains were borne to the hearse by the following members of the original company G, of which Col. Griffith was captain: Capt. G. R. Holden, Lieut. W. J. Heyser, W. E. Buddington, W. B. Harris, A. C. Sweezy, John Alden, A. C. Smead and G. E. Hollombe. The funeral cortege then formed and headed by Boos' band moved up Jackson street toward Mt. Evergreen cemetery. A dirge was played as the procession entered the cemetery, and upon the hearse reaching the vicinity of the vault, the casket was taken out at the top of the rising ground opposite, where the beautiful funeral service of the Episcopal church was read. Salutes were then fired by a detail of soldiers, after which the casket was carried down and placed in the vault, where a cast of the face was taken by Mr. A. Chappelle, of Adrian. The cortege then returned, and the military broke ranks near Francis street.

DOWN THE MISSISSIPPI

A short letter from A. L. Arner, who now has a position on the Mississippi river commission gives a few items of interest in regard to their work. We take the liberty of giving our readers an extract therefrom:

We are located for the present at Baton Rouge; our party numbers about fifty men, ten engineers and forty rod men and boatmen etc. The work is under charge of Mr. C. M. Winchell, an Ann Arbor graduate, and a brother of Prof. Winchell there. The work we are engaged upon is that of making a map of the river channel and a narrow strip of adjoining country. Two other parties doing similar work are located between here and Vicksburg.

The country from here to New Orleans is the finest in the state. It is all laid out in sugar plantations, the cotton region is further north. The planters are now engaged in putting the cane seed into the ground and are ploughing the old fields to start the new shoots. Gardening has also begun. The weather here is decidedly pleasant in comparison with that you have been having in Tecumseh during the past month. The weather here now is much like our Michigan weather in May. The violets are in bloom and many of the trees are quite green. The mercury to-day marked 76° in the shade, but it is usually 10° colder than that. At this season of the year it is very healthy here, but last October was the sickliest season ever known. During that month twenty five men in this party were obliged to stop work and return home; and some of the oldest settlers who had never experienced any trouble, were sick with the dreaded malaria and swamp fever.

Baton Rouge is now again the capitol of the state. It has about 11,000 population and two thirds are negros. This enterprising city is about one hundred years behind Tecumseh, really there is no comparison whatever. It sustains two newspapers, one of which I enclose, as it is a remarkable curiosity and characteristic of every institution of the kind in the entire region.

The newspaper alluded to is called "The Weekly News-Letter." It is a three column folio sheet, ten by fourteen inches in size. Subscription $1 per year. The entire sheet contains 108 inches of printed matter, reading and advertising, which is less than one page of the HERALD.

THE DRIVE WELL PATENT

Parties in this state who are interested, in the Green patent drive well suits are advised that the United States court has reaffirmed the validity of the patents, on an appeal case from the United State court at Indianapolis. The state grange is, however, still fighting the patent in the United States court for the western district of Michigan.

BURLINGTON, KANSAS,
February 4, 1883.

MR. EDITOR:

Noticing the above clipping in your paper, I thought I would inform you of the fact that drive wells have been in use in the state of Vermont since 1865 to my certain knowledge, and I can furnish plenty of proof to substantiate the above statement. Should you deem this to be valuable information to the State Grange you can inform them of it if you choose to do so.

Yours Respectfully,

E. A. DAVIS.

WHAT IS A CREAMERY.

An exchange thus describes this modern institution. The object of a creamery is to produce a high quality of butter. It requires from $1,000 to $1,300 to build and equip a creamery for 500 cows, with an engine, boiler, churns, cold storage, and a building 30 by 40 feet. There are three different plans by which the business is conducted. One is the formation of a stock company, each patron taking shares, and becoming responsible for expenses, and sharing losses and gains. In some instances the creamery is erected by an individual, who gathers the cream, buying it at a price agreed upon for the season, or a scale of prices somewhat in accord with the market rates for butter. The milk is sent in cans alike, and cared for upon an agreed plan. In some instances the owner is paid so much per pound for gathering the cream, making the butter, and preparing it for market, the patrons themselves selecting a salesman. The Elgin, Ill., creamery company equip the factory, furnish cans, and collect the cream, and pay for it, one inch of cream being rated as a pound of butter, and is worth the average price of a pound of butter for one month. It is stated that at the Elgin creamery the average price of a pound of butter for one month is paid for an inch of cream minus five cents. This gives the maker a margin for making and shipping, and yet protects both parties. The skim milk is available for pigs and calves.

Wheat is still going up.

TECUMSEH WITH THE WORLD.

The Ferry forces have fairly fled.

Charlevoix now claims to be the highest in America.

The Ferry injunction at Lansing is growing small by degrees and beautifully less.

Judge Newton still leads the list at Lansing. He is now receiving the entire Union vote.

How much longer will the Michigan legislature play shuttle-cock and battle-door with the senatorial question?

We are entirely satisfied with our part of the freshet. We have no desire to hold it over our neighbors.

The prosecution in the Star Route trial have at last got a twist on the defendants which seems likely to count.

Wiggins should not be frowned upon too severely. His storm was pleasantly postponed on account of the weather.

Have the farmers anything to do with the fact of water that has prevailed on both sides of the Atlantic this winter?

Ferry has been withdrawn and it is now a "free-for-all" race. May the best man win. But whether he will win is very doubtful.

The Detroit Knocker observes: Had Wyatt predicted water instead of wind he would have moved in the right direction.

The Ferry investigation at Lansing will, it is to be feared, the occasion of the revival of politics that a dirty and disgraceful resolution.

The Detroit News thinks that the Lansing gorge will come down on Thomas W. Palmer but the Detroit Times asserts that the News is off its base in this prophecy.

There is no great loss without some small gain. It is generally believed that a good slice of Hubbell's two per cent. assessment fund has been used to compass Ferry's defeat.

The flood of 1882 at Cincinnati reached a point eighteen inches higher than the great flood of 1832 but the Commercial says that the water of '32 was much wetter than the water of '82.

The foreign free trade market fixes the price of an staple crops which the farmer has to sell. The home protected market fixes the price of tools, clothing, salt, lumber, etc., which the farmer has to buy.

Yesterday was the last day for the introduction of bills in the legislature. It is to be hoped that the honorable members will now elect a Senator and then go to work at the legitimate business of the session.

The February record of horrors bids fair to eclipse that of January. After the great floods in the Ohio valley the news comes of the caving in of a coal mine at Braidwood, Ill., smothering between sixty and seventy persons.

Judge Howell is favorably spoken of in some quarters as a candidate on the Republican state ticket for one of the Supreme Court Justices. He would be a strong candidate and if elected, would be an honor to the Supreme Bench.

A movement is on foot to secure the pardon of Wm. M. Godley who was sentenced to the state prison for life a few years ago for throwing his mother-in-law down stairs at Adrian. Godley has been shut up long enough. Let up on him.

The era of floods seems to have arrived. While charitable contributions are still going forward to aid the sufferers from the great floods in Continental Europe, a deluge of rain pours into the Ohio valley, and the worst freshet of the present century ensues.

Henry Ward Beecher is sound on some things anyway. He says the great political question of the day is whether under the false pretense of a tariff the people should continue to pour millions of dollars annually into the hands of a few gigantic monopolies.

THE TOLEDO FLOOD.

The fears that Toledo might catch the freshet have been more than realized. The rain and thaw of last Friday flooded the upper Maumee and on Saturday Toledo caught the entire force of the freshet. At nine o'clock Saturday evening this was the situation:

Since the last report at noon the water has raised steadily and at 8 P. M. marks twenty inches higher than the highest point of 1883 and is rising at the rate of three inches per hour. The gorge below the city extends for two miles below the Union depot railroad bridge, and is piled up to a height of twelve to eighteen feet, preventing the escape of the water. The gorge is strongest directly in front of the city, and is still firm. In addition to the westerly span of the Union depot bridge, the entire system of the Wabash, Toledo & Detroit Railway yesterday, two central spans of the Pennsylvania Railroad bridge were carried away together with a portion of the new draw and two temporary spans of the Union railroad bridge. The water is above the floor of the Lake Shore Railroad bridge, but the structure stands firm. The Middle Ground from the Union depot to the Lake Shore bridge is covered with water to the depth of six to eight feet, resting upon which, and extending across the river, is a vast field of broken ice. There are several feet of water on the floor of the Island House and Union depot. Most of the rolling stock has been removed from the depot and the Middle Ground.

Later news discloses the fact that the water was twenty-six inches higher than in 1883. A reporter of the Adrian Record visited the scene of devastation on Monday, and gives a graphic account of the same.

The entire flooded district, which included all the railroad grounds, Water street, a portion of Summit, Monroe and Sinclair streets, and all that part of the city known as the flats, presented a desolate and discouraging appearance. On Monroe street at the junction of Sinclair, the water was two feet deep, and of course all the cellars and basements in that vicinity were flooded. On Water street the water was eight or ten feet deep. In the Island house it was over ten feet deep and on the middle ground freight cars were entirely submerged.

When we arrived there yesterday, about eleven o'clock, the water had subsided, half gone down about eight or nine feet, the highest point being reached between 12 and 1 o'clock Saturday night when the ice gorge below the city gave way. With the giving way of the gorge there was a terrible rushing of the water, carrying the bridges and all before it. The Cherry street bridge was almost entirely swept away, next came the Pennsylvania bridge, which with the exception of the draw, is almost totally wrecked. Below this was the Western & Lake Erie bridge a fine structure erected last August, and thought to be the best on the river. All of the spans are still standing, one being ill-placed, and that only about 18 inches out of line. But the approaches or trestle work at either end was carried away and there is now but one bridge standing that can be crossed—the Lake Shore—which seems to be entirely uninjured and trains crossed it yesterday.

Many of the printing offices, hotels and breweries sustained losses and inconvenience. In yesterday morning's Telegram the superintendent of the gas works published the following:

"The fires at gas works are extinguished. Have gas enough for tonight, but not enough to supply through to-morrow Sunday night."

The Blade press room was flooded to the depth of four and a half feet, and the new Webb press and engine were almost entirely submerged. This was on Saturday afternoon, and an attempt was made to print an edition on a Blade Printing company press, but when the fires at the gas works went out the gas engine stopped and all work was suspended.

The Bee succeeded in getting out two editions before the water reached them.

The Telegram was the only paper above the water-line, and had it not been for the great misfortune of "piling" one side of the paper as it was going to press, everything would have been regular with it. As it was it issued half its regular morning size. Both the Sunday Morning Journal and the Democrat were printed on the Telegram press.

St. Nicholas for March

Has a notable list of contributors. Archibald Forbes, the distinguished war correspondent furnishes a vividly interesting story of the Turco-Russian war, entitled "Where was Villiers?" which has the additional attraction of being illustrated by the well-known battle-painter, W. H. Overend, of the Illustrated London News, himself a personal friend of both Forbes and Villiers. In the "Letter-box" is a pen and ink sketch of Mr. Forbes by Hubert Herkomer, from the portrait of him by that artist. Besides the foregoing, there are stories, sketches, poems, and pictures by Charles Barnard, Sarah Winter Kellogg, Joel Stacy, Palmer Cox, Reginald B. Birch, H. P. Share, W. L. Sheppard, Dexter Smith and many others.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, Feb. 17th, 1883.

One or two minor city journals have joined hands with a young man named Britton, in the office of Anthony Comstock, the Agent of the Society for the Prevention of Crime, for the purpose of giving us a sensation. Britton, or as he loves to hear himself called, "Detective" Britton, is a short person already inclined to stoutness, with fair blonde hair, watery blue eyes, a lisp which will make anything but a good impression on a prejudiced person, and an idea that he is a smart man. He has made himself generally useful for months with the high-priced detectives connected with the post and police department, and he seems to have gained them

FREIGHT STATISTICS.

We are indebted to station agent Hughes for the following table showing the shipments from this station during 1882. The comparative figures for '81 and '82 show a healthy increase of business, for the past year. With the additional railroad facilities which will soon be at our command we shall be disappointed if 1883 does not show by far the heaviest freight business this village has ever known.

They will soon open a stock of dry goods, fancy goods and notions in the Odd Fellow's block at Cadillac, Michigan. They are both temperate, industrious young men, well posted in their business. We bespeak for them success in their new field of labor.

The Evening Star, of Philadelphia, says: "The rush to witness the Double Uncle Tom's Cabin, at Haverly's Theatre, seems to have no end, as the passage ways, doors, steps and every other available space is filled every night, and many turned away unable to gain admission. The two Marks, two Topseys, and other novelties, such as genuine colored minstrels, make a very pleasing performance, which will have a much longer run than it was first looked for.

TECUMSEH, Feb. 22d, 1883.

GENERAL ORDER No. 8.

Every member of this company having a uniform or equipments or state property of any kind, will return the same to the armory by Wednesday, March 1st, 1883. There will be an inspection of the company the same evening. By order of

A. D. LAWRENCE,
Cap't Com'g Co

Last evening a meeting was called by some of our ladies for the purpose of taking steps towards organizing a Library Association. At the appointed time a good number presented themselves at the office of Drs. House & Jones, and committees were appointed and arrangements made which mean business. Our town should have a library; much smaller places have good circulating libraries, and we trust the people will not give this movement the cold shoulder.

The new rooms of the National Relief and Accident Association are completed and the furniture has been put in. They have an elegant Detroit safe and a beautiful blackwalnut counter with screen to separate the outer apartment from the business quarter proper. The floors are carpeted and the walls ornamented with elegant dado paper. The office will compare favorably in appearance with any banking office in the county. A few jealous souls have attempted to injure the company by false reports, but their efforts will prove fruitless.

In answer to a call in last week's paper the Fair Association soliciting committee met at the Council building. The matter was noised around somewhat, and there was quite a turnout of business men and others beside the committee. More interest was manifested at this meeting than at any previous one. The paper for taking stock was made out and $1,350 pledged within an hour. The simple fact of Tecumseh having a fair will not enrich any one or more of our business men, nor make any great difference with the value of any one or more farms in this vicinity, but all such enterprises help the town and increase the price of property in the vicinity. As a whole it helps to say whether Tecumseh is a dead or live town, and whether our people are in for enterprise or not. A little help from each quarter will insure success, and besides the investment will pay good interest on the money.

A pink reception will be given by the teachers and pupils of the Tecumseh High School this evening.

The "white mill" bridge on North Main street, at Adrian, was so seriously injured by the high water last week that it has been condemned by the authorities as unsafe.

John R. Clark is in Batavia, N. Y., this week, and will go from there to Rochester, Palmyra and Lyons. He will commence a three nights' engagement in Buffalo on March 4th.

Farmers, look out for $5 bills, one half of which are $1 bills. The mode of the swindle is this: a $1 bill and a $5 bill are torn in two and one half of each pasted to the other, making two $5 bills. The swindlers are generally in the guise of peddlers and have taken in a goodly number of victims around in the country, and it is believed they are in the village.

The Toledo Blade figures the loss by last Saturday's flood as follows: "It will cost $80,000 to repair the bridges, $25,000 to put the middle ground in as good shape as before the flood, and about $100,000 to repair the dock. The losses of merchandise including logs and lumber, are relatively small, and will not exceed, it is thought, $15,000. The expense of moving the goods to places of safety is the next most serious item, and will aggregate $4000 or $5000.

The Lansing Journal has been purchased by Rowley of the Ionia Standard. Under Col. Sanford's management the Journal has been one of the best newspapers in the state, and in his retirement the union party will lose an able champion, and journalism a worthy representative. Col. Sanford's health has become impaired during the past year which is his reason for selling. Mr. Rowley, his successor, is well known throughout the state and will hold the Journal to the position it has hitherto enjoyed.

The North American Review for March opens with an article on "Money in Elections," by Henry George, who brings to the discussion of that hackneyed subject a contribution full of originality, freshness and keen insight; he points out with admirable clearness one source of our political ills, and proposes a remedy that seems both eminently practicable and efficient. Robert S. Taylor writes of the "Subjugation of the Mississippi," a work which, in his opinion, and in that of the Mississippi Commission, of which he is a member, can be accomplished only by employing, for the purpose of deepening and straightening the channel, the forces developed by the river itself.—Moncure D. Conway contributes a very striking study of Gladstone as a man and a statesman, showing how even the more or less sinister moral and intellectual traits of his nature, quite as much as his pre-eminent native force and elevation of character, conspire to make him the foremost Englishman of his time. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, N. Y., and for sale by booksellers generally.

THE NEXT COUNTY FAIR.

In a communication to the Adrian Times the Secretary of the County Society, Mr. S. B. Mann, has a few words to say about the location of the next fair:

"There was a meeting of the newly-elected executive committee for the county agricultural society held in Adrian, on Saturday last, the 17th.

"It was decided that no definite action could be taken at that meeting as to locating the next fair, but the matter is to be held in obeyance for a month at least.

"The proposition of Mr. Lawrence, made to the old committee, and what he claimed to be his best and only offer, renders it a certainty that the society cannot hold the next fair on his grounds.

"According to the constitution, the executive committee may locate the fair anywhere in the county. The secretary read to the committee a communication from the secretary of the Morenci society, asking a committee to confer with a like committee from that society, looking towards the holding of the next fair at Morenci.

"There was also talk that other localities were desirous to make proposals, hence the deferring of the matter, that all may have an opportunity why may choose to make their propositions.

"All such should be addressed to S. B. Mann, secretary, Lenawee Junction, (now his post office address,) and they will have the consideration of the next meeting of the committee."

The Deerfield Record remarks:—"The good book says the wicked stand in slippery places. There must be a great many wicked people now-a-days." Judged by that rule the people of Tecumseh are about all saints.

Clinton News: Would it not be a good plan for the fruit growers in this vicinity to organize a branch of the state horticultural society, at this place? There are a good many large fruit growers near or in Clinton and such an organization could be made very beneficial.

Adrian Record: A most horrible accident occurred Sunday morning to an old gentleman named Russel Wells, who resides with his daughter near the Raisin Valley seminary. It is supposed he got up before daylight, and while in the act of lighting a lamp, dropped it and set fire to the house. The daughter was aroused by hearing a fall, and upon going to his room, found it on fire and filled with smoke. She succeeded in putting out the fire, which had burned the carpet, the base boards and considerable of the bedding, and her father terribly burned nearly all over his body. The Morden was called, who found the poor old man beyond all help but made him as comfortable as possible until his death, which occurred about nine o'clock Monday morning. We understand Mr. Wells was a pensioner of the war of 1812.

RAILROAD NOTES.

Some of the spiles for the M. & O. railroad bridge across the tamarack swamp near Cement, Calhoun county, were driven fifty-five feet before reaching bottom. Over 125 were driven and a bridge 500 feet long will be built on them.

The big bridge which spans the Raisin east of this village now being built by the Mich. & Ohio railroad, will cost over one hundred thousand dollars.

SOMETHING WORTH KNOWING.

The best and most successful mills now days are the Roller Mills. The corrugated rolls make a whiter and a stronger flour than the mill stone. The rolls granulate the flour evenly and do not calve and destroy the life of a portion of it as is done by the old system. Hundreds have found this to be true by using Comfort's Roller Flour. Farmers go twenty, and even twenty five miles to Comfort's Roller Mills to exchange their good wheat for Comfort's Roller Flour. Comfort pays the very highest market price for good wheat, screen and unsound wheat he does not want at any price. Cannot use it. The careful selection of sound wheat and the roller system of milling, with many other improvements which he has adopted, is what makes Comfort's flour so popular.

In Demorest's Monthly Magazine for March we find a great variety of interesting articles. Among these are "Life in the Black Forrest," "Henri Regnault," "Gastronomic Gossip," "Antique Gems," "Traveling and Other Matters," and "The Grodner Valley." Jenny June continues her pleasant articles, "How We Live in New York," and Carlotta Perry furnishes an excellent story, "How I Found My Freedom." Mrs. Alexander's serial, "The Admiral's Ward," keeps up its interest, and "Current Topics" is both entertaining and instructive. Every department is replete with useful and entertaining reading, and the illustrations are remarkably good, the frontispiece being a fine steel engraving after the much-admired painting, "Willing," by the artist, Metzmacher. As a family magazine, Demorest's fulfils every requirement.

DIED.

McCONNELL.—At Tecumseh, Mich., Feb. 21st, Elizabeth McConnell, wife of John McConnell, in the 73d year of her age. Funeral from the residence Friday afternoon, Feb. 23d, at 2 o'clock.

CRANE.—At Tecumseh, Mich., on Monday, Feb. 12, 1883, Mrs. Harriet M. Crane, wife of Simon Crane, in the 66th year of her age.

Mrs. Crane, formerly Miss Harriet M. Flagler, was born at Watertown, Jefferson Co., N. Y., Sept. 10, 1817. In Sept., 1836, her family removed and took up their permanent residence in Tecumseh. In 1841 she was married to Mr. Simeon Crane, a respected citizen of this place, who survives the loss of his loved companion of 42 years. Of the seven children of Mr. and Mrs. Crane four sons remain, who mourn to-day "As one that mourneth for his mother." The death of Mrs. Crane is one that is felt beyond the limits of the home circle. The Presbyterian church mourns in her departure the loss of a valued member, and society at large misses one whose attractive manners and genuine kindness of heart gave her warm welcome wherever she went.

Rush's Medical Association:

Doctors—The three bottles of Dr. Rush's Regulator received by express last week, I have taken nearly one bottle, and am highly satisfied with the result. For over two years I have been troubled with sharp pain at my heart. My physician, upon examination, pronounced enlargement of the heart, and was unable to give me any relief. The trouble grew worse, and I became convinced that I could not live long. While in New York City, last week, I called on one of the most prominent physicians there, who charged me $5 for an examination and then prescribed your "Regulator." Knowing you to be a regular Medical Association, and not a patent medicine scheme, I ordered the three bottles. I have not been troubled since I commenced taking your medicine, and take the entire three bottles to be sure of a permanent cure. You have my hearty endorsement.

Very respectfully, WM. G. OSGOODBY.

The Charm of True Marriage.

Our advanced theories of divorce and free love, making the matrimonial relation merely a partnership to be dissolved at pleasure, whatever else may be said in their favor, strike a deadly blow at an element in it which was meant perhaps to be supreme over all others. What is the sweetest charm of all true marriage, what the greatest advantage, what the most priceless happiness, take life through, which it brings to the heart? Not the flush and splendor of its early love, not the richer development which it brings to the character, not even the children who are gathered around its shrine. No, but the intimacy and reliability of its companionship, the fact that it gives those who enter into it, early in life, and through all changes and chances, one true and blessed stand-by.

Marriage in some of its aspects is doubtless the source of an immense amount of unhappiness, crime, injustice, illegal and disheartening, one of the [illegible] society has to deal with. Only the blindest sentimentalist will deny that. On the other hand, however—and this is not mere sentiment, but sober fact—of all the evidences of God's goodness to be found in this lower world, all the proofs that He cares for us, not only with the wisdom of a Creator, but with the interest and love of a father, there is none quite equal to His sending human beings into the arena of life, not to fight its battles, win its victories, and endure its sorrows alone, but giving them as they go forth out of their childhood's home, a relation in which each two of them are bound together with the closest of all ties, live together under the same roof, have their labors, their property, their interests, their parental all in common, and are moved to stand by each other, hand to hand and heart to heart, in every sorrow, misfortune, trial and stormy day that earth may bring. It is an ideal, if not always realized in full, which is tasted even now, amid all that is said about the marriage miseries, more widely, perhaps, than any other happiness.

Like Master Like Man.

Some years ago the University of St. Andrews, one of the most famous in Scotland, having rather a "lean" treasury, determined to replenish it by a new branch of commerce, and announced that it would sell its doctor's degrees at four pounds each. Many took advantage of this liberal offer, and among the rest, a certain minister, who thought his services would be more acceptable to his flock were he possessed of a handle to his name. He put the required sum in his purse and went up to St. Andrews to purchase the coveted honor. A man servant accompanied him, and was present when his master paid the fees and was formally presented with the official parchment. On his return home the doctor sent for his servant and addressed him as follows: "Noo, Sandy, ye'll aye be sure to ca' me the doctor; and, gin onybody speers at ye about me, ye'll aye be sure to say, 'the doctor is in his study;' or 'the doctor's engaged;' or 'the doctor you'll see in a crack,' as the case may be." "That a' depends," replies Sandy, "on whether ye ca' me the doctor, too." The reverend doctor stared. "Aye, it's just sae," continued the other; "for, when I found it cost sae little, I e'en got a diploma myse'f. Sae ye'll just be good enough to say 'docor, put on some coals;' or 'doctor, bring me the whisky.' An, gin onybody speers at ye about me, ye'll aye be sure to say, 'The doctor's in the pantry;' or the doctor's digging potatoes, as the case may be."

Found at Last.

Some years ago, as a Mississippi river steamboat came to a river landing, a tall, ungainly, gawkish looking fellow leaning against a woodpile attracted the attention of the passengers, one of whom, a talkative and conspicuous person, remarked to his friends that he was going to have some fun out of that fellow. So he jumped ashore when the boat landed, and with a great show of fierceness approached the fellow. Drawing a savage-looking bowie-knife he said:

"Stand to blow, I've found you at last. You're the man that stole a dog of mine, and I've sworn to get square with you. I've been looking for you for a year."

The gawky lazy opened his eyes in wondering amazement at first, as though he didn't understand it. Then catching sight of the laughing passengers looking off from the deck he took in the situation. By the time Smarty had finished telling him how long he had been looking for him he had taken out of his pocket a fist like a sledge hammer on the end of the arm of a windmill. He swung it once and knocked the man who had been looking for him plump into the river. Then resuming his place against the woodpile he raised his eyes to the deck and with a very lazy drawl inquired:

"Is there anybody else on this boat looking for me?"

A Valuable Insect.

In a little-known district of Yucatan bordering on British Honduras, a valuable insect has recently been discovered, which possesses properties that ought to make it a rival of the cochineal and shellac producing insects. This is the neen, or nim, a species of coccus, which feeds on the mango tree and similar plants, and exists in enormous quantities in Central America. It is of considerable size, of a yellowish brown color, and emits a peculiar oily odor, containing as it does a large quanty of fatty oil, or grease. This grease is used by the natives for various purposes, being highly prized as a medicinal oil for external application, and it is also employed for mixing paints. It can be made to change its condition very considerably by different processes. When exposed to great heat, the lighter oils evaporate, leaving a tough flexible mass, resembling half softened wax, but unaffected by heat or cold, which may be used as a lacquer or varnish. When burned, this material produces a thick semi-fluid mass, somewhat resembling a solution of India rubber, which after a few days becomes hard and solid. As a cement this substance is considered valuable, and it might also be used for waterproofing purposes.

When butter will not all "come" at the same time, the fault is in the cream. Scientists tell us that it is owing to sweet and sour cream being placed in the churn together. See that all the cream has attained the same degree of acidity before churning, and the butter will all appear at the same time. Cream when churned at a temperature of 62° is too warm, and part of the butter is destroyed.

How to Preserve Eggs.

Oftentimes it is a matter of importance to keep eggs for some time. When prices are low they may be preserved in comparative freshness for several weeks, even in July and August, if care be taken to place them on end as soon as brought in from the nest. One not accustomed to the handling of eggs can form no idea of the shortness of time required for the yolk to settle on one side, where it adheres to the shell and quickly spoils in warm weather. Always place the egg on the big end. I have tried both ends, and decide in favor of the former position. Eggs should be gathered from the nest every day and, where there are many hens kept, twice a day. It matters not for what purpose we desire eggs, the hen that produces them should always be young and healthy. Eggs that are to be kept for any length of time should always be chosen from young hens, or if two years old, only from those in perfect health. If this rule is more closely observed by breeders who export eggs for hatching many miles, locally, to another, there will be better satisfaction given. It is of much importance that the eggs have perfect shells, and a hen not in perfect health may drop her eggs regularly, yet the shells may possess imperfections that render them unfit either for keeping or hatching.

The Queen of All.

Honor the dear old mother. Time has scattered the snowy flakes on her brow, plowed deep furrows on her cheeks, but is she not sweet and beautiful now? The lips are thin and shrunken, but those are the lips which have kissed many a hot tear from the childish cheeks, and they are the sweetest lips in all the world. The eye is dim, yet it glows with the soft radiance of holy love which can never fade. Ah, yes, she is a dear old mother. The sands of life are nearly run out, but feeble as she is, she will go further and reach down lower for you than any other upon earth. You cannot walk into a midnight where she cannot see you; you cannot enter a prison whose bars will keep her out; you can never mount a scaffold too high for her to reach that she may kiss and bless you in evidence of her deathless love. When the world shall despise and forsake you, when it leaves you by the wayside to die unnoticed, the dear old mother will gather you in her feeble arms, and carry you home and tell you of all your virtues until you almost forget that your soul is disfigured by vices. Love her tenderly, and cheer her declining years with holy devotion.

Hard vs. Soft Water.

It may be pleasant to those who live in a region of country where nothing but hard water is to be had, to be informed by so good authority as Dr. Tyng, the well known chemist, of the result of his observations on the use of hard water for culinary and domestic purposes:

Hard water is best dietetically because of the lime.

It makes better tea, although not so dark colored, owing to the fact that soft water dissolves the bitter extractive matters which color the tea, but ruin the aroma.

It relieves thirst, which soft water does not.

It does not dissolve lead or organic matter, which soft water does.

It is generally good colored, soft water being as a rule dark colored and unpleasant looking; hence, in places like Manchester supplied with soft water, they are export it (in casks) in dark bottles, to hide the color. Soft water, however, is a better detergent, and requires less soap. For a residential town, a water which has over ten degrees of hardness would be best. For manufacturing towns, a soft water would be the most advisable, for commercial considerations only.

How One Phrase Originated.

The phrase "acknowledge the corn" is variously accounted for, but the following is a true history of its origin:

In 1858, Andrew Stewart, M. C., said in a speech, that Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana sent their hay-stacks, corn-fields and pickles to New York and Philadelphia for sale. Wickliffe, of Kentucky, called him to order, declaring those States did not send hay-stacks or cornfields to New York for sale.

"Well, what do you send?" asked Stewart.

"Why, horses, mules, cattle and hogs."

"Well, what makes your horses, mules, cattle and hogs? You feed a hundred dollars worth of hay to a horse; you just animate and get upon the top of your hay stack and ride off to market. How is it with your cattle? You make one of them carry fifty dollars' worth of hay and grass to the Eastern market; how much corn does it take at thirty-three cents a bushel to fatten a hog?"

"Why, thirty bushels."

"Then you put that thirty bushels into the shape of a hog and make it walk off to the Eastern market."

Then Mr. Wickliffe jumped up and said: "Mr. Speaker, I acknowledge the corn."

RAT-PROOF CORN CRIBS.—There are not many farmers who do not lose corn enough by rats every year, to pay the extra expense of making their crib or cribs rat-proof. Such is the general dampness of the ground that the floor, on which corn rests, should be at least three feet above the earth. Pillars of this height above ground for crib-sills should have plates of zinc or sheet iron extending six or eight inches on all sides before the sills are put upon them. Rats going up to the pillars (whether wood, stone, or brick) cannot pass the sheet-iron or zinc, nor can they jump three feet from the ground and fasten themselves to the side of a crib. The steps, by which one enters the door of the crib, should be taken away at all times when not in use. In this way a farmer can easily keep rats from eating and polluting his bread-corn. Where rats have access to one's crib, they multiply rapidly, catch chickens, go to dwelling-houses and become a perfect nuisance there also. All this evil is due, in a large degree, to feeding and breeding rats at a corn crib. This is the most unprofitable stock a farmer can raise.

The farmers in the vicinity of St. Albans, Vt., are encouraged by the destroyer of the potato bug, an insect known as the "potato beetle parasite"—a striped bug similar to the cucumber bug, but larger. He follows the potato bug and eats its eggs after they have been laid on the vines. This will probably be the last year of the operations of the Colorado beetle to any extent, as this parasite has appeared in large numbers.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved to the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the names in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce sick, nervous invalids to take any thing else but Hop Bitters, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to make people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Take nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against selling imitations or counterfeits.

Five years established and better known to fall in a single case, acute, or chronic. Refer to all prominent physicians and druggists as for the standing of salicylica.

SECRET.

THE GREAT DISCOVERY OF THE POISONOUS ACID WHICH EXISTS IN THE BLOOD OF RHEUMATIC AND GOUTY PATIENTS.

SALICYLICA is known as a common-sense remedy, because it strikes directly at the cause of Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia, while so many so-called specifics and supposed panaceas only treat partially the effects.

It is high time and odd to assume a remedy that only palliates, such as rubbing with oils, ointments, liniments and soothing lotions will not eradicate these diseases which are the result of the poisoning of the blood with Uric Acid.

SALICYLICA works with marvelous effect on this acid and so removes the disorder. It is now exclusively used by all celebrated physicians of America and Europe. Highest Medical Academy of Paris reports 95 per cent. cures in three days.

REMEMBER

that SALICYLICA is a certain cure for Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia. The most intense pains are subdued almost instantly.

Give it a trial. Relief guaranteed or money refunded.

The Destruction of our Forests.

Of a desolation which is recorded far back of the days of Roman or even of Grecian glory, we read that "a man was famous according as he had lifted up axes upon the thick trees." In the days when American forests were considered practically limitless, our fathers were far too famous for lifting up axes upon the thick trees, and the relentless destruction is even now upon us, like the Philistines upon Samson. This destruction comes upon us in many forms, most of which are, in fact, rapidly and terribly cumulative. Here is a beautiful stream of water, for instance, which was a great element of wealth to the country through which it flowed. It might not only have continued to be so, but to have gained in usefulness instead of being dead or surely but swiftly passing away. The numberless little hollows on the hills, where were the springs that grew into rivulets to feed it, have been stripped of the most economizing verdure with which the Creator clothed them, and so the springs are dry, and the rills no longer murmur their once glad songs of labor, as they hastened down the valleys to turn the mill-wheels of mechanical industry. In this one matter of destruction of hydraulic power, with which we have already been smitten, hundreds of millions of dollars of annual damage has been and is the actual result. That this drying up of the streams is attributable not only chiefly to deforesting, but almost solely to it, common sense—which is, in fact, the very essence of both fact and philosophy—must make it plain to every candid mind. Rain feeds the springs. To feed them economically, it should be gentle and frequent, not violent and at long intervals. Intelligent forest engineering would require that such portion of hills be clothed with a mantle of green trees, as by its cooling influence it would more frequently so contract the aerial sponge as to give us showers at short intervals. This is the case in forest-clothed, beautiful Britain. The reverse is true in tree-stripped Spain, whose people have become as proverbial for their hatred of trees, as their country has for sterility of soil and sleeping streams. There, and on eastward all through the Orient, a relentlessly brilliant sky and an appalling absence of verdue will teach us as nothing else can how beautiful clouds are that weep, and, in its proper time, how delicious a drizzling rainy day. These deforested eastern lands are as famous for seasons of blinding storms, and valleys torn by terrible tornadoes, as they are for the reverse. They will soon find their counterpart in all these characteristics in America, unless we rouse ourselves with a will to understand and master these evils. Forests promote streams available for our precious manufacturing interests, also, by furnishing vast and almost innumerable beds of fallen leaves and of moss, which act on the earth like a huge, overlying sponge, to check the sudden rush of the rain-fall into the valleys and down into the streams. Very rapidly, in recent years, are mournful instances multiplying in which these manufacturing streams are transformed, by freshets, from spirits of blessing—to give homes and food and clothing to thousands who live in the hamlets, by turning their machinery which helps them by their labor to help themselves—to demons of destruction. Forests also promote such steadiness of flow of the streams as to make them sources of national wealth in giving employment to skilled labor, by preventing the rapid evaporation of moisture. Probably more than half the water that falls on a deforested region in a dry season is whisked off by evaporation just at the time when it is most needed to strengthen the depleted mill-streams. The steam-engine, to be of any practical value as a motor-power, must have its action controlled by the conservative influence of the balance-wheel. Otherwise its wheels would whirl one time with a fury which would result only in destruction, and then would move too slowly to be of service. Thus the forest, by increasing the frequency of gentle rains, and so decreasing the volume and the length of intervals between showers, also by regulating their too sudden plunge into the streams, is the great regulator provided by nature for their control in the service of man. All over the manufacturing portions of our country we may find instances where large amounts of capital have been invested to make available and develop our once magnificent and almost numberless hydraulic powers. Trusting to what seemed a certainty of employment for themselves and their families, thousands of skilled laborers have, in many instances, confidingly made their homes at a point where the stream seemed abundantly powerful and permanent. Then, as the summers came and went, the river seemed to sicken, and grow more and more feeble, till there would be a week or two each year in which the spindles and the looms would be silent. As time went on these periods of idleness have lengthened into months, in which the laborer struggles for bread and clothing, for means to pay for the humble little home, or debts incurred in sickness, was compelled to be suspended. The cause of all this was that the source of the river's life had been destroyed or injured by the ignorance, cupidity, or recklessness of men who "lifted up axes on the trees" far up the mountains, where the mill-streams had their birth.

Beef Tea.—A cheap and useful drink in colds, fevers, and restlessness from pain. Put a handful of hay in a pint and a half of water, let it boil rather more than half an hour, then strain it, and, if desired, flavor with sugar and lemon; but it is a pleasant drink without any addition.

Porridge.—When children are delicate, porridge is often preferable to bread and milk. Put two tablespoonfuls of groats or oatmeal in the milk saucepan, wet to a smooth paste with half a pint of milk; let it boil ten minutes keeping it well stirred, add a small piece of butter and a little sugar, and it is ready for use.

Irish Stew.—Cut up about two pounds of the neck of mutton into small cutlets, put a layer into a proper sized stewpan with some of the fat of the mutton, season it with half a tablespoonful of salt, a quarter of an ounce of pepper, the same of sugar, six medium sized onions, a quart of water, set them to boil and simmer for half an hour, then add six middling sized potatoes, cut them in halves or quarters, stir it together, and let it stew gently for about one hour longer; if too fat, remove it from the top, but if well done the potatoes will absorb all of it, and be very delicious; any other part of the mutton may be served in the same way.

About Poisons.

"Poison: A substance which, when taken into the stomach, mixed with the blood, or applied to the skin or flesh, proves fatal or deleterious; any thing infectious or malignant." Our scissors make the first clip out of Webster for a definition of the greatest evil as well as the greatest good in the medical world. For after the fashion of the old saying, "It takes a thief to catch a thief," in public systems, so in the individual system, if one poison has stolen away into the network of veins by fair means or foul, there is small hope of recovering one's own, save another poison be sent after it.

All medicines seem to be more or less poisonous; but owing to the infinitesimal doses they require to produce death or even deleterious effects, they are by the mass of people regarded as harmless; for arsenic, strychnine, opium, chloroform, mercury, and perhaps a dozen more prominent poisons cover nine to them, dangerous poisons. Yet we read in a daily paper of a child suddenly attacked by severe vomiting, which the usual remedies failed to check, ending in exhaustion and death; and the cause is laid anywhere but at the confectioner's counter where the boy bought his candies and cakes flavored with bitter almond.

"The bitter almond is a powerful poison." A single drop of the essential oil on a cat's tongue made a dead pussy of a living one in just five minutes by experiment. Some delicate organizations, especially among children, can bear but little of this essence, the smallest quantity producing an eruption like nettle rash, if nothing worse, and yet macaroons are eaten and given to children to eat with impunity, which owners are often, now-a-days, using bitter almond but the essence for their flavoring. There is a "family relation" between the bitter and sweet almond, how close is not easily defined, but sufficient to show that on some persons the sweet nut on our tables if eaten produces an effect similar to that caused by the bitter almond.

"Fish poison is one of the most singular in all the range of toxicology." Certain kinds of fish in hot countries are looked upon as always poisonous to peculiar constitutions, and perhaps depending somewhat on the climate. The richer sort of vertebrate fish, though actually eaten with perfect safety by mankind in general, are nevertheless poisonous, either at all times or occasionally to peculiar individuals. This fact is self-evident to many of us who have experienced nausea after eating white fish, salmon, lobster, etc., at one time or another, and instinct is wise when it heeds the hint and declines the poison in the future.

Lead poisoning we are more familiar with, as some members of our household are more susceptible than others to the injurious effects of water run through lead pipes. But the poison in this case, acting slowly and subtly, is usually classed "malaria." Those who work in lead mines or in any way with lead and absorb its fine dust into their system, except by the greatest care, sooner or later have what in general phraseology is called printers' or painters' palsy. The habits of children to bite and wet their lead pencils is often followed by serious results, which are more likely to be traced to a close school-room and hard study, than to the lead pencils, slate pencils and chalk they have munched on at short intervals five days out of the seven.

Another of the every-day poisons is found in the syrup which is a leading feature of the American breakfast table. "The use of chloride of tin in glucose syrups has been proved by numerous analyses." Think of that, oh you who indulge in "golden drip" and "maple syrup" on cold, wintry mornings on your hot cakes. Beware of any syrup that leaves a metallic taste in the mouth lest by means of the sweet liquid your stomach gets a tin lining, and you, wondering why on earth you have developed dyspepsia, conclude it must be hot cakes disagree with you. And if the said cakes are made of the raising—easy stuff called baking-powder—very likely the disagreement can, in part, be laid to them, for analysis has also shown that baking-powder contains a large proportion of dessicated alum.

Women Eyeing Women.

The eyeing of women by women is one of the most offensive manifestations of superciliousness now to be met with in society. Few observant persons can have failed to notice the manner in which one woman not perfectly well-bred or perfectly kind-hearted will eye another woman who she thinks is not in such good society, and dressed all out at the time in so costly a dress as she herself is in. It is done everywhere—at parties, at church, in the street. It is done by women in all conditions in life. The servant girls learn it of their mistresses. It is done in an instant. Who cannot recall hundreds of instances of that sweep of the eye which takes in at a glance the whole woman and what she has on, from top-knot to shoe tie? Men are never guilty of it, or, with such extreme rarity, and then in such feeble and small-souled specimens of their sex, that it may be set down as a sin not masculine, or at least not epicene. But women of sense, of some breeding, and even of some kindliness of nature will thus endeavor to assert superiority upon the meanest of all pretenses and inflict a wound in a manner most cowardly, because it cannot be resented, and admits of no retort. If they but only knew how unlovely, how positively offensive they made themselves in so doing, not only to their silent victims, but to every generous-hearted man who observes their manœuvres, they would give up a triumph at once so mean and cruel which is obtained at such a sacrifice on their part. No other evidence than this eyeing is needed that a woman, whatever be her birth and breeding, has a small and vulgar soul.

Getting Eggs in Winter.

Best prevention a good breed for laying. Leghorns are the best; light Brahmas come next. Then provide a warm house, one sunk three feet below the ground, and covered with earth, containing a few inches of sand in front on the south side, which seldom freezes in the coldest weather. Then feed warm food, boiled potatoes mixed while hot with [illegible] meal, with a little pepper and salt, with a little meat, boiled, or chopped turnips, cabbages and [illegible] should be added, or [illegible] of the oyster.

ON THE SEA ISLANDS.

The Progress of the Black on the South Carolina Coast.

Frank Wilkeson in New York Sun.

Gradually, so slowly as to be almost imperceptible these people began to rise. They had nothing—no stock, no tools, no store of food, no cotton seed of the best quality. They had a [illegible] idleness and great hope for the future. They worked, they fished in the lagoons, they hunted for oysters, and they loafed. Contrary to the general expectation of the white men, they saved their money, and when they had accumulated enough they invested it in stock. If they had money they bought a single ox. That was used for enough work. They bought cheap mules and horses, old, worn out animals, possessing enough strength to pull the smallest load they could have through the light sandy soil. Many of these animals died. It was discouraging. The accumulation of property proved to be up hill work. They were so [illegible] they could get ahead. The educated whites, who really wished for the betterment of these people in common, brought from Edisto Island the seed of the improved cotton raised there which is the best in the world. The bringing in of this seed was, in my opinion, the first step taken toward the material advancement of these negroes. With the new seed they produced a finer quality of cotton and one that yielded about eight pounds more of lint to the hundred weight of seed cotton. The prices obtained for the improved more than the best in the market. Though the negroes were working remarkably well, the land area they cultivated per family were so small that it seemed to be impossible for them to accumulate property. In the province of Lower Canada, at a small shipping town called by the French Le trois Rivers, near the banks of the noble St. Lawrence, a cottage was built over one hundred years ago. At this pioneer home of Simeon Dewey a new boarder was admitted to the family Feb. 25th, 1811. Before the youngster was a year old he was transported with his parents to Hanover, N. H. There, within eighty rods of Dartmouth College, learned to read and write. After the age of thirteen attended Moors Academy, Preceptor Kimball, two years. AFTER MARRIAGE.

WHO TOOK IT?

"Will you take charge of [illegible] to-morrow morning, Marian?"

"Take charge of £20, Harold?" echoed my wife in amazement. "What do you mean?"

I settled myself down to an explanation. Explanations are things I hate—everything—as they are necessary sometimes. One was due on this occasion.

"[illegible] my dear Marian," I began, with a business-like air, "that the failure of Hardinge Brother threw scores of men, women and children in this city out of work in the very hardest part of a very bad year. This evening a meeting was held with a view of enlisting the sympathy of the public. A subscription list was got up, and a collection was made then and there to the tune of £20. As nothing else could be done with the money to-night, I was, as treasurer, obliged to bring it home; and my instructions I felt, I can assure you, at coming along these lonely roads, with such a sum. However, I reached home safely in spite of my fears, and now I hand it over to you until I can get rid of it."

"And so free your mind from all responsibility," [illegible] with a smile. "She knows that one of my chief pleasures is a dread of responsibility."

As far as possible, I replied.

We went immediately into a consultation as to where the money should be put. I suggested the meat-safe, as a place where thieves would never think of going for money; but my wife pooh-poohed the idea, as well as several other suggestions of mine, which I thought valuable. At last an idea struck her—a shape of the wine-draw in the bottom of the side-board. By this means the money would be doubly safe, she argued, for the draw might first be locked, in addition to locking the door. I looked rather contemptuously on the plan, for, if it must be told, I felt a little envious of myself to do so, and my wife yielded, every suggestion I make in a similar manner.

Both of us failing to hit upon anything better, the wine-draw was agreed upon; and as I looked over my evening paper, I watched her place the black-japanned box in the drawer, lock it, take the key and place the key in her own purse.

"There!" she exclaimed, triumphantly; "I shouldn't think any one would get at that before to-morrow morning, for this purse goes into the well of my dressing-table drawer, so we are doubly and trebly secure."

In spite of these precautions there was a load on my mind, that I felt would only be removed when the money was safe in the bank. I envied my wife her happy insensibility, for in less than half an hour she was quietly sleeping, while I tossed restlessly to and fro, thinking about the money, and wondering whether any one could get at it. At last a grand idea struck me, which was to put it inside the piano. Who would dream of searching for treasures in such a place? whereas, what robber coming into a house would not go to a side-board? and the very fact of finding it doubly locked would make him suspect that something was hidden there. Plainly enough Mistress Marian, with all her cleverness, had chosen the very worst place possible. Should I go down and remove it? I knew where the keys were to be found. I had half a mind to do so, if only for the sake of quieting my fears and getting a little sleep. No doubt I should have done so, had not a circumstance intervened—I fell asleep.

It seemed scarcely an hour afterwards that I awoke and heard sounds of life in the street below. Well, so far all was safe enough; no robbers had molested us, and I felt so comfortable and easy now that all danger was over that I began to laugh at my nervous fears. How [illegible] I thank goodness I had been too strong-minded for that. I fell off into another doze, and as a natural consequence was late for breakfast. That meal was a hurried one, and when it was over, and I had my coat and hat on, ready to start off to an important case, I reminded Marian of the money, and begged her to get it out quickly.

"I had quite forgotten it," she exclaimed. "Here, Martha, run up-stairs and fetch me my purse out of the dressing-case; the keys are in my dressing-table drawer."

Martha flew up stairs to do her mistress' bidding, while I stood and chafed in the hall and submitted to have my coat brushed. In a moment she returned, bringing the purse, and Marian ran into the dining-room. Two or three minutes passed, and Marian was still handling at the side-board. I entered the room impatiently. Marian looked at me reproachfully.

"This is quite too bad, Harold. What have you done with the box?"

"Done with the box?" I exclaimed; "what do you mean, Marian?"

"I won't stand this trifling any longer," replied my wife. "'Tis a shame to give me the responsibility of that money and then tease me like this."

"What on earth is the woman talking about?" I cried, bewildered. "Say what you mean in plain words, I beg."

"The money's not here. Its gone, box and all," Marian replied, with a white face.

"Gone!" I cried, "gone! Where's it gone, how's it gone, or who has taken it, I should like to know? You must be raving. Let me come and look."

Marian moved aside and I knelt down to the drawer. No sign of a box was there. As my wife had said, the money was gone.

But how, when or where? The drawer was locked, the dressing-case was locked, the purse was inside it, the keys in the dressing-table drawer. These things my wife and Martha were sure of. A man in such a position is bound to have an idea on the subject, and to assert it, so I suggested that Martha must be the culprit.

"No, no, don't say that," cried my wife excitedly. "It has been before me that I was the thief as she. I've known her all my life. No, no, it isn't Martha."

"You talk like a child," I replied with an air of superiority, for really women have no reasoning powers whatever—we have to reason for them. "Do you suppose any one else who by any possibility could have taken the money?"

"Indeed I cannot," Marian replied. "It could not have been housebreaker, for the locks were just as I left them; nothing had been touched apparently."

"You admit that it could not be any one outside the house, so it must be Martha; that is plain logic," I said, with as much evenness of temper as I could command at the moment.

"It isn't Martha," replied my wife stubbornly. "I never believe it."

For my part I felt sure that it was Martha. And it was quite impossible that she could have got rid of it yet, I hoped I should easily discover it.

But she denied the charge so emphatically that it was with a very anxious heart I betook myself to the bedside of my patient. The case was a complicated and peculiar one, and my mind became so interested in the progress of the various symptoms that my own cares became as things of naught. And paying one or two minor visits I returned home. Martha opened the door, and immediately retired to the kitchen without a word. Marian was nowhere to be found. I went up stairs in search of her, she was there but a little table in the corner covered with writing materials betrayed her recent presence. An open letter in a hand writing that I knew and detested attracted my attention. Husbands have certain prerogatives. I asserted one at that moment. If you care to do the same, here it is; if not, skip it.

"Dear May.—If you don't contrive to send it before this day week it will be ruination for me. If you send it you will enable me to retrieve my former position, and become a credit to my family. Yours affectionately, FRANK."

"The young rascal! what fresh mess has he been getting into?" I exclaimed angrily. This same Frank had been the source of untold squabbles between myself and Marian, holding a fairly good position in the city, for an unmarried man, and yet always getting into debt.

Presently I heard Marian enter the house. With the letter in my hand I confronted her. She turned first white, and then red, and asked me by what right a gentleman entered a lady's private room and read her correspondence.

I paid no attention to this high-flown language, but replied by asking her whether she had been out to post a letter. She admitted she had.

"To Frank?" I enquired.

"I decline to answer," she replied stiffly.

"Contained money?" I asked.

"That I also decline to answer," she replied.

Here was a pretty pass things had come to—my own wife openly refusing to answer my questions! What was I to think? I think any one else in my place would have come to the same conclusion as I did—namely, that the letter was to Frank, and that it contained money. A few inquiries at the post-office confirmed my supposition. From the time of this discovery a cloud seemed to have settled over our usually happy household. Marian was sullen and angry, and sat at the head of the table without speaking a word. Between meals I scarcely ever saw her. Martha sided with her mistress, and always looked at me reproachfully.

In the meantime other cares were pressing hard upon me. In spite of a rigid examination I could discover no clue to the lost money. Of course I had been obliged to make it good; and, in order to do this, had drained myself of every available sixpence.

These events happened at a time of year when it was impossible to call in many outstanding debts; so that, after a week of desperate struggle against our unfortunate circumstances, I was compelled sorely against my will, to appeal to my father. All this while I had been silent about the lost money, but had held several discussions with a detective. A fear of incurring additional expense had deterred me from setting him to work, but as he seemed to think that to trace the money would be the easiest thing in the world, I at last gave him authority to commence a strict investigation.

From the detective's, I went to my father, and, plainly stating the facts, asked him if he would lend me the sum I had lost. This he agreed to do; and the conversation turned on family matters generally. The unhappy coolness which had arisen between myself and Marian was presently discussed; and when my father taxed me with unkindness toward her, I felt bound to explain to him Frank's demand, and her resentment of my interference.

My mother started up suddenly from a long thinking and startled me with a question.

"Was Marian the only person who had access to the side-board?"

"As far as I know, the only person," I replied.

"And did her letter to her brother contain money?"

"Yes—a P. O. O. for £10."

"Had she £10 of her own?"

"Not that I knew of."

"Was she likely to have saved it from her allowance for housekeeping or private purposes?"

"Very unlikely, indeed."

"Then," my mother continued, "it seems to me that the nearer home you look for your money, the sooner you will find it."

When I arrived home, my mind was torn and distracted by conflicting opinions. I felt very anxious to discover some assurance of innocence, or maybe of guilt.

"Marian," I said, as gently as I could, "where did you get the money from that you sent to Frank?"

She started, and turned quickly round upon me.

"How did you know I sent money to Frank?"

"Never mind how I knew it," I replied. "Where did you obtain it? You must answer me that question, before you leave this room," I added, more sternly, for her evasion of my question displeased me.

She looked me steadily in the face for a minute, then dropping her eyes and clasping her hands tightly together, she exclaimed:

"I see now the drift of your question. The money was lost at the same time that I sent some to Frank. Harold, you suspect me—your own wife—of being the thief, and you have sent that man (I see he was a detective now) to track me out and prove the crime on me. Do you intend to send me to prison?"

"Marian," I answered coldly, "when I send time-worn men to watch a gentleman I had ever counted my friend, and now that I must confess it has one word from you will disprove it, my wife, be clear with me, here I extended my hand to her, but she [illegible] from me, [illegible] only to acknowledge it, to obtain my free forgiveness."

"Your forgiveness," she cried hopelessly, "I do not need it," and without another word she left me.

For some minutes I remained stunned at this new aspect of affairs. Is it possible that my Marian was guilty? I could never believe it. And yet she had not attempted to deny it. Again, the anxious face she had lately worn, together with the other circumstances of the case, served only to confirm the idea. Would that it had not been so, or even being so, that she would come to me for the reconciliation I was longing for, and the forgiveness I was only too anxious to bestow!

A day or two after this, I found a note awaiting me when I returned home to dinner. The hand-writing was Marian's, and my delight at seeing it was so great that I kissed it again and again. Hastily I opened and read it. It ran as follows:

"The society of a child I cannot be unsensial. For that reason I have kept out of your way till I had made up my mind what to do. I leave this and intend for any more. Baby and I have gone to my father. I know you can claim baby if you like to do so, but I think you will see that it is better for him to be with me. Do not ask me to come back, I never can. The miserable life I have been leading lately would soon have killed me, and my life is precious to my child.

"Your unhappy wife, MARIAN."

That was all, except a few words at the end that had been hastily scrawled out, of which I could distinguish only, "Oh, Harold!"

Strange as it may seem, this note did not shock me as the discovery of Marian's guilt had done. I felt so angry with her for her unreasonable conduct that my tenderer feelings remained almost untouched. My love for the Marian of former days had not decreased one whit, but my anger with the present Marian was for the moment paramount. The child was better with her, and, for the present she should keep him. I had no idea of fetching her back. She had left me through no unkindness of my own, and no wife could be justified in leaving her husband in the way Marian had left me.

I was beginning to get a little accustomed to my renewed bachelorhood, when one night, very late, a telegram was brought me worded thus:

"Come at once to baby."

The night train would leave in about an hour's time. I packed a few things and started to catch it. In about three hours more I was conducted to the room where Marian was sitting with our little one lying in her lap, struggling hard for life. Some medical man was already there, bending over the child and anxiously gazing at its contorted and livid features, but, as far as I could see, doing but little to assist in the battle against death. He left at once, and Marian looked up into my face and said:

"Thank God, you have come! He was doing no good. Oh, 'Harold' save my baby; save my child."

"I will do what I can to save our child," I answered.

I called a servant and gave my instructions. In a few minutes the room was filled with vapor, every vent being carefully guarded. The cloud of vapor kept on steadily increasing, till drops of water began to trickle down the walls. Still the child on Marian's lap lay almost choked, its struggles growing fainter each succeeding time. The cloud was still pouring out into the room, and nothing more could be done, so I stood at Marian's knee, watching for the approach of some favorable symptom. Only once Marian spoke, and then it was to ask me with blanched face and faltering lips if there was any hope.

"To the last moment, yes," I answered, and she was relieved at once, hardly comprehending from my words how faint that hope was.

Presently the struggles grew more frequent; gradually the almost sightless limbs became imbued with fresh vigor, the heavy eyelids relaxed, the gasps for breath became more effectual, and with a mighty effort nature asserted her sway. In a short time baby was nestling in Marian's arms, wrapped in a sweet life-giving slumber."

When he was laid in his cot, his mother turned to me and said pathetically, "Oh, Harold! when baby was so near death, and you far away, I could not help seeing how wicked I had been to leave you as I did. Will you forgive me, dear, and take me back, for baby's sake?"

I could only kiss her, and press her to my heart. After a while I said, "It was only those words, 'Will you forgive me?' that I wanted. If you had spoken them sooner, we need not have parted."

"Oh, Harold! how can [illegible] I was not that I was asking you to forgive me, but my folly in leaving you. I am as innocent of taking that wretched money as my own child. Won't you believe me?"

"I do, my darling, I do," I replied with genuine delight. "I would have believed you then if you had said this to me; but you know you never deigned me a word, and what was I to think?"

"I was horrified at your even suspecting me, and I fancied it was beneath me to deny it. I cannot now understand what could have prompted you to think such a dreadful thing of me. It is very hard to bear."

I was beginning to wonder, too, how I could have suspected my own Marian. Circumstances, and my mother, were more to blame than I, however.

In answer, I murmured something about Frank.

"Ah, that letter to Frank; I remember it. You were always so hard upon him that I didn't like to tell you about it. He really had been trying to keep on steadily of the past year. Kindness had obtained him one of, debts were constantly coming in, and his limited salary would not meet them and keep him as well. There was one man who pressed him hard for pay. He had spent his last quarter's salary within a pound or two, and more could not be coming for some time. He was in a fix, and he must draw on his sister, but I urged him not to do so, so soon. I was sure my own eyes would shame a man. The man threatened to expose his former, but I spoke to the firm, and we soon knew that there was an end of them. I resolved to help him with them. I resolved to help him through, and proposed to do so, and my husband, poor, thinking, generous fellow, could scarcely find words to express his gratitude. I got the money for him, and sent him notes to that amount—he little guessed at what cost.

"My poor, persecuted, self-sacrificing little woman; why did you not tell me all this? Why could you not trust me?"

"Why could you not trust me?" Marian reiterated, half playfully, half pathetically. Then she added earnestly, "I have been very much to blame. I was proud and self-willed and all sort of bad things, and in leaving you was worse than all. Harold, dear, I am so ashamed of myself for that. No woman is justified in leaving her husband on such a pretext as I had."

"I thought so too. She was becoming the most sensible little woman in the world, but I had been to blame too, and I was not going to let all the censure rest on her side.

"We were both to blame," I replied. "I am not going to exonerate you quite, little woman, but I am going to own to my fault. I was a brute to doubt you. Marian, you must forget it, dear."

"Oh, Harold! we shall be so happy again now, shall we?" the little woman replied, and then she wound up her resolution in a truly womanly style with tears and smiles and kisses.

But the mystery of the money was still more dark after Marian's explanation, and it was many weeks before we penetrated it. We did so at last, however.

The piano being sadly in want of repair, I sent for a professional man to come and "regulate" it. I was in the room when he proceeded to take it to pieces. As soon as the front was removed I perceived a little black box, snugly tucked inside, which I immediately recognized. My grand idea now flashed into my mind. Here, then, was the clue to the mystery. I was the thief. In my anxiety I had placed the money in the piano, while still under the influence of sleep.

Marian was delighted. She actually shed tears of joy when I told her of my discovery.

"Oh, you abandoned man," she said, shaking her head at me, "to suspect me when all the time you had stolen your own money."

Swimming.

The editor of the London Truth, after observing that probably not one in twenty of the persons who indulge in boating on a holiday can swim, proceeds to tell his readers how to acquire this accomplishment. "Nothing," he says, "is more easy. When the airlin out of the body, its owner sinks; when the air is in the body, its owner floats. Let anyone slowly draw in his breath as he draws back his legs and pushes forward his arms, retain it while he is preparing the stroke which is to propel him, and slowly allow it go through his lips as his arms are passed back from before his head to his sides and his legs are stretched out. The action of the stroke should not be quite horizontal, but should be made on a slight incline downwards. The real reason why people take weeks to learn how to swim is because swimming professors either do not know or do not choose to teach the philosophy of breathing, so as to render the body buoyant. I would engage to make anyone a tolerable swimmer in an hour, unless he be a congenital idiot."

An Important Date for Englishmen.

A story comes to us, says the Boston Transcript, of an incident in a school in Southampton, England, some years ago. The boys were being examined in the history of England, and the answers were mainly dates of events more or less important in the history of the British Empire. Among the pupils was a son of an American sea-captain, a bright specimen of young America. Being questioned concerning dates in English history, he manifested an ignorance bordering on stupidity. The teacher whose patience was exhausted, exclaimed: "What! Don't you remember a single date that marks an important event in the history of England?" "Why, yes, sir," answered the boy, "I do know one." "Well, out with it," said the teacher. "The Fourth of July, 1776."

Infinitessimal.

A drop of water seen with a microscope, of which 27,000,000 would only equal a mite. Insects of various kinds may be seen in the cavities of a grain of sand. Mold is a forest of beautiful trees, with branches, leaves and fruit. Butterflies are fully feathered. Hairs are hollow tubes. The surfaces of our bodies is covered with scales like a fish; a single grain of sand would cover 150 of these scales, and yet each scale covers 500 pores. Through these narrow openings the perspiration forces itself like water through a seive. The mites take 500 steps a second. Each drop of stagnant water contains a world of animated animals, swimming with as much liberty as whales in the sea. Each leaf has a colony of insects grazing on it like cows in a meadow.

Experiments in a deep lake near Berlin have shown the practicability of an ingenious plan for raising sunken vessels and other heavy objects lost in the water. The invention is that of an Austrian engineer, and consists of an uninflated balloon, containing a bottle of sulphuric acid packed in salt, which, when exposed to the action of the acid, generates carbonic acid gas. The balloon is taken under water by a diver and fastened to the object that is to be raised. Then a screw is turned that liberates the acid, gas is formed, the balloon expands and rises, and it is only a question of the size of the balloon, the strength of the tackle, and the weight of the object raised, whether it shall be raised or not. The experiments near Berlin were successful.

False happiness renders men stern and proud, and that happiness is never communicated. True happiness, however, renders them kind and sensible, and that happiness is always shared.

The Sexton Writes Us.

Fountaintown, Shelby Co., Ind.

Mr. A. Kiefer—Sir: For some years past I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint. I have had several physicians treating my case, but they all failed to reach the seat of disease. During the past year I got much worse, and became so weak and low as to be unable to do any work. I had a great deal of headache, and at times became so dizzy that I had to lay down. About six weeks ago I commenced using your Taraxine, and after taking the third dose I felt much better, headache went away, giving me no trouble while I continued the use of it till I had taken three bottles, and I am now well and able to do a day's work on the farm. Yours truly, etc.

The delicate construction of the eye makes it necessary to use great care in selecting spectacles.

"They fired two shots at him," wrote an Irish reporter; "the first shot killed him, but the second shot was not fatal."

A sociable man is one who, when he has ten minutes to spare, goes and bothers somebody who hasn't.

Etiquette says a call should not be less than fifteen minutes in length. Book agents have been known to remain longer.

A fly never appears to such disadvantage as when he is mounted on his head in the center of your squash pie, rubbing his hind feet together in the air.

A New Orleans paper says that a young widow in that city who writes well, "is training herself for an editor." Who is the editor she is training for?

A sharp thirsty man now walks into a bar-room and asks if he can "put up" his silk umbrella for a drink. The bartender acquiesces, the chap gets a drink, raises his umbrella and walks out.

"See, mamma!" exclaimed a little one, as puss, with arching spine and elevated rudder, strutted around the table; "see, Kitty's cat so much she can't shut her tail down."

A school-marm who was recently kissed by mistake in the dark, explains her omission to use any light for nearly a month afterward, on the ground of hard times.

A Canadian couple, on their way to Dakota to settle, weigh 614 pounds; the man 310 pounds, and the wife 304 pounds. Let us hope that they will be careful what they settle on.

Two friends were passing a church one evening when a strong smell of burning leather pervaded the air. "I wonder if that is the odor of sanctity?" said one. "I think it must be," was the quick reply, "for it smells of soles."

Small gentleman appears in a huge hat which engulfs him to his shoulders. His wife—"But that doesn't fit you, my love." He—"That's what I told the man, but he showed me his gold medal, the only one awarded for hats, and what could I do?"

A sharp little girl in Chicago got out of patience with her bashful lover's backwardness, and so she brought matters to a favorable climax by saying to him, "I really believe you are afraid to ask me to marry you, for you know I would say yes."

They were fishing off the coast, when the fair one of the party pointed to a sail in the distance, and asked, "George, what kind of a vessel is that?" He canted over, stole a kiss from her lips, and answered calmly, "That's a fishing smack."

Luck is a good thing, but one can not always afford to wait for it. Pluck is a better thing, because it is always ready to begin.

The chief secret of comfort lies in not allowing trifles to vex one, and in prudently cultivating an undergrowth of small pleasures, since very great ones are let on long leases.

Garments that have one rent in them are subject to be torn on every nail, and glasses that are once cracked are soon broken; such is a person's good name once tainted with reproach.

The best religion is that which will make a colored man sit down content to eat corn bread for supper, knowing at the same time that a neighbor has fat chickens and no dog in the yard.

A valuable dog belonged to a gentleman, who intrusted one of his farm servants with the key of the barn, from whence he occasionally brought sacks of flour to the house for the use of the family. One night this man wickedly stole a sack of corn for the use of his own household, little thinking that the dog, which knew him so well, and watched and followed him so quietly, would interfere with his guilty plan.

All went smoothly until the thief, leaving his master's premises, turned into the road that led to the village, when the shrewd animal, suspecting that all was not right, seized him by the leg, and, without hurting him in the least, held him tightly till the morning. Unable to account for his awkward position, the culprit was obliged to confess his crime.

Plenty of Barley meal, grass and water are the requisites in raising and fattening geese. If they cannot have a range in the fields, let the floor of the house where they are confined be liberally supplied with litter. They should be fed cut grass, cabbage, lettuce, etc., and not be deprived of a washing-pan in which they may plunge every day.

They were courting. "What makes the stars so dim to-night," she said softly. "Your eyes are so much brighter," he whispered, pressing her hand. They are married now. "I wonder how many telegraph-poles it would take to reach to the stars from here," she said musingly. "One, if it was long enough," he growled. "Why don't you talk common sense?"

The Medici Family.

From the bosom of commerce sprung the illustrious family of Medici, which in celebrity has eclipsed those of almost all the sovereigns of Europe. John de Medici, whose influence and ascendancy in the councils of the commonwealth arose not more from their vast possessions than from his virtue and [illegible] merchant of Italy, cardinal Golonn, after his elevation to the chair of St. Peter, by Martin the Fifth, when reduced to apply to him for pecuniary assistance, scrupled not to pledge to him the pontifical crown, and afterward created him Duke of Montevarchi.

At his death, notwithstanding the immense treasures which he bequeathed to his family, yet so boundless had been his largesses and donations to the necessitous among his fellow-citizens, that he was attended to the grave by a prodigious concourse of his whilom countrymen and honored with the title of "Father of the Poor."

Cosmo, the eldest, son succeeded to his virtues and [illegible] of genius, power and reputation. Banished from Florence by a triumphant faction, he was recalled only to enjoy an augmented degree of public confidence. His influence, always exerted to produce the most beneficial and laudable effects, attained a strength and solidity which no despotism could have conferred. Constantly engaged in commerce, he employed and enriched a multitude of persons, who in return sustained his own greatness. His vessels traded at every port, and his factors at Constantinople, Cairo, and along the coast of Lesser Asia, enjoyed the most distinguished consideration.

The sultans of Egypt, the emirs of Babylon, and the Turkish emperors were all connected with him by commercial ties.

The Palæologi, in whose family expired the empire of Constantinople, sold him the jewels and splendid furniture of the imperial palaces, during the state of depression to which they were reduced previous to their final destruction by Mahomet the Second. To the claims to the admiration of his contemporaries and of posterity which commerce and riches could confer, Cosmo added another by his princely protection of letters.

The memorable era, distinguished by the name of "the age of Medici," commenced with Cosmo, and forms an epoch in the annals of literature. His house was the asylum of genius and talent from every part of Italy and Greece. The most precious manuscripts, preserved by his care from the barbarous rage of the Turks, and purchased by his order, were transmitted to future times. Numbers of learned men, driven by Turkish sultans to take refuge in Florence and other Italian states, received from his bounty a liberal provision, and repaid him by their grateful eulogiums.

More fortunate in the close of his life than Pericles, Cosmo, after presiding during thirty years over the republic, during which time he embellished the capital with monuments of utility and magnificence, expired at a very advanced age, free from the infirmities by which it is usually accompanied. His memory was inexpressibly dear to his countrymen, who, by a public decree, inscribed on his tomb the glorious title of "Father of his Country."

There are many moral people whose virtues somehow seem to be a misfit.

A kid-napper—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.

"Oh, mamma!" exclaimed a bright little boy yesterday, "there goes an editor." Hush my child," said the kind-hearted lady, "hush, the poor unfortunate man may hear you."

An inquisitive young lady asks: "What is the most popular color for the bride?" The New York Star answers: "If we were going to marry, we should prefer a white one."

A bright little three-year-old, while her mother was trying to get her to sleep, became interested in some outside noise. She was told that it was caused by a cricket, when she sagely observed: "Mamma, I think he ought to be oiled."

A bald-headed professor, reproving a youth for the exercise of his fists, said: "We fight with our heads at this college." The youth reflected a moment, and then replied: "Ah, I see, and you have butted all your hair off."

He was told to remain after school, when the teacher, trying to impress upon the youthful mind the sinfulness of not speaking the truth, asked him if they did not tell him, in Sunday-school, where bad boys went who told falsehoods. Choking with sobs, he said: "Yes, ma'am; its a place where there is fire, but I don't just remember the name of the town."

A young man who went to the circus, and stepped too near a monkey's cage, had his arm seized and savagely jerked by one of the monkeys. He would have escaped safely if he had not said, "It is merely a monkey wrench," but when they heard that, the infuriated crowd threw him to the lion's cage.

Yesterday afternoon a young gentleman from the Flint river district came to town with a jag of wood and a pair oxen, and in the course of his wanderings he came across a fire-hydrant that had been opened to clean out the pipes. He stared at the gushing water in dead silence for a moment, and then gave the alarm by shrieking: "Gosh all hemlock! Here's a hitching-post sprung a leak worse than a sugar maple!"

A filial rebuke. Squire Quiverful, who has a large family, to his eldest son:—"These are uncommonly good cigars of yours, Fred; what do they cost you?" Fred—"Sixty shillings a hundred." Squire Quiverful—"Good heavens! what extravagance! Do you know, sir, that I never give more than threepence for a cigar?" Fred—"And a very good price, too, I'm George, Governor, if I had as many children to provide for as you have, I wouldn't smoke at all."

The Use of a Broom.—As simple as the advice may seem, but very few people handle a broom properly, although they are accustomed to sweep more or less every day of their lives. There is science in handling a broom, as well as in many other kinds of labor. Always draw your broom, by leaning the handle forward, because the position of the broom will take the dirt along more gently; it will sweep cleaner; it will not wear out the carpet so fast. Your broom will be kept in proper shape and not half so much dust will be raised to be afterward wiped from your furniture. Most careless sweepers throw their broom forward of them in a sort of digging way, with the handle inclining towards them. This way you will find breaks your broom, flirts up more dust, and makes the process of sweeping much more laborious.

NEUTRALIZED.

In what way a Prevalent Evil may be Shorn of its Power to Harm.

Malaria is a broad name for many diseases all originating in blood poisoning. Bilious fever, the typhus and typhoid fevers and chills and fever are prominent members of the family. Malaria defies alike the builders, the plumbers and the physicians. Despairing of ordinary treatment, the afflicted almost unanimously recommend BENSON'S CAPSINE POROUS PLASTER as the greatest anti-malarial specific of the age. These plasters act upon the liver, spleen, bowels and kidneys.

When worn on the region of the liver, and upon the back over the kidneys, they ward off malaria like an amulet. No other plasters do this.

When you purchase, satisfy yourself that the word CAPSINE is on the center of the plaster.

CORRESPONDENCE

[illegible]

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAR[illegible]

The Republican State Convention [illegible] Saginaw yesterday. There [illegible] delegates and [illegible] of the nominations to [illegible] Austin [illegible] Thomas J. O'Brien were [illegible] Supreme Court Justice [illegible] Henry B. Hutchins and Jo[illegible] Regents. The tick[illegible] throughout was [illegible] made. No [illegible] was adopted.

WILL CONGRESS DO NOTHING

New York Sun: This states the present situation in a nutshell:

The most important duty of the present Congress is to take the crushing burden of taxation off from the shoulders of the people.

It is plain that the tariff bill [illegible] brought in in the few days that remained of the session. Before it can be passed it must be amended. No such bill can be enacted without adequate discussion. The tariff [illegible] exactly as it is.

But what can this Congress do? Can it pass a short bill repealing all internal revenue taxes, [illegible] on kindred articles. This is what the President commended in his message. It will answer the purpose of relieving the long suffering taxpayers. Such a bill [illegible] can easily be enacted. The Republicans should at once bring it forward. It needs no discussion. Everybody understands it. The Democrats [illegible] oppose it. By taking this course the present Congress can adjourn without leaving upon the Republican party the reproach of having done nothing for the country when the power was in its hands.

THE TAX ON COAL.

The Jackson Patriot points out the beauties of the coal tax and the action of Congress thereon:

Workingmen and others who are finding out that it costs a great deal more to live [illegible] enough to keep warm, this long and cold winter should remember that the Senate of the [illegible] States has just voted to keep up a tax of 75 cents a ton. The capitalists [illegible] Senate who are interested in the profits of coal mining insisted upon having this tax, although the tariff commission and the finance committee of the Senate had recommended that the tax be reduced to 50 cents a ton, in order to prevent possible competition and cheaper prices from the introduction of coal not mined in the United States. As a matter of course, the capitalists wanting the tax fixed at 75 cents a ton for their benefit, a majority of the senators voted for it. Now if they could pass a law that would make the winters several weeks longer and several degrees colder, they would add very much to the value of the tariff legislation in their behalf. A tariff that would protect them against competition with warm weather which reduces the demand for coal would do them a power of good, and would be in the same line as their present tariff enactment.

THE ONE THING NECESSARY

The New York Independent, which cannot certainly be accused of heterodoxy in politics, reads the Republican Congress a [illegible] in these words:

The people at the last election [illegible] declared in the most emphatic manner that they wanted an immediate reduction of taxes. President Arthur so understood them, and earnestly recommended Congress to respond to this demand. The present session of Congress is almost exhausted, and as yet no law has been passed and it is much to be feared that none will be passed. Let us, then, say to the Republican members of both houses of Congress, who form the majority in both, that if they fail to pass a law revising and reducing tariff taxation and repealing all internal revenue taxes with the exception of those on distilled spirits, beer and tobacco, thereby taking off at least $60,000,000 of unnecessary taxes from the shoulders of the people, the Republican party at the next presidential election is in peril. Gentlemen, please to understand that in earnest. The people hold you responsible to pass such a law. They demand that you shall do it. They said so at the last election and they say so now. They will not excuse your failure on any pretense that you can frame. You can do the thing, if you will; and if you will not, then they will put the power into other hands. The country needs the relief and it needs it now, and the party in power is the party to give that relief. If it will not do so, then let the party go out of power. We earnestly advise Republican members of both houses of Congress to come to an immediate agreement as to tax reform, and to shift all other measures through, whatever may be the attitude of the Democrats. This is the one thing that must be done, if the Republican party is saved from an overwhelming defeat in 1884. If it be not done the Democrats will elect the next President. Let every subscriber to the Independent immediately write a letter to his Congressman enforcing this matter.

One Effect of the Flood.

Detroit Free Press: Chesapeake Creek, New Jersey, has risen two inches during these terrible spring floods, and the appropriation for improving it has, in consequence, been raised to $7,000 in the River and Harbor bill.

The Congressional Dog Show.

Philadelphia Times: Congressman Cook, of Georgia, went to a dog show in Washington the other night. It reminds me of Congress," he said, "because the little dogs make all the fuss and the larger they are the more fuss they make.

What Jay Gould Needs.

Philadelphia Times: If Jay Gould had as good newspaper sense as he has telegraph sense, he would consolidate some of his newspapers. They don't pay and probably wouldn't pay if consolidated, but there wouldn't be so much annual waste of capital.

Desecrating Monday.

Texas Siftings: "Now, Sam," said an Austin millionaire and a prominent church member, to his colored porter, "this getting drunk on Sunday must cease. Why beat that you desecrate Sunday, continually, by becoming intoxicated?" "Be-kase, boss, whisky costs so much I hasn't got any money left ober to get drunk wid on Monday. If I had de money I would desecrate Monday, too."

A Lover in Distress.

Toledo Times: "How can I leave you, my darling?" murmured a Toledo lover in tones of distressing tenderness, as he observed both hands of the clock approach a perpendicular on the dial. "Well, John," responded the girl with wicked innocence, "you can take your choice. If you go through the hall you will be liable to wake up father, and if you leave by way of the back shed you'll be likely to wake up the dog."

Should Make Haste Slowly.

New York World: The Senate will do well to put on its thinking cap before it hastily concurs in General McCook's amendment adopted by the House, which puts the Yellowstone Park under the control of the military. The Yellowstone Park has been under control of the military for ten years past, and according to the most authentic information on the subject the military have used it chiefly for cavalry picnics at the expense of the Government.

A Truly Great Newspaper.

The Sun is sometimes called a great Republican newspaper, and sometimes a great Democratic newspaper. But however its politics may appear to the special observer, the quality of greatness rarely fails to be noticed.—True greatness, like true goodness, cannot be covered up nor disguised by accidental surroundings. So, with the assurance that their essential characteristics will always be recognized The Sun and our honored friend Deacon Richard Smith can continue to be what they are, the one truly great and the other truly good.

Encouraging Each Other.

New York Sun: In default of other support, the weather prophets encourage one another. Even Wiggins is to come in for his share. Vennor announces that Wiggins' great March storm is to occur between the tenth and twelth days of that month, is to be felt on the land more than the sea, and is to take the form of heavy snow falls and cold weather. After all Vennor is king among the prophets. How much wiser and safer it is to predict snow falls in March than to announce such an unheard-of visitation as Wiggins' storm was to be.

Advice to Young Men.

Philadelphia Press: What our young men of "pluck and brains" need more than anything else is stability and patience that will enable them to take root in the communities in which they live. By this means their capabilities will become known and estimated at their true worth. But this cannot be done in twenty-four hours. What they do not need is advice that will lead them into a nomadic habit of life, ever moving on and ready with gripsack in hand at any moment to fly to fresh fields and pastures new, in case they do not instantly have fortunes thrust upon them.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER

NEW YORK, Feb. 24th, 1883.

Rumors have been prevalent for several days that William H. Vanderbilt has been seriously ill, and that he is threatened with paralysis of the death-dealing kind. It is expected, however, the rumor is unfounded. The family deny the reports, which, it is stated, originated for the sake of influencing the stock market. Mr. Vanderbilt has been confined to his room with a severe cold, and has been compelled to forego his customary drive on the road-bed, several afternoons. His ailment, it is alleged, has been aggravated by excessive anxiety of his father's business. Although William is [illegible] Chauncey, William K. is perhaps more brilliant of the two. He has more dash and quick energy, but he lacks balance. Even on the turf, where he had a sort of meteoric career, racing in the name of his trainer, his capacity, or rather absence of it, was frequently noted and commented on, particularly on betting transactions.

The fishermen on both the New York and New Jersey side of the Hudson River are getting ready for the shad fishing season, which beginning on March 15th, lasts until May, and if history, according to the time-honored custom, there will soon be the annual war between the Pilot Commissioners and the fishers. Shad fishing in these waters is done by means of immense nets fastened to poles in the river. By law nets and poles are allowed to be placed on the New Jersey side of the Hudson to the middle of the stream, so as not to interfere with navigation which of course is very heavy on the New York side. Now this middle of the stream is always the bone of contention. The Pilot Commissioners fix it, but the fishermen have never been known to keep to it. If they can only set their poles a few inches further they are happy. There are a number of ancient mariners among them, who can remember when there were no docks on the New York side; when what is now West Washington and Greenwich Street was part of the river and Canal Street was really a canal. Now they wish the middle of the river to be determined by the old shores. Every year it is determined anew that these marine lawyers are wrong, but nevertheless they go beyond their limits. The result is that a couple of boats are injured by the poles. The owners complain to the Pilot Commissioners, and they issue an order to the delinquent fishermen to remove the delinquent poles, of course. It is not done. Then the Pilot Commissioners quietly fit out a tug and start out on a raid and pull up every pole that is beyond the line. The howls, the protests, the prayers and the threats that then ensue from the mariners are simply awe inspiring, but the Vikings of the Pilot Board do not mind them. It adds a sort of zest to their work and man always is at least a cruel animal. I took part in one of these expeditions and confess it was quite an enjoyment. You felt like a buchaneer of the nineteenth century, and gloried in possession of might and right too. The sense of cruelty was lessened by the fact that the fishing season was nearly over, and that of course the fishermen were thereby saved the expense of removing their paraphernalia.

Evangelist Barnes, the mountain apostle, as he loved to hear himself called, has left us to go to Europe.—He was a flat failure here, whatever he may have been in the West, and as he is a very plain spoken man, much more vigorous in his language than the apostles were in their time, he has no hesitation in expressing his disgust. Brooklyn particularly displeased him, and he said it was a place where wickedness and sin literally dropped off the trees. I confess I do not see how Barnes ever expected to make a success here. His style of oratory and gross familiarity with Christ, and his hearers was positively repulsive, but it seems that the revivalists invariably drop into this style. I remember the Widow Van Cott when she commenced her career as a missionary. She was a strong, earnest speaker, and if at times she transgressed the bounds of enthusiasm it was pardonable. Now however she has dropped down to the level of all sensational religionists. She conducted revival services recently at a nice Methodist Church, and her manner grew so offensive that the minister of the church felt ashamed over his mistake in inviting her and almost stayed away from church.

The terrible disaster in the parochial school of the Catholic Church of the Most Holy Redeemer, by which twenty children were killed, and as many more maimed and wounded, still fills the minds of everybody with horror. The Building Department has been making such a fuss of forcing owners of hotels and theatres to make means of escape in case of fire easy. They seem to have forgotten that churches and schools stand fully as much, if not more in need of proper arrangements. Now probably something will be done, but of course it always requires a horror of some kind to sharpen the wits and arouse the activity of public authorities.

A PERTINENT PROTEST

The Rural New Yorker thus illustrates the different manner in which Congress treats the farming community and the whiskey ring in the matter of reducing taxation:

The agricultural interest does well to be angry, and the few dollars it may realize upon their impoverished crops will be [illegible]. All their remonstrances, petitions and demands made to Congress have been treated with as great contempt and their industry, upon which the weal of the world depends, as if it were a mere [illegible] and no heed is given. But when the whiskey distillers, whose profits have been very well and continue to have their taxes reduced to [illegible] cent, are at odds with Congress, for no other reason than that they have foolishly and recklessly, for the purpose of speculation, made more whiskey than they can sell for several years, a bill is hurried through Congress and finally passes the Senate without delay to relieve these people from their just taxes. And yet farmers constitute fully one-half of the population, while the whiskey distillers are but a few score.

SOMETHING WORTH KNOWING

The best and most successful mills now days are the Roller Mills. The corrugated rolls make a whiter and a stronger flour than the mill stone. The rolls granulate the flour coarsely and do not solve and destroy the life of a portion of it as is done by the old system. Hundreds have found this to be true by using Comfort's Roller Flour. Farmers go twenty and even twenty-five miles to Comfort's Roller Mills to exchange their good wheat for Comfort's Roller Flour. Comfort pays the very highest market price for good sound wheat. Growth and unsound wheat he does not want at any price. Comfort sees it. The careful selection of sound wheat and the careful system of milling, with many other improvements which he has adopted, is what makes Comfort's flour so popular.

RAILROAD NOTES.

Marshall Statesman: The Michigan Central and Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railroads are evidently jealous of the new Michigan & Ohio road. They have recently informed the company that the rights given them by their charters, that of preventing railroads from crossing their line, will be strictly enforced. A most determined effort will without doubt be made by them to prevent this road from effecting a crossing. Judge Ingersoll and several other gentlemen this week made a journey to Lansing on business connected with this phase of affairs. He had in his possession a bill amending the charters of the two old companies in such a manner that, should it pass, the crossing of their lines by the Michigan & Ohio would be a comparatively easy matter. The amendment was drafted by one of the best railroad lawyers in Michigan and evidently hits the case exactly. It was introduced into the senate on Tuesday by Senator Austin and referred to the committee on railroads. Judge Ingersoll conversed with individual members of the committee and they were favorable to the bill. A large number of senators and representatives promised to use their best efforts to secure its passage. The railroads will probably fight the amendment to the best of their ability.

This is the first discovered during the present year.

T. T. Kneeland of this village has been at work for several months upon a wheat purifier, which he has obtained a patent on. This machine takes the outside skin from the kernel of wheat and leaves the berry as clean and white as candy, and the berry is not broken or cracked in the process. The invention seems to meet a long felt want in the milling business, and the inventor is likely to get rich out of it. We shall have more to say of this machine when we see it in operation.

L. F. Wheeler will return to this vicinity early in March, when it is proposed that he give his illustrated lecture on Capri, Sicily and Rome, in the opera house. This lecture was got up, "composed" when he gave his course of entertainments here last fall, and it is spoken of by Michigan and Indiana papers as being very fine and the best of its class. Since his opening season Mr. Wheeler has made many improvements and additions to his machinery for illustrating his pictures, and has received many flattering notices, and not one adverse criticism to any of the papers in the towns he has visited.

Miss Frank Tindall is at home visiting her sister, Mrs. Powers.

Officers Stevens and Smith took one Alfred Tansey to the county house yesterday. He has been at work for Mr. Morrison as a job painter, but has taken to whiskey so vigorously lately that it brought on an attack of the jim jams, and it became necessary to shut him up for a while.

TECUMSEH, FEB. 1, 1883.

D. P. Anthony & Co.:

GENTLEMEN—The Minneapolis Binder I bought of you last season has done all and more than you represented it to do. I run it one-half day without missing a single bundle from any cause. It works complete in every respect, the only improvement I can suggest would be a good umbrella over the seat, and we could take solid comfort harvesting. It beats anything in the way of a self binder that I have ever seen, and I can heartily recommend it to any farmer in need of a self binder. GEO. GRISWOLD.

The fair association committee will meet at the council building Saturday P.M. at 2 o'clock, and others are invited to meet with them, especially those who have not as yet subscribed any stock. It is not yet known how much stock has been subscribed, as reports have not been received from all the soliciting committees. But the work is in good progress, and if our men of capital half do their duty, the sum will be raised without delay. If there is anyone that has not been called upon, they can find a paper on on which to put their name at the council room Saturday, or at Lilley, Bidwell & Co's. bank at any time.

A SAD ACCIDENT.

Last Monday evening just as the hands working on the M. & O. railroad bridge were about to quit work a sad accident occurred, killing one man, and injuring four others. The gang were in the act of putting a 3x14 plank on the piles at the west end of the bridge and sawing off one of the long piles, when the irons holding the scaffolding broke, letting the timbers down. The one man on top with wonderful presence of mind caught on the pile, saving his life, or at least a fall of 25 feet. It would be impossible to give the exact position of timbers &c., but it is sufficient to say that the men were simply crushed by the timbers falling from the top of the piles to the ground. The irons broken have been used by the company four or five years, and have at many different times held up scaffolding twice the weight of this one, and do not now show any flaw other than a square, fresh break.

Chas. Floring, killed.

Fritz Rinker, leg broken and wrist sprained.

Chas. Kruzer, broken leg near hip.

Fred Tinnot, split shoulder.

Wm. Serlean, back injured.

Floring leaves a wife and three children. His remains were sent to his late home Tuesday.

The wounded men are doing as well as can be expected we learn from the doctors and will probably all recover. Every care has been taken of the wounded men, and Mr. Tillotson has worked almost night and day to do everything that could be done. The coroner's jury called the next morning over the body of Floring, gave a verdict of "death by an unforeseen accident." No one can be blamed for the accident, but this does not help the sadness of it. The men were all strangers in our community, but were hard working and industrious laborers, attending well to their work, and seemingly doing it well. The whole community were shocked at the news, which struck terror to the hearts of these poor but honest laborers.

Mrs. C. A. Tefft and daughter Ettie arrived home yesterday from a lengthy visit to their old home at Hamilton, N. Y. Wm. Bass of Lawrence, Van Buren Co., accompanied them and he will remain in town some days before returning home.

We have received a circular and pamphlet description of the St. Clair Mineral Spring and The Oakland hotel. The waters of this spring are becoming famous for their healing properties and The Oakland is a first class hotel, appointments, and the pleasant surroundings will be found pleasant for the invalid or pleasure seeker. For the asking information can address The Oakland, St. Clair, Michigan.

SOCIALITY.

In Raisin on the evening of Thursday, Feb. 27, the friends of Joseph Billmeyer and family to the number of 120 or more came in upon them by surprise, and after a good shake with each other all around, proceeded without ceremony to make themselves at home. Mr. B. has a spacious and beautiful farm house. It is the home of a wise father, a fervent mother, most lovely and charming girls who are ladies indeed, and sons, of whom both parents and daughters may well be proud. Every greeting, every grasp of the hand and every smile gave evidence of how agreeable was the surprise, and how pleasant was the occasion on the part of every one present. Friendships renewed, social chat, and preparations for tea occupied the time for an hour, when the hymn, Jesus, Lover of My Soul, was sung and prayer was offered by the Rev. Jesse Kilpatrick. After four tables twice filled, had been relieved of their burden, the company sat down to one of the very best old time visits it has ever been our pleasure to participate in, and eleven o'clock struck before a score, save the minister and his estimable wife, had left our upon the icy road for home. D. W. L.

Last week was an eventful one for the town of Tecumseh in many ways, but the one special feature of the whole week, and in fact of the late operatic season, which is now closed in Tecumseh, was the Uncle Tom's Cabin company which made a season of one night at the opera house last Friday. The first winter that our opera house was built, much against the wishes of the citizens a few plays, and others, were put on the boards of our commodious little place of amusement but since that time the managers of the house have tried to do their duty, and the event of Uncle Tom's Cabin each winter is looked for by our people with great anticipation and interest. There is not a boy ten years old in the town but what has become an expert critic of this grand old play. He can tell the exact weight of every blood hound, the age of every donkey, and the drinking propensities of every Marks that ever visited the town with a Tom's Cabin party. But the object of this article is to notify the people of Tecumseh and vicinity that the Tom's Cabin show is passed, and that in all probability no one will be allowed to see the inside of the opera house again until next season when the management, we understand have made arrangements, or attempting to form a quadruple Uncle Tom's Cabin Co., consisting of four characters of each kind, and a whole herd of donkeys and bloodhounds. Look out for it next winter, and do not make any engagement that cannot be put off from November to February. We have been also informed that if the weather is good, and some one can be induced to donate the use thereof, a piano will be furnished for the occasion and a general good time will be indulged in.

Resolutions passed by the Adrian Horticultural Society at its meeting held at Adrian Feb. 9, 1883, in regard to the late Israel Pennington.

Believing as we do that had fewer miles intervened between the home of the late Israel Pennington and this city, that he would from its first organization have been an earnest worker in our society, and knowing that he has long been one of the chief supports of the horticultural department of our County Agricultural Society, by annual and frequently very fine pomological displays, also by a willingness to labor from year to year on committees, thus bringing his ripe judgment, extensive and accurate knowledge of fruit to bear where it would render the greatest service.

Therefore be it Resolved, That in his death we realize that we have suffered a most serious loss, and that there is a gap left in our ranks that will be very difficult to fill.

2. Resolved, That as a nurseryman of over fifty years standing he has been the means of great good in widely disseminating most of the fine varieties of fruit in cultivation.

3. Resolved, That in the various relations of life he was a true type of the Christian gentleman, scrupulously honest in all his dealings, an earnest advocate and supporter of every genuine reform, and deeply in the spread and progress of Christianity.

4. Resolved, That in ordering a copy of these resolutions sent to the family, this society tenders them its sincere sympathy in this their great sorrow and bereavement.

5. Resolved, That our papers are hereby requested to publish the above resolutions, and the secretary of the State Horticultural Society to incorporate them in his report for 1883.

Other papers please copy.

The roller skating fever has struck Clinton at last.

A Good Templar's Lodge has been organized at Deerfield.

Dr. Todd of Adrian, pronounces the Seneca small pox cases to be nothing but chicken pox.

The bridge over the Bean at Morenci was badly demoralized by the breaking up of the ice last week.

The Dakota fever is again taking hold at Morenci. Some of the old folks are going west in the spring.

The Methodists of Hudson hold "tray" socials. Wonder if they have anything to do with poor dog Tray.

Bro. Aden, of the Morenci Observer, has bought a new mailing machine. He is always making improvements.

S. B. Rose of Clinton gave an interesting account in last week's News, of the railroad celebration held there 20 years ago.

Hudson Post: H. E. Palmer, the village lamp lighter, had to light out one night this week to find a door. One mouth more to feed.

The 50th anniversary of the settlement of Seneca occurs this summer, and the occasion is to be appropriately observed by a great gathering of pioneers some time in the month of June.

Blissfield Advance: Ferry out of the way, the Adrian Times now supports Willits for the U. S. Senator. Had the Times done this from the first, it would have correctly represented the Republicans of Lenawee Co.

Deerfield Record: Riley Carman and Ed. Osterhout have gone into partnership in the business of burning charcoal and intend to operate on an extensive scale the coming season. The scene of their operations is three miles northeast of this village. They shipped a car load of 2000 bushels last week, to the Lake Shore railway company, which has contracted for all they burn.

The Clinton News says: Although the profits of the lecture course this year was represented by the minus sign, yet the committee may console themselves with the reflection that they have furnished the best lecture course ever given in Clinton. And yet, we, for our part, have had enough humor in this direction and feel perfectly willing to give up our position another year to some one else who thirsts for honor.

One of Adrian's dead beats recently "bought" a load of wood, which was promptly delivered, when the d. b. confessed his inability to pay. The farmer was enraged, and prepared to load up his wood, but the beat objected. He said the wood was his, he had bought it, but had not yet paid for it, it was delivered on his property, he would not allow it to be taken away, he would pay for it when he could, and he ended by ordering the farmer off his premises. And the latter left, moneyless, woodless, but wiser.

Morenci Observer: Our readers have heard doubtless of the project of constructing a railway from Bloomington to Fayette, but latterly the scheme had come to be regarded as a mere rumor designed for a purpose, and that we should hear no more of it. A letter, however, from a gentleman in railway circles at Indianapolis informs us that the articles of association had been filed in that city for the enterprise, and that the road will be surely constructed at an early date, the project being to build the road from Bloomington to Fayette, thence using the old Canada Southern track to Detroit, making what will be known as the Detroit, Indiana & Bloomington Railway, the new enterprise being under the auspices of the Chicago, Alton & St. Louis Railway. Thus we may hope at an early day to be on one of the great thoroughfares of the nation.

Adrian Times: Isaac Lesh formerly a deputy sheriff in this county, and a resident of the town of Cambridge, was instantly killed at Whitehouse, Ohio, on Saturday. Mr. Lesh since leaving this county has been in the employ of the Wabash road, and has lived for some time in Toledo. Later he moved to Whitehouse, a small station west of Toledo, where he met his death on Saturday. He had just completed a coupling on a freight train, and stepped back when he was hit by the lightning express train, which goes through that station without a stop. His only child, a daughter, is Mrs. Elmer Howard, of Cambridge. He was a member of Addison lodge, F. & A. M., as well as the Adrian R. T. commandery.

THE REV. WM. GRANDY.

A late number of the Sioux City Times in reporting a sermon by the above reverend gentleman says:

Judged from either numerical or intellectual standpoint, the Rev. Wm. Grandy can congratulate himself in bringing out the largest and most attentive audience that has ever crowded the interior of a Sioux City church edifice, especially drawn there to listen to Sunday evening's sermon. In these waning days of Dralay church attendance it is a blessed boast of which both pastor and congregation should alike be proudly grateful that such numbers of the very best minds in Sioux City church pews should be so unmistakably interested in Presbyterian church society last night. The capacious church was crowded to full capacity.

Mr. Grandy was formerly pastor of the Presbyterian church at this village, and was greatly beloved by his congregation, and all who had the pleasure to come in social relations with him. His many friends here will be glad to learn of the appreciation of his ministerial services in the far west.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY CONVENTION.

The Republican county convention convened at Adrian on Monday last with a full attendance of delegates. Hon. John K. Boies, of Hudson, was chosen chairman, and A. W. Mills, of Tecumseh, secretary. A resolution reported by W. A. Underwood was unanimously adopted as follows:

Resolved, That the Republicans of Lenawee county, fully recognizing the high character maintained by the supreme court of this state ever since its present organization, and earnestly desiring the maintenance of that character, and fully realizing the abilities and attainments of Hon. Andrew Howell, do hereby request our delegates to the state convention to use all honorable means to secure his nomination as one of the justices of the supreme court.

The following delegates were then chosen:

Underwood, John E. Knapp, John K. Boies, Edwin Eaton, J. C. Sawyer, J. W. Norton, W. C. Moreland, Charles Brown, R. A. Watts.

The revival meetings at the Methodist church continue with unabated interest. Thirty four have already united with the church since the meetings began by letter and on profession of faith. The pastor will speak to-night on "Quench not the Spirit."

The following delegates were chosen from Tecumseh to attend the Democratic County Convention, to be held to-morrow. J. Davidson, H. H. Keyser, Alfred Sane, Horatio Kesler, James Hunt, W. R. Worden.

$300 stock have already been subscribed towards the Ladies' Library Association fund, and the remainder will soon be raised.

Dr. Rush's Medical Association: Dear Sirs: In the bottle of Dr. Rush's Consumption Specific received by express yesterday I have used nearly one bottle, and am delighted with the result. For over two years I have been troubled with sharp pain at my left side, and, upon examination, pronounced enlargement of the heart, and was unable to get any relief. The trouble grew worse, and became convinced that I could not live. While in New York City last week, I called on one of the most prominent physicians there, who put me through for an examination and then recommended your Regulator. Knowing your standing in Medical Association, and not a patent medicine scheme, I ordered the three bottles. I have not been troubled since I commenced taking the first bottle, and take the entire three bottles to make a permanent cure. You have my thanks, I am, gentlemen,

WM. G. OSBORNE.

Winning a Wife.

HOW LISTZ BECAME A SUITOR.

The following story of the marriage of Liszt, the pianist, is, if true, certainly very remarkably romantic:

Listz was at Prague in the autumn of 1846. The day after his arrival a stranger called upon him and represented himself as a brother artist in distress. Having expended all his means in an unsuccessful last appeal, and solicited his aid to enable him to return to his native Sweden, Listz gave him a purse, and, [illegible] the stranger found the jeweler's shop.

"Well, I suppose you are grateful," said the jeweler, "that I have enabled you to return to your native country."

"Indeed I am, sir," said the stranger, "and I am ready to repay the money as soon as I arrive at my native city."

"Well, I suppose you will be able to do something for your benefactor, too, when you get home?"

"Oh, yes, sir; I am a jeweler myself, and I can make a good piece of jewelry."

"Indeed! Let me see what you can do," said the jeweler, and he produced a piece of jewelry and told him that he was interested in it, and that he had promised to make a present of it to a young lady.

"Very good, sir," said the jeweler; "I think I can do it."

"Very possible," said Listz.

"But do you know what these diamonds are worth, and how they are mounted?"

"Such is the letter of the law to which I agree then."

"Why, [illegible] I can give you a receipt."

"My word is sufficient," said Listz.

"Then take a seat," said the jeweler.

"No," said Listz, "I have only to [illegible] my fingers to get as much money as I want."

"Then you are a sorcerer!" said the jeweler.

"I will show you the kind of sorcery that I employ," said Listz.

Seeing a piano in the back parlor of the jeweler's shop, the eccentric artist sat down to it and began to improvise a ravishing air. A beautiful young lady made her appearance, and at the close of the performance exclaimed, "Bravo, Listz!"

"You know him, then?" said the jeweler to his daughter.

"I have never seen him before," she said; "but there is no one in the world but Listz who can produce such sounds from the piano."

The jeweler was satisfied, the stranger was released and relieved, the report of Listz being in the city flew, and he was waited on and feted by the nobles, who besought him to give a concert in their city. The jeweler, seeing the homage that was paid to the man of genius, was anxious to form an alliance with him, and said to him:

"How do you find my daughter?"

"Adorable!" was the reply.

"What do you think of marriage?" continued the jeweler.

"Well enough to try it," said Listz.

"What do you say to a dowery of three million francs?" he was next asked.

"I will accept it, and thank you too," was the reply.

"Well, my daughter likes you and you like her, the dowery is ready. Will you be my son-in-law?" said the jeweler.

"Gladly," replied Listz, and the marriage was celebrated the following week.

From Cause to Effect.

The rational look of the world is denied by no one. Eyes look as if they were made to see with. Ears as if they were made to hear with. Legs look as if they were made to walk with. The nutritive apparatus looks as if it were made to keep the body in repair. The lungs look as if they were made to aerate the blood; and the blood-vessels as if made with an eye to their actual functions. And in general, science everywhere assumes that nature is rational, and that everything is adapted to everything else. We must remember that science is and regards observation; but is it right to draw conclusions from the observations? Science aims by the aid of reasoning to pass behind the phenomena and form some conception of the supersensible realities upon which appearances are based. But it enters into this hidden world only by thought; and it implicitly assumes, therefore, that the laws of thought are valid for all being. Science, then, is built upon the notion that the real is rational and intelligible; and it aims to grasp the rational system which is in things. If we should assume that the real is irrational, and mutinous, all our science would perish. What would become of astronomy if we assume that the flying planet is governed by irrational principles of motion? The atomic theory and other theory are no facts of observation, but only rational inferences from phenomena. But if the real is not rational, of course these and all other scientific theories fail to be grounded. We conclude, then, that there is a kind look of nature which realizes in nature its long conceived plans and purposes.

A Woman's Glove.

A woman's glove is to her what a vest pocket is to a man. But it is more capacious, and, in the case of ten it is much better regulated. A man will carry $20 in small change, four matches, half a dozen toothpicks, a short pencil, and other things, and yet not be able to find a nickel, or a match, or a toothpick or a pencil or a card when he wants it. Not so with a woman. She has the least bit of a glove, and in that she carries the tiniest hand, and a wad of bills, and the memorandum for her intended purchase of dry goods, and her tickets, and mainee checks, and maybe a diminutive powder-bag. We have no idea how she does it—how she manages to squeeze those thousand and one things into that wee space. But she does it every time, and the glove never looks the least distended or ruffled. And when a woman wants any article concealed about that glove, she doesn't seem to have the least trouble in the world getting at it. All required is a simple turn of the wrist, the disappearance of fairy fingers, and the desired article is brought to light. It is a wonderful manual we can explain.

The industrious bee does not stop to complain that there are so many poisonous flowers and thorny branches in the road, but buzzes on, selecting the honey where she can find it and passing by the place where it is not.

Position of the Body in Sleeping.

Position affects sleep. A constrained or uncomfortable posture will often prevent repose. Lying flat on one's back with the limbs relaxed would seem to secure the greatest amount of rest to the muscular system. This is the position assumed in the most exhausting diseases, and it is generally indicative of a token of revival when a patient voluntarily changes the posture, [illegible] which implies an endurance sleep. JAMIE.

Father, where is our Jamie to-night—
Jamie so bold and gay?
The twilight shadows are falling now
Why does he stay away?
Jamie is handsome and manly too,
And he will be good and great;
But, father, why is our darling boy
Staying away so late?

Our Jamie boy is a child no more
He has grown to man's estate;
He has gone a-courting Minnie Gray
The reason he stays so late;
For her golden hair and eyes of blue
Have stolen his heart away;
And he goes in the twilight to meet his love
A-[illegible] Minnie Gray.

Why does the shadow save has gone
Night is fast growing on;
And we cannot find Minnie Gray
Our boy has never gone yet
The good lad never have spent a night
Have loved him all his years;
Who traveled him along the path of life
Starting his mother night tears.

But, Minnie, [illegible]
And you a maiden fair and sweet
That you stole my heart away
I had a father old and gray,
And a mother kind and true.
When I saw the fondly all by the
But my heart went out to you.

A blush crept o'er her wilfered cheek,
Her eyes shone clear and mild;
No longer she chided the lovely maiden
For wooing away her child.
She thought of the long ago, when she Stood close by her lover's side,
In the little church, and the man of God
Made her a happy bride.

A NIGHT OF PERIL.

THRILLING STORY OF PIONEER LIFE.

It was my fortune, some time since, to take a trip in one of the splendid floating palaces which wind their way daily up and down the Ohio river, and carry their living and commercial freight so safely and speedily, in comfort and pleasure, to their destination.

That it was not always so, I was reminded by a story which I heard from an old gentleman who was a fellow-passenger, and whose acquaintance I pleasantly formed on deck; and, finding him to be a relative of a Kentucky family with whom I was on intimate terms, I accepted his story as entirely reliable, and will give it, as nearly as I can, in his own words:

"It must have been nearly a hundred years ago, not later anyhow than 1800," said Mr. Hobart, "that my grandfather, Horace Hobart, settled, where the city of Frankfort now lies—it was a mere hamlet then. He was the owner of a flat boat, so the settlers called him Cap'n Hobart, and used to hire him to make trips down the river, for supplies for the settlement. He sometimes used, to go as far as Pittsburg, and bring powder, lead and groceries, very often stock or a small company of emigrants and their plunder, to points along the shore.

One trip he made—if I remember rightly it was about 1803 or 1804, in the fall of the year—of which he carried the marks to his grave. His cargo that time was mostly of powder, lead for bullets, and cured bacon—a very desirable prize to the Indians who were lurking up and down the shore. At Pittsburgh he met a party of half a dozen emigrants for Central Kentucky, who gladly availed themselves of the opportunity to go as far as Frankfort on Captain Hobart's flat-boat.

Well laden, the little party, among whom were two women, sat out on the return voyage, going on prosperously a great part of the way. Capt. Hobart knew that the danger lay between the Big Sandy and Kentucky rivers.

After passing the mouth of the Big Sandy, it would be necessary to proceed cautiously until they left the Indiana shore and turned into the Kentucky river, where they would be comparatively safe.

Nothing occurred, however, for some days. The weather was glorious, the river smooth, and they were enjoying the trip very much, when, one morning, two men hailed them from the shore.

'What's wanted?' demanded Capt. Hobart.

'Want to go down the river. Land, and take us on board,' was the answer.

'Are there only two of you?' shouted Capt. Hobart.

'That's all. We'll be no trouble. Pull in, and get us!' the men shouted back, evidently growing impatient.

'But Capt. Hobart knew where he was and meant to be careful. He turned to one of his boatmen, an old fellow called Osage Jo, who had spent his life in that region, and was thoroughly trusty.

'What say, Jo?' asked Captain Hobart.

'Don't like it Cap'n,' said Jo, leaning on his paddle. 'Nothin' but a decoy, to my notion.'

'To mine, too,' said Capt. Hobart. 'I'd hate to leave them, if I thought they were honest'—

'They look like rascals from here, Cap'n, says Jo. 'Them woods, liker'n not, are full o' Indians, and we've got weemin aboard. Won't do, Cap'n.'

'No, Jo, we won't risk it.' Capt. Hobart then shouted to the men:

'You'll have to wait for the next boat. We're full.'

The flat-boat passed on, leaving the men making profane exhibition of anger on the shore—a proof that they were not what they claimed to be.

The travelers proceeded very watchfully and cautiously down the river, but saw no signs of trouble until near sunset.

They were passing a very thickly wooded spot when two men, carrying a third between them, came down to the shore and hailed the boat.

'Haloo!' answered Capt. Hobart.

'Come in and take us on board!' was the next call.

'What is the matter?' shouted the Captain.

'Got a man hurt here. Want to get him up to the Forks. Come and help us.'

Capt. Hobart took out his pocket telescope, hauled it up to his eye, and took a look through.

'It's the two we met this morning,' he cried.

'I thought so!' chuckled Jo, close beside him.

'Well, they won't trap me,' said Capt. Hobart, and then he shouted lustily, 'Can't stop for you!' and ordered his men to help the drift all they could with their paddles.

'Cap'n,' says Jo, take a look through your glasses at that clump o' beeches. What's under 'em?'

The Captain looked, as directed, where the trees hung far over, and the bank was in deep shadow.

'What dy'e make?' eagerly asked Jo.

'It looks like an old flat-boat, but I can't surely make out. So, if they've got a boat, we'er in a bad fix.'

'Fact, Cap'n! An its goin' to be a moonlight night, full moon, an' coming up airly. Weemin aboard too.'

'Well, Jo, we'll prepare for 'em, and then run our best. It's all we can do.'

As if to prove that their suspicions were correct, an arrow was hurled, at them from the shore, falling short of its mark, which was, probably, the tall form of Capt. Hobart, as he stood boldly up in his boat.

This decided him. He called together the men—including the emigrants, there were only eight men, all told—directed the women to lie flat down in the bottom of the boat, and made all the preparations he could for a fight, in case it came.

Night did not need to wait very long. Even before the moon was fully risen, they could see that the woods were full of moving, painted, half-naked forms, and heard yells which could come from none but an Indian throat.

Keeping a careful watch, they could see [illegible] moving upon the water, and, as it drew nearer, they saw that it was a flat-boat filled with Indians.

'It must be the old thing that used to tie up at Port Mason,' (a little station on the coast) says Jo. 'If it is we kin sink 'em!'

'Wait till they get near, men,' said the Captain, 'and then aim low, and give them the first fire.'

Breathlessly the men crouched in the end of the boat, near which the Indians were rapidly drawing. As soon as they came within rifle-range, eight bullets sped at the word of command, and made havoc among the pursuers.

Shouts and groans followed, and the savages poured forth a fierce volley into the little group. One of the three horses was killed—there were three on the boat—but not a man fell.

'Load! quick!' ordered the Captain.

Swiftly and silently his order was obeyed; not too swift, for the Indian boat was steadily drawing nearer and nearer.

Another volley, and three of the pursuers tumbled overboard, but as they returned the fire one of the emigrants dropped, groaning, at his post.

'Steady! and quick! Fire in succession!' ordered the captain. 'They aim too low! Disable 'em before they can board us!'

The bows of the two boats almost grated together, and one daring savage sprang upon the flat-boat's gunwale.

Capt. Hobart sprung forward, but before he could raise his rifle, a shot went through his shoulder.

He staggered, but, with desperate courage, rallied and fired, his adversary falling backward and over into the river.

Maddened at this, for the assailing Indian was their leader, the Indians made a rush to the craft. In the impetuosity of their onset, the old, unseaworthy thing capsized, and the swift current of the Ohio was full of struggling, screaming, wounded and drowning savages.

The violence of the shock gave the other boat a sheer which sent it off directly into the middle of the river, and drifted it rapidly down, too far from the shore for any danger from lurkers on the bank, and safe from its terrible pursuers.

A great shout of joy at their deliverance rose up from the little crew, at least from all who were able to shout. Capt. Hobart lay senseless in the bottom of the boat, one man was dead, and three others badly wounded, leaving but three unhurt, to care for the rest.

With the help of the two brave women, who had not uttered one cry during the fight, they did this, and, after their arrival at home, the three men recovered, as did Capt. Hobart.

But Capt. Hobart carried to his grave a shoulder scarred with the bullet received in that fierce fight on the Ohio."

Loving Home.

Nothing to us appears so beautiful in human experience as the reciprocal affection of parents and children, especially after the latter have attained maturity, and, it may be, formed new relations in life. We love even the loving and lovely daughter, or she had become a wife and mother, seize every opportunity of visiting the parental home, to lavish her affectionate attention upon her parents, and, by a thousand graceful and tender kindnesses, assure them that though she was an idolized wife and happy mother, her heart still clave with ever strengthening fervor to father and mother who watched over her infancy and guided her youth. It has been our privilege to know such, and as we have witnessed the outpourings of love and happiness between these devoted and glowing hearts, we have felt that surely much of heaven might be enjoyed here if all families were equally attached. And would that every daughter knew what pure joy she might create in the parental bosom by a constant keeping alive of the spirit of filial devotion, and seizing frequent opportunities to make it manifest in little acts of gentleness and love, notwithstanding the child may have become a parent. It is always the same dear child, and never so dear as when it keeps up the childish confidence and love of its earliest youth.

Breaking off Bad Habits.

To break off bad habits, understand the reason and all the reasons why the habit is injurious. Study the subject until there is no lingering doubt in your mind. Avoid the places, the persons and the thoughts that lead to the temptation. Frequent the place, associate with the persons, indulge in thoughts that lead away from the temptation. Keep busy; idleness is the strength of bad habits. Do not give up the struggle when you have broken your resolution once, twice, a thousand times. That only shows how much need there is for you to strive. When you have broken your resolution, just think the matter over and endeavor to understand why it is you failed, so that you may be on your guard against a recurrence of the same circumstances. Do not think that it is an easy thing that you have undertaken. It is folly to expect to break off a bad habit in a day which may have been gathering for long years.

Borax water will instantly remove all soils and stains from the hands, and heal all scratches and chafes. To make it, put some crude borax into a large bottle, and fill with water. When the borax is dissolved, add more to the water until at last the water can absorb no more and a residuum remains at the bottom of the bottle. To the water in which the hands are to be washed after gardening, pour from this bottle enough to make it very soft. It is very cleansing and healthy. By its use the hands will be kept in excellent condition—soft, smooth and white.

A Positive Cure.

A certain, safe and speedy cure for this disease has been discovered. A single application of Dr. Deming's Wonderful Remedy will convince the patient of its miraculous power of healing. With the first application suffering is practically at an end, and the sufferer is well started on the road to recovery. For sale by all druggists.

Miscellaneous Recipes.

Peach Cake.—Bake three layers of sponge cake, cut ripe peaches into very thin slices; prepare some sweet cream by whipping, sweetening and flavoring it; spread the peaches, with the cream poured over, between each layer, as also over the top of the cake.

Johnny Cake.—To half a pint of meal add warm water enough to make a thin batter, half a teaspoonful of melted butter, half a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, a little soda and salt. If convenient, add an egg. This makes an excellent cake, and to those who have more than allowance of milk and cream it will prove a great help.

Meat Pie for Tea.—Given a dish of a baking dish, with dry bread crumbs, then alternate layers of cold sliced roast or boiled mutton and sliced tomatoes, with a thin sprinkling of bread crumbs. Season each layer of tomatoes with pepper, salt, and bits of butter. Let the tomatoes and bread crumbs be last. Three quarters of an hour.

Tomato Sauce.—Twelve large ripe tomatoes, four ripe or three green peppers, [illegible] tablespoonfuls of salt, two of sugar, one of cinnamon, and three cups of vinegar. Peel tomatoes and onions, chop all fine, and boil one and a half hours. Bottle, and it will keep any length of time. One quart of canned tomatoes may be used instead of the ripe ones.

Sponge Cake.—This is the most perfect of sponge cakes when properly made. Ingredients: Ten eggs, one pound of pulverized sugar, half a pound of flour, juice of half a large lemon, with the rind grated. After all the ingredients are quite ready—i. e., the flour and sugar sifted, the lemon-peel grated, the half-lemon squeezed and the tins buttered—the success of the cake is the beating of the eggs. Two persons should beat them at least half an hour, one beating the whites, and the other the yolks and half of the sugar together. Next put the yolks into the whites, then stir in lightly the remainder of the sugar, then the flour and lemon by degrees. The oven heat should be rather moderate at first. Much of the success depends upon this, as the batter should be evenly heated throughout before it begins to rise. When baked, spread over the cake a wafer thickness of icing, slightly flavored with vanilla. Do not try to make half the quantity of cake.

Fried Chicken.—Prepare your chicken by cutting it in small pieces, have ready frying-pan with a few slices of salt fat pork, frying until the fat is extracted, but not brown; have your chicken rolled in fine cracker crumbs, lay them in the frying pan, keeping your pan covered to keep the steam close. When tender let them brown nicely, then take them from the pan and put them upon the platter. Pour into the gravy left in the frying pan a cup of milk, (cream is better,) thicken with a spoonful of flour, boil up and pour over the chicken; add salt and pepper.

Popular Education.

Accepting this as a fundamental maxim, that "Whatever should enter into the life of a nation should be taught in the public schools," let us consider some "things that enter into the life of a prosperous people.

Man lives not by bread alone; and the culture of the heart only ensures a perfect life, either of an individual or of a nation. Hence, the schools of a country should not be irreligious or godless. Both by precept and example the principles of religion should be taught. The highest standard of morals should be enforced. None but men and women of the noblest character and purest life should be allowed to teach the youth. If religion and morality are to enter into the complex life of the nation, they must not be banished from the public schools.

If a nation prospers, industry, frugality and economy must enter into its life. Hence, these old-fashioned virtues should have a place in the schools. The young should be taught that an education fits them for work, not to live without work. In school, the young man should learn the value of time, and should be taught how to fill up the days and the years, as they pass, with profitable industry or substantial enjoyment; for true living is what is enjoyed, whether it be in the gratification of the present, or for that in the future which promises an enjoyment that more than counterbalances the self-denial of the present. Let the youth in our schools be taught that labor is Heaven's great ordinance for human improvement, and the prosperity of the nation cannot be checked by senseless theories of finance. Frugality, as opposed to useless expenditure of money, should be inculcated. This must be mainly done by the state, in its expenditure of money for the erection of school buildings, in the cost of text-books, and in the general management of the schools. This should not descend to a niggard parsimony; but when, with borrowed money, school-houses are erected and furnished with an elegance far beyond that which is found in the homes of the people, is it not an encouragement to the young men of the state to go beyond their own means to build homes for themselves, provided they have a little credit?

Hints About Water.

No water that has stood in open vessels during the night should be used for drinking or cooking. By exposure to the air it has lost its "aeration," and has absorbed many of the dust germs floating in the apartment. If convenience requires water to be kept in vessels for several hours before use, it should be covered, unless the vessels are tight. Wherever it is practicable, all distributing reservoirs should be covered. Filtering adds to the purity of water. Drinking water should never be taken from lakes or rivers on a low level. Surface water, or water in lakes, pools or rivers, which receive the surface wash, should be avoided as much as possible. Do not drink much water at a time. More than two tumblerfuls should not be taken at a meal. Do not drink between meals unless to quench thirst, as excess of water weakens the gastric juice and overworks the kidneys. Excessive potations, whether of water or other fluid, relax the stomach, impair its secretions and paralyze its movements. By drinking a little at a time all injury is avoided.

The Sandwich Island alphabet has 12 letters; the Burmese, 15; the Italian, 20; the Bengalese, 21; the Hebrew, Syriac, Chaldee and Samaritan, 22 each; the French, 23; the Greek, 24; the Latin, 25; the German, Dutch and English 26 each; the Spanish 27; the Arabic, 28; the Persian, 31; the Russian, 41; the Sanscript, 50; the Ethiopic, 202.

Libraries.

Everything considered, the newspaper is the best and most available of libraries. The one fact of cheapness is so strongly in its favor as to overbalance the majority of arguments that can be advanced upon the opposite side. It is within the reach of every one, no matter how poor, and finds an entrance where books (as a rule) never can; it comes weekly, and is read and loaned until actually worn out; can be caught up if one has but a moment of time, and some knowledge can be gained. A single, brief item frequently gives what pages of book-bound matter would have to be waded through to learn; for the newspaper is the chronicle of the entire world. In the brief space of a column space all that is necessary to the correct understanding is given—to such perfection has the art of condensation been brought.

The newspaper with the present facilities for almost learning what is transpiring in every portion of the habitable globe, is the reflection of the heart, busy as it is with all [illegible] and the South, the East, and the West are brought together. We grow giddy in the whirling of the tide and the chilling heat of the sun; we are with the daring explorers seeking for the north pole; travel through the jungles of Africa; have a bird's eye view of great battles; sail over every sea, dive with the whale to its fabulous depths; are present in the parliament of nations; listen to the last words of an expiring pope, and take by the hand his successor.

A wonderful, concise, most skilfully painted panorama of the affairs of the world is the newspaper; a map of its busy life; a faithful reproduction of all its lights and shadows, and at the most nominal cost; at the merest bagatelle to books, even in these days of exceptional cheapness. Week after week the paper comes filled with all that is rare, new, interesting and instructive. It is a history of nations in fifty-two volumes; an ever continued encyclopedia of trade, science, biography, agriculture and the arts; is the "boiling down" of all books in so minute a form that the mind can grasp at a single glance, and be saved the wading through ponderous volumes of uninteresting detail—to the great saving of time. It is, in fact, the grandest of all circulating libraries, at only a penny fee; the throwing open to the public of all the costly and exclusive archives of the world.

The newspaper of to-day is a perfect omnium gatherum. Nothing escapes its notice. Every event of importance is instantly photographed upon its pages. The whispers breathed in every clime are caught and fixed. It is a marvel of intelligence; is the stereotype of every mind. We look back in wonder at the days when it was not, and human intelligence shudders to think of the barbarism and ignorance and superstition that would follow the blotting out of this the sun of the solar system.

Not a single word would we say against books. Multiply them as much as possible; there can never be too many; the world can never have too much of light; but as the grandest, and cheapest, and widest circulating medium of intelligence—as libraries for mankind, they never can compare with newspapers.

What the Farm Should Be.

The farm should be not merely a place where men subsist and rear families, says the Connecticut Farmer, in the strictest economy, starving the soul to add a few more acres to the eighty or hundred already owned, and which, too, may be, are not thoroughly cultivated—but a home speaking of plenty, a home rich in attractions, buildings well kept, shade and ornamental trees, lawns with walks and flowering shrubs, not forgetting the furnished parlor and library. The newspaper, magazine, pictures and music, poets and history should be here. True, the farmer's home is of necessity a busy place, but it should not be all kitchen and dairy, not all scythe and plow, not all an endless routine of treadmill duties, but where the farmer and his wife could find some time each day to mingle with books and in conversation. Away from the bustle and the clatter of the town, it should be the place to grow large in judgment and fine in taste. One of the most hopeful indications of progress is the position occupied by farmers, and the growing respect manifest toward them. For practical, moral and æsthetical culture, farmers' children have superior advantages.

The hills and forests, with their brooks and rocks, afford ample facilities for the study of botany, geology and natural history. Nowhere do the heavens appear so broad, or do the constellations offer greater attractions to the would-be astronomer than upon the hill-tops in summer, or when under the beautiful snow the earth lies buried at our feet. That these opportunities are appreciated, is seen in the demand for agricultural colleges in all our states.

It is not to be lamented that all of the graduates of these colleges do not go back to the farm upon which they were reared. Many of them become manufacturers, merchants, lawyers, journalists, doctors and ministers, carrying into the town the practical good sense and thrift that purifies, and into rural districts, with professional or mercantile business, inspiration to active social intercourse that overcomes reserve.

So each year the distance between town and rural life is lessening, the one getting more the scent of the clover, the fields, and the free, pure air which plays around the mountain top, the other more the culture and refinement of the city.

Moral and Religious

There can be no better help against our own sins, than to help our neighbor in the encounter with his.

There shall be no night there in that beautiful land. While many of us are now looking out of our western windows toward the setting sun, it is eventide, and the soft clouds throw their thin shadows now and then over the face of the sky as day drops slowly out of sight and only twilight remains. The sun of life is going down. But see, to-morrow the sun will rise on a new scene. That is not the scene of a sunset but a glorious rising of a heavenly morning. Afflicted, tired, aged pilgrim, looking at the setting sun, just turn your eyes of faith. See what scenes of beauty shine through the new east window. If the shadows are a little dark along the river, the angel of hope holds its lamp and lights up our pathway. Yes, blessed be God! we have the promise that "at evening time it shall be light."

Dean Swift is responsible for this: "When men grow virtuous in their old age, they are merely making a sacrifice to God of the de[illegible] savings."

Chloroforming Animals.

In all operations, lasting any length of time, humanity demands the use of an anæsthetic, not only in the case of the horse, but in all our domestic animals. Besides, many delicate operations can be easily and securely performed when perfect quiet is demanded of the patient, as for instance, in operations upon the eye, within the mouth, gullet, windpipe, or other parts of the head, as well as the body and limbs. The safe administration of chloroform to the lower animals lies in allowing an equal proportion of atmospheric air with the vapor of the anæsthetic. If this is forced in the process, death ensues either from paralysis of the heart, coma, or apoplexy. Operations of the glottis by mechanical means, Anæsthetics should not be used in cases where disease of the lungs and pleura is known to exist, or to animals affected with degeneration of the lungs. As most animals become completely wild, when the effects of the inhalation commences to let upon the brain, it will become necessary, or the act, to first have them secured, and preferably in a recumbent position, so that they can not get loose. A convenient and inexpensive mode of administering chloroform to the horse or other animals consists in holding a sponge saturated with the fluid to one of the nostrils. Care should be taken to guard the skin of the nose and lips from its irritating properties, by smearing these parts with oil or glycerine. At the commencement, the sponge should be held at a small distance from the nose. As the animal gets more and more under the influence, it should be approached to the nose, but it is imperatively necessary that there should be a free admission of atmospheric air. In order to confine the vapors, a light cloth should be thrown loosely over the hands of the operator at the beginning. From two to four ounces of chloroform are generally sufficient, unless the operation to be performed is of a protracted nature. The size of sponge to be used for the larger animals should not be smaller than two closed fists. It should be soft and slightly moist from being squeezed with clean cold water, and it will be sufficient to pour about two ounces of chloroform on it to begin with. As soon as the animal allows a finger to be placed upon the eyelids, the operation is to be proceeded with as dexterously as possible, during which an assistant should hold the sponge, and only apply it from time to time, to keep up the required insensibility. Really, the administration of the anæsthetic should form the whole duty of one person, who must also carefully watch the respiration. If the breathing becomes feeble, and particularly the inspirations loud, or there are premonitory signs of suffocation, etc., the sponge must be quickly withdrawn.—Prairie Farmer.

Health Hints.

A Frenchman has discovered that the severest attack of neuralgia can be relieved by directing a stream of water from a force-pump against the part affected.

To cure a felon, as soon as the parts begin to swell, wrap the part affected with a cloth thoroughly saturated with tincture of lobelia, and the felon is dead. An old physician says he knows it to have cured scores of cases, and it never fails if applied in season.

Diphtheria has been very prevalent in Australia, and one of the most successful remedies said to have been a few drops of sulphuric acid in a tumblerful of water. The result of this mixture is said to be a coagulation of the diphtheritic membrane and its ready removal by coughing.

When the voice is lost, as is sometimes the case, from the effects of cold, a simple, pleasant remedy is furnished by beating up the white of one egg, adding to it the juice of one lemon, and sweetening with white sugar to taste. Take a teaspoonful from time to time. It has been known to effectually cure the ailment.

To cure a cough, roast a lemon very carefully without burning it; when it is thoroughly hot, cut and squeeze into a cup upon three ounces of sugar, finely powdered. Take a spoonful whenever your cough troubles you. It is as good as it is agreeable to the taste. Rarely has it been known to fail of giving relief.

A sure cure for soft corns is to dip a bit of soft linen rag into turpentine and wrap it around the soft corn; wet the corn in it night and morning, and in a few days the corn will have disappeared. But the relief to the throbbing, burning pain comes almost immediately after the first or second application. Wear cotton between the toes, and the corns will not reappear.

The Gazette Medicale of France says that by an accident charcoal has been discovered to be a cure for burns. By laying a piece of cold charcoal upon a burn, the pain subsides immediately. By leaving the charcoal on one hour, the wound is healed, as has been demonstrated on several occasions. The remedy is cheap and simple, and certainly deserves a trial.

We have tried many experiments to induce sleep. The very best method we have yet discovered is that of counting. Breathe deeply and slowly (without any straining effort,) and with every respiration count one, two, three, etc., up to a hundred. Some persons will be asleep before they count fifty in this manner. Others will count ten, twenty, or thirty, and then forget themselves and cease counting. Very few persons can count a hundred and find themselves awake; but should this happen, repeat the dose until cured.

A lady who has been spending the summer at Lake Chautauqua says that on one of the steamers that pass Fair Point, at the time when the great Sabbath-school convention was in progress, were three women, rather gaudily dressed and wearing diamonds enough to indicate they had plenty of money. Their conversation was carried on in a loud voice, and attracted considerable attention. In front of Fair Point stands a statue of Faith. "See that piece of statoowary," said number one. "I wonder who it is. It must be Jupiter." "No" said number two, "it looks more like Venus." "Well," said number three, "anyway it's one of those people in the Bible."

To destroy the vitality of weed seeds in soil by baking will in a great measure destroy the fertility of the soil. A better way is to spread the soil out thinly in a warm place and keep it moist. In a few days most of the seeds will germinate, after which the soil should be stirred and allowed to become dry.

Setting Out Strawberries.

The best time for setting out strawberries is the last of August, or early September. Currants, gooseberries and raspberries are best planted in the spring. The most popular strawberries are Wilson's Albany, Triomphe de Gand, Seconds, Monarch of the West, Champion, Sciopline, Crescent, Sharpless and Cumberland. The four last mentioned are new, but very promising, and all will do to try. The best currant is Versailles, the old red. Dutch with good cultivation is excellent; the white grape is a good variety; the cherry is a great bearer, but a poor cooker; there is no good cherry which will stand out the summers without mildewing. The English varieties are the worst in this respect. A good American variety is Lucas's Seedling. Of raspberries, the Philadelphia, Clark, Antwerp and Highland Hardy, all American varieties are good, but need laying down in the winter for protection.

Madagascar.

Although Madagascar is known to be the third largest island in the world its actual size and extent is not generally understood. It is easy to see how misconception on this point arises, for in maps the island is usually seen only in connection with Africa, and that great continent is so large that it dwarfs by comparison with itself everything in its near neighborhood, so that the really large island sheltering under its south-eastern side appears but an inconsiderable appendage to its vast neighbor. If, however, we take a good-sized map of Madagascar, and put by its side the outline, to the same scale, of another country with whose dimensions we are familiar, such, for instance, as England we begin to realize how important an island it is as regards size, being nearly 1,000 miles long by about 250 in average breadth, so that it is nearly four times as large as England and Wales.

Persons wishing a loaf of that good home made bread are glad to learn that they can obtain it by calling at the News office.

The protracted meetings continue to hold forth at the Baptist church.

Geo. Woodward of Rome, and Geo. Marshall of Tecumseh, were in town Monday.

John Ed. McCollum is seen again on our streets, but we have been unable to learn whether he has come to stay or not.

Burt Tate went to Manchester—so did Dave Woodward (?) Burt Tate is back in Miller's store, after one-half day's counter jumping in a dry goods store up there. Who knows which of the two stayed the longest? We don't.

Robbin Red Breast is here for sure.

Geo. P. Wright of Bridgewater, formerly of Tecumseh, is laid up with rheumatism.

Frank Lancaster is on the sick list.

Mrs. Pomeroy, who has been very sick, is on the gain.

Mrs. O'Brien, sister of Dr. A. F. Tuttle, is at the residence of Dr. John Tuttle very low.

Minnie Pomeroy, formerly of Tecumseh, has been quite sick, but we are glad to learn is on the gain.

W. W. Fraser of Tecumseh, was registered at the Silvers House Tuesday.

John S. Clark died on Tuesday night. Mr. Clark was one of the oldest settlers of Clinton, a much respected citizen, a kind husband and father, a generous friend to the poor, and will be very much missed. He was a brother of Mrs. Dr. A. F. Tuttle of Clinton, and Mrs. E. G. Cook of Tecumseh, who, together with his wife and three children, two sons and one daughter, and friends unnumbered, are left to mourn his sudden departure. Although not a communicant, we believe him to have been one that never wearied in well doing, and it will be his to reap the reward promised to those that faint not.

Rev. J. Smith, of Deerfield, the venerable father of E. J. Smith, of the Adrian Record, died last week.

THE RAISIN SCHOOLS.

In a letter from Raisin the Educational News has these items about the schools of that township:

Schools in Raisin are jogging on about as usual, being necessarily small during the cold wave. Miss McMeekin, in district No. 6, reported six on Monday and eight on Tuesday, January 22d and 23d. Miss Gertie Roath, of Raisin, who is teaching at Adrian Center, had only two on each of those days. Miss Clara Kinney is still teaching in the Lovett district with great success, also Miss Willitts, from Hillsdale, who is teaching in fractional district at the Valley. We wish all of our schools had so good a reputation, and it seems as if it were optional with the teachers to have them so.

Miss Celia Jones is still teaching in the Comfort district and is another of our faithful and worthy teachers.

The Valley sends out another teacher this winter, Miss Kate Southworth, who is teaching in the Kinney district in Madison.

The school in district No. 6, has changed text books this term, and are now using Harper's series.

Evening News: It has cost the state of Michigan about $20,000 to elect a senator. It has also cost private individuals many thousands of dollars. These things sound high, but we must have our

The March number of Harper's Magazine is a beautiful and entertaining number. The frontispiece engraving is from George H. Boughton's picture, "The Burgomaster's Daughter." William Henry Bishop contributes a paper entitled, "Across Arizona," which is attractively illustrated. Geo. H. Boughton continues his Holland papers with a fresh and quaint description of Friesland, illustrated by his own drawings and those of F. A. Abbey.

About Poisons.

"Poison. A substance which, when taken into the stomach, mixed with the blood, or applied to the skin or flesh, proves fatal or deleterious; any thing infectious or malignant." Our scissors make the first clip out of Webster for a definition of the greatest evil as well as the greatest good in the material world. For after the fashion of the old saying, "It takes a thief to catch a thief," in physic science, as in the mightiest system, if one poison has stolen away into the network of veins by fair means or foul, there is small hope of recovering one's own, save another poison be sent after it.

All medicines seem to be more or less poisonous, owing to the large dose of those classed under the head of poisons, death or even deleterious effects may accrue to the most of people, apparently harmless; for example, saltpetre, opium, chloroform, mercury, and perhaps a few other popular remedies cover all, to them, dangerous poisons. Yet we read in a daily paper of a child which the usual remedies failed to check, ending in exhaustion and death; and the cause is laid to a few lumps of saltpetre in the grocer's counter where the boy bought his candies and cakes flavored with bitter almond.

"The bitter almond is a powerful poison." A single drop of the essential oil on a cat's tongue made a dead pussy of a living one in just five minutes by experiment. Some delicate organizations, especially among children, can bear but little of this essence, the smallest quantity producing an eruption like nettle rash, if nothing worse, and yet macaroons are eaten and given to children to eat with impunity, while confectioners use it every washday, using not the bitter almond, but the essential oil for their flavoring. There is a "family connection" between the bitter and sweet almond, how close is not easily defined, but sufficient to show that to some persons the sweet not on our tables is often productive of the effect similar to that caused by the bitter almond.

"Fish poison is one of the most singular in all the range of toxicology." Certain kinds of fish in hot countries are looked upon as always poisonous to peculiar constitutions, and perhaps depending somewhat on the climate. The richer sort of vertebrate fish, though usually eaten with perfect safety by mankind in general, are nevertheless poisonous, either at all times or occasionally to peculiar individuals. This fact is self-evident to many of us who have experienced nausea after eating white fish, salmon, lobster, etc., at one time or another, and instinct is wise when it heeds the hint and declines the poison in the future.

Lead poisoning we are more familiar with, as some members of our household are more susceptible than others to the injurious effects of water run through lead pipes. But the poison in this case, acting slowly and safely, is usually classed "malaria." Those who work in lead mines or in any way with lead and absorb its fine dust into their system, except by the greatest care, sooner or later have what in general phraseology is called printers' or painters' palsy. The habits of children to bite and wet their lead pencils is often followed by serious results, which are more likely to be traced to a close school room and hard study, than to the lead pencils, slate pencils and chalk they have munched on at short intervals five days out of the seven.

Another of the every-day poisons is found in the syrup which is a leading feature of our American tea table.

"The use of chloride of tin in glucose syrups has been proved by numerous analyses." Think of that, oh you who indulge in "golden drip" and "maple syrup" on cold, wintry mornings on your hot cakes. Beware of any syrup that leaves a metallic taste in the mouth lest by means of the sweet liquid your stomach gets a tin lining, and you wondering why on earth you have developed dyspepsia, conclude it must be hot cakes disagree with you. And if the said cakes are made of the raising—easy stuff called baking-powder—very likely the disagreement can, in part, be laid to them, for analysis has also shown that baking-powder contains a large proportion of desiccated alum.

Women Eyeing Women.

The eyeing of women by women is one of the most offensive manifestations of superfiluousness now to be met with in society. Few observant persons can have failed to notice the manner in which one woman not perfectly well-bred or perfectly kind-hearted will eye another woman who she thinks is not in such good society, and, above all, not at the time in so costly a dress as she herself is in. It is done everywhere—at parties, at church, in the street. It is done by women in all conditions in life. The servant girls learn it of their mistresses. It is done in an instant. Who cannot recall hundreds of instances of that sweep of the eye which takes in at a glance the whole woman and what she has on, from top-knot to shoe tie? Men are never guilty of it, or, with such extreme rarity, and then in such feeble and small-souled specimens of their sex, that it may be set down as a sin not masculine, or at least not epicene. But women of sense, of some breeding, and even of some kindliness of nature will thus endeavor to assert superiority upon the meanest of all pretenses and inflict a wound in a manner most cowardly, because it cannot be resented, and admits of no retort. If they but only knew how unlovely how positively offensive they made themselves in so doing, not only to their silent victims, but to every generous-hearted man who observes their manœuvres, they would give up a triumph at once so mean and cruel which is obtained at such a sacrifice on their part. No other evidence than this eyeing is needed that a woman, whatever be her birth and breeding, has a small and vulgar soul.

Getting Eggs in Winter.

First procure a good breed for laying. White Leghorns are the best; light Brahmas come next. Then provide a warm house; one sunk three feet below the ground, and covered with earth, and having a few hot-bed sashes in front in the south side, will scarcely freeze in the coldest weather. Then feed warm food; boiled potatoes, mixed while hot with barley meal, or wheat bran, with a little salt and plenty of pepper, should be the staple food. Wheat, barley, oats, chopped turnips, cabbage and onions should be added, not forgetting plenty of pure water.

The Destruction of our Forests.

Of a desolation which is recorded far back of the days of Roman or even of Grecian glory, we read that "a man was famous according as he had lifted up axes upon the thick trees." In the days when American forests were considered practically limitless, our fathers were famous for lifting up axes upon the thick trees, and the relentless destruction is even now upon us, like the Philistines upon Israel. This destruction comes upon us in many forms, most of which are in fact rapidly and terribly cumulative. Here is a beautiful stream of water, the instinct which was a most element of wealth to the country through which it flowed. Thinkers not only have contributed to such, but to more efficient in usefulness by reason of being dressed not by but rather passing on. The noiseless treadbellows on the hills, where water-power is expensive, the shingle of the mill-economizing verdure with which the Creator vail hillsides, and of the springs and rivulets, which, in days long gone by, ran as they listed down the valleys to turn the mill-wheel, are in danger of destruction by hydraulic power, with which we have already been smitten, hundreds of millions of dollars of annual damage has been and is the result. That this drying up of the streams is attributable not only directly to deforesting, but almost solely to it, common sense—which is, in fact, the only essence of both fact and philosophy—must make it plain to every candid mind. Rain feeds the springs. To feed them economically, it should be gentle and frequent, not violent and at long intervals. Intelligent forest culture would require that such portions of mountains as are clothed with a mantle of green trees, so by its cooling influence it would more frequently condensate the moist sponge-air so as to give us showers at short intervals. This is the case in forest-clothed, beautiful Britain. The reverse is true in tree-stripped Spain, whose people have become as proverbial for their hatred of trees, as their country has for scarcity of soil and sleeping streams. Here, and on eastward all through the tropical, a relentlessly brilliant sky and an appalling absence of verdure will teach us as nothing else can that a beautiful cloud is one that weeps, and, in its proper time, how delicious a drizzling rainy day. Those deforested eastern lands are as famous for seasons of bleeding storms, and valleys torn by terrible torrents, as they are for the reverse. They will soon find their counterpart in all these characteristics in America, unless we rouse ourselves with a will to understand and master these evils. Forests promote streams available for our precious manufacturing interests, also, by furnishing vast and almost innumerable beds of fallen leaves and of moss, which act on the earth like a huge, overlying sponge, to check the sudden rush of the rain-fall into the valleys and down into the streams. Very rapidly, in recent years, are mournful instances multiplying in which these manufacturing streams are transformed, by freshets, from spirits of blessing—to give homes and food and clothing to thousands who live in the hamlets, by turning their machinery which helps them by their labor to help themselves—to demons of destruction. Forests also promote such steadiness of flow of the streams as to make them sources of national wealth in giving employment to skilled labor, by preventing the rapid evaporation of moisture. Probably more than half the water that falls on a deforested region in a dry season is whisked off by evaporation just at the time when it is most needed to strengthen the depleted mill-streams. The steam-engine, to be of any practical value as a motor-power, must have its action controlled by the conservative influence of the balance-wheel. Otherwise its wheels would whirl one time with a fury which would result only in destruction, and then would move too slowly to be of service. Thus the forest, by increasing the frequency of gentle rains, and so decreasing the volume and the length of intervals between showers, also by regulating their too sudden plunge into the streams, is the great regulator provided by nature for their control in the service of man. All over the manufacturing portions of our country we may find instances where large amounts of capital have been invested to make available and develop our once magnificent and almost numberless hydraulic powers. Trusting to what seemed a certainty of employment for themselves and their families, thousands of skilled laborers have, in many instances, confidingly made their homes at a point where the stream seemed abundantly powerful and permanent. Then, as the summers came and went, the river seemed to sicken, and grow more and more feeble, till there would be a week or two each year in which the spindles and the looms would be silent. As time went on these periods of idleness have lengthened into months, in which the laborer struggles for bread and clothing, for means to pay for the humble little home, or debts incurred in sickness, was compelled to be suspended. The cause of all this was that the source of the river's life had been destroyed or injured by the ignorance, cupidity, or recklessness of men who "lifted up axes on the trees" far up the mountains, where the mill-streams had their birth.

NEW FRUIT.—Experiments made with this tropical fruit proves it to possess the property when boiled with tough meat, of rendering it juicy and tender. If the unripe fruit be placed in the water in which the toughest meat is to be cooked, it is found to tenderly often it and render it perfectly digestible; and the same good results are observed if the meat be merely washed with the juice of the fruit. The thick, white, milky juice, when extracted from the unripe pawpaw, in fact, contains properties similar to those of pepsine. In appearance, the fruit resembles a citron or lemon.

DEAR "PLAIN LIVING."—What is called plain living is often the most expensive. Roasted meats and poultry served every day for dinner, and no re-serving of the same in any other form, and unvarying steak or mutton chops for breakfast, make anything but cheap diet. Besides being expensive, such a bill of fare lacks a variety, and is for that very reason less healthful than a table supplied with a greater variety. Many portions of beef, for example, that are quite unsuitable for roasting can be cooked in other ways, and be as palatable, perhaps more so, than the porterhouse or sirloin roast, and equally nutritious.

How Candor Pays.

Atlanta Constitution.

"We had better understand each other," he said deprecatingly as he sauntered into the editorial room, "before we begin. I'm a book-agent."

Unmindful of the groans that met this statement he went on:

"I'm not a white-haired philanthropist from New Haven, who has come south through pity for your orphan asylum. I'm a fast square, hard-headed book agent."

Encouraged by the reception of this frank avowal he took a seat and dropped his feet in a easy fashion and:

"I'm not a venal clergyman who seeks to swindle ignorant Georgians while he pulls on his white cravat in your lofty dome. I'm not an ex-convict, escaped from the chain gang, who pays expense bills in payment of his crime on commission when he represents the rum seller. I'm not an unlicensed book agent, with nine of the comets blanketed, running on check in pursuit of his [illegible] I'm not the [illegible] young man who writes the poetic love-letters and sonnets.

"You don't pick up up for a prince in disguise or art or morality going incog. I do not fly the skull and crossbones tied behind a holiday flag till I've grappled and boarded you. I've got the regular old death's head nailed to the mast, and I'm a pirate from keel to quarter-board, and if you don't want that sort of company blow me out of the water."

He had the whole force on deck at this point.

"I've got no off hand preamble to my little story. I doesn't lead you through the flowery paths of ease to where I've got the trap sprung. I do not beguile with anecdote, inspire with eloquence, soothe with persuasion, or jaggle with local gossip. I was not directed to you as a leader of culture, or a person who'd be likely to buy. I won't show you a list of high-toned decoys who have put their names down to get rid of me and to draw you in. I don't show the work I'm selling, and I've never been able to learn the idiot's solo-logy that explains the pictures."

Here he paused while the manager called for the cash-boy.

"That's about the size of me and my business. The book's right here—fifty parts, three cents a part, plenty of pictures and leg type [illegible] and means $2½ clear money to me every time I work one off. Do you take or do I go?"

By this time eleven copies of the first part were ordered, and the "eleven able" began at their work, while the office boy induced this tribute to a man who ain't ashamed of his little racket.

The Era of Rapid and Cheap Communication Near at Hand.

Irish World.

It has remained, however, for Prof. Albert E. Forstie, a talented inventor, to produce a mechanism by which the barriers to rapid and cheap telegraphy are swept down, and which by simple applications of known principles, promises to entirely revolutionize the telegraphy of the world. His system is called "Harmonic Automatic Telegraphy," and differs from that in use by the Rapid Telegraph company in two important points. The first is an improved and abbreviated construction of the alphabet, in which position is used to the great saving of characters and consequent saving of time in preparing the copy to the perforator. The second is the employment of a system of a sympathetic resonance, by which, with the use of a single wire and unskilled operatives the same amount of work which is now done by ten wires and skilled labor can be accomplished.

Thus, for the first time in the history of telegraphy, the Morse alphabet and system are done away with, as are also the translating and transcribing by receivers. Instead of requiring the ordinary handling and delay, the message, be it long or short, is rapidly prepared in a perforating machine fed into the transmitter, and is instantly reproduced in clear Roman letters on sheets of paper ready to be sent by messenger to the party addressed. The actual number of words sent on an average by the American rapid is from 600 to 700 per minute, while the lowest computations, made from results obtained from an instrument only partially completed, show a speed by the new method of 5,000 words per minute. A great advantage, too, is that, being sent over a single wire, the matter comes consecutively, and is, therefore, free from liability to error, as is often the case where several wires are used for the sending of a single dispatch. For press work the new method will prove of inestimable value, as by the use of this device a message of 2,000 words, occupying about one column of a closely printed newspaper, can be perforated, sent over the wires, and given to a messenger at the other end of the line for delivery, and all ready for the type-setter, in three and a half minutes.

Inviting Fields for New Inventions.

Hon. John D. Caton, in an address delivered in Chicago some months ago, stated that in his opinion the only thing about a railroad that had come to stay was the arrangement of two inflexible bars of iron placed in a parallel position. He questioned if they would long remain on the surface of the ground. As to the motor and the carriage, they would all be changed. Another force would most likely be substituted for that of steam. Greater speed, more security and less cost were all desired, and would all be obtained in a near future. The improvement of country roads presents an inviting field for original inventors. A durable, cheap, and easily made pavement for the streets of large towns and cities is yet to be invented. There is an opportunity for great improvement in the construction of vehicles that move over roads of any kind. Even the saddle is far from being what it should be.

The machines now employed for making paper, weaving cloth, printing, sewing, shaping brick and working up lumber will soon be displaced. A very valuable invention is seldom very valuable in itself beyond the term for which it is patented. It is improved to such an extent that only a single principle remains to be kept in operation.

The Boston Journal of Chemistry says there is need at the present time of some electrical devices by which easy communication can be had between houses, manufacturing establishments, stores and offices; between dwellings and stables, conservatories, libraries, etc. It is not necessary that words should be transmitted, but signals representing words or specific wants, suited to the needs of parties as they are found in all neighborhoods and towns. What is wanted is something that may be a substitute for the telephone—something which any one can use; but it may be much less extensive in its capabilities. It would seem to be easy to devise apparatus suited to this want, but it needs thought and the exercise of a considerable degree of ingenuity. If this need can be satisfactorily met, it will serve an important end, and do much to break down the oppressive and outrageous monopolies connected with telegraphy and telephony. The latter as a monopoly is fast becoming more unbearable in its rapacious exactions than the telegraph has ever been.

A Deserving Class.

Boston Globe.

General Grant says: "No pension can compensate the men who have lost one or more limbs, and I should have been glad to see that class of pensioners well provided for, instead of the indiscriminate pensioners, some of whom are physically as good as they would have been if the war had never been fought."

A Nice Distinction.

Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle.

A little Augusta three-year old girl rebuked her mother for alluding to a black cat. She said it was a "colored" cat!

Present American Literature.

Boston Transcript.

It seems as if we, in New England, were repeating the old story of the blossom, fruitage and decline of authorship. Nor need we confine the statement to New England, for we may look with strained vision over the whole field of American talent for a single powerful above [illegible] except the coarse, compacted genius of Whitman. We are doing much in the process of [illegible] and [illegible] and amassing statistics, but we are not producing enough of national work. One of the largest literary accumulations of the day is the American [illegible] and [illegible] but [illegible] is not [illegible]

[illegible] Bryant, Longfellow, Emerson and Lowell's [illegible] James, [illegible] whom we can point to as [illegible] We [illegible] will disprove, praise [illegible] but they too may [illegible] But the great number of hopeless poets and [illegible] as The Century and The Atlantic are a weak fraternity. Truly, very humanly, the magazines are stretching their hands toward England or reaching back into the past. If any principle of protection could be applied here it is certainly to be prayed for. But our literary talent of good class is so well paid that no reason can be found here.

One undoubted cause of the dearth is the prevailing restlessness and lack of seriousness in the present American nature. Moreover, our political life of the past twenty years has not favored mental repose. The civil war created and left for us a legacy of hot emotions which are but just dying away. Social and economical problems have acquired complexity and have absorbed energy. We are still in the turmoil of these large, immediate questions, and art and literature can scarcely flourish in a soil that is being continually ploughed by antagonisms or debates. Also now so vital matters lie fair to make a large demand upon our best minds for a period while to come. But we can hardly make full excuse for ourselves in this way, since England notwithstanding has developed in a corresponding time, and yet has given life to the rich and deep compositions of Tennyson, Browning and George Eliot, in the very heat of such upheavals. After all, we can only say that we have somehow missed the gold in conditions which give life to great literary art; and it is doubtful if any studied observance of conditions will give us what we have missed. One thing is plain, however; that earnestness of life and a fine moral rectitude are ingredients of a worthy literature. The numerous mediocrity of American literature is but a sorry compensation for its lowered quality. There are those who doubt if the materials for a great poem or romance can be found in the United States. Drama and fiction, it is said, express the tragedy and suffering of humanity, and the study of modern civilization is to eliminate suffering. There is truth in this; but without being pessimists we can see that some struggling and suffering are inevitable. Moreover, the drama of personal development always offers alluring material to the artist of human nature. It is not believable that a dearth of material can explain the dearth of writers. It is more credible that the spread of the materialistic spirit which brings all the phenomena of life within the region of law may have indisposed the strong minds to poetize human experience. That such poetization is compatible with keen psychological analysis we have demonstration in Thackeray and George Eliot. But whatever the causes of the lowered quality of American authorship, it is impossible not to feel a regret at the undeniable fact.

How Garibaldi Wooed Anita.

Guerzoni's "Garibaldi."

One evening Garibaldi stood on deck occupied with thought, looking upon the shore, when he saw on a mole a group of women and girls. At first their forms passed unnoticed before him, but by degrees his eye, and perhaps his heart, fixed upon one, and he stopped to contemplate her. She was a young woman in the bloom of health and strength [illegible] with a sort of irregular masculine beauty. She was the ideal woman that Garibaldi was in search of. Before he had spoken to her or heard her speak, by some invisible and magic spark which kindles love, the Mizzardo loved her. She also had remarked the blonde, leonine head of the foreign sailor who watched her day after day. She felt the fascination of that glance, the touch of the magic spark, and secretly gave her heart to him who offered his.

One evening Garibaldi resolved to delay no longer, and went to the girl's home. His heart beat violently, but held a firm resolution. At the door he met a man, who, perhaps, knowing something of the gallant Italian, or in obedience to a custom of the country, invited him in to take a cup of coffee. Garibaldi said he would have entered even without an invitation, but it rendered his design more easy. He took an opportunity of whispering to the object of his devotion, "Maiden, will you be mine?" to which she replied only a look, which contained the promise of unutterable love. Some evenings after he returned and carried her off, put her on board the safe refuge of his Rio Pardo, under the formidable protection of his cannon and his sailors, and swore before heaven to make her his wife. They were legally married at Montevideo soon after. She was called Anita Ribeiras, and was a native of Merinos, in that district of Laguna. The man that Garibaldi met at the door was her father, and those that said it was her husband erred. Anita, however, was promised by her father to a man she did not love; but she was not married, as has been believed. Yielding to her love she tore her father's heart, but did not break faith with any other man. "If there was guilt," exclaimed Garibaldi, "it was all mine. If an innocent person has suffered, I only have to answer for it, and I have answered. She is dead, and her father is avenged. There, at the mouth of the Eridano, the day on which I hoped to fight death for her, as I pressed convulsively her pulse to count its last throbs, as I received upon my lips her parting sigh and held a corpse in my arms—on that day I recognized the greatness of my fault."

A Square Failure.

The agent of a New York clothing house, who was sent to Atlanta to settle up the business of a retail house, made a few inquiries of the man next door.

"I relief it vhas a square failure" exclaimed the man.

"What makes you think so?"

"Vhell, he didn't drink, nor smoke, nor gamble, nor drive a fast horses; and ash for his vife, she never buys nothings and keeps no help."

"Then you lay it on the stagnant condition of trade?"

"Vhell, trade was purty dull, but you see he vhas not der right sort of a man. When a man shtops to buy a vest for two dollars he doesn' make him pelieve dat he wants an offerfoat for fifteen, and when a man stops to buy an offerfoat for fifteen he doesn' convince him dot he needs a second-hand suit for twenty. He may do in the grocery business, but he can't run some clothing store without argument."

A "Judicious" Mind.

Texas Siftings.

A gentleman of our acquaintance tells us the following good story, which goes to show that the average Austin boy has what Mrs. Partington would call a "judicious" mind. He, the boy, wanted to go in swimming.

"But, my son," rejoined the anxious parent, "it was only this morning that you were complaining of a pain in your stomach."

"That's so, pa; but I know how to swim on my back."

"Mr. A. Kiefer—Sir: For some years past I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint. I have had several physicians treating my case, but they all failed to reach the seat of disease. During the past year I got much worse, and became so weak and feeble as to be unable to do any work. I had a great deal of headache, and at times became so dizzy that I had to lay down. About six weeks ago I commenced using your Taraxine, and after taking the third dose I felt that the dizziness and headache were leaving me. I continued the use of it till I had taken three bottles, and I am now as well than, and am able to do a day's work on the farm. Yours truly, etc.,

I commend it to all who suffer with derangement of the liver. Very truly yours,

In France the public school is made a great in developing and strengthening the virtue of economy. An annual premium of 100 to 150 francs is given to the most diligent and well-behaved child of every hundred in the public schools. This money is placed in a savings' bank. The child is furnished with a bank-book. He can add to the sum deposited, but he cannot draw it out until he attains his majority, when the whole sum is his own. Children are encouraged to save their money. They are allowed to place the smallest sums, even to a sou, in the hands of their teachers, who have to keep an account with each child. When the sum amounts to a franc, it is deposited in the savings' bank. Thus thousands of children are laying up small sums of money; and, at the same time they are acquiring those habits of economy which have so long characterized the French people.—Prof. Wood.

Cyanide of potassium is a most violent poison, and persons using it should be particularly careful.

B. MINCER

NATIVE OF RUSSIA

Scientific Optician,

TWENTY-ONE YEARS EXPERIENCE

Who has been doing business in Adrian for a number of years, and testimonials from the best citizens will prove

Tecumseh March 13, and at Clinton on March 14.

The delicate construction of the eye makes it necessary to use great care in selecting spectacles.

B. Mincer has made the Eye his special study, and in late years has paid his entire attention to the adaptation of Spectacles to the same. Having a thorough experience in making and adapting spectacles to the eye, he is enabled to fit accurately in every case of abnormal vision, known as Presbyopia, Myopia, and Hypermetropia, as well as weak sight, requiring various tinted glasses. His improved Spectacles are a perfect restoration which assists and preserves the sight, rendering frequent changes quite unnecessary. They confer a brilliancy and distinctness of vision with an amount of ease and comfort not generally enjoyed by persons using spectacles. His lenses are ground on the most scientific principles, rendering them as clear as when in the full strength of youth.

B. Mincer has some flattering testimonials of some of the leading citizens and oculists in the state, as to ability in fitting spectacles.

ADRIAN, Dec. 5, 1881.—To Whom it may concern: Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily attaining the desired result, I was recommended by Mr. Mincer, optician, of this place, who carefully examined my eyes, and fitted me with a pair of glasses, which have given me perfect satisfaction. The method of examining the eyes and its application in selecting glasses to the eye, can only be appreciated by a thinking mind that fully understands the subject, and adds to a large experience. He has now supplied glasses to Mrs. Bower's family, with whom he spends a well place, and I recommend him to all who need glasses, just as he has done for me. [illegible]

[illegible]

ADRIAN, Dec. 12, 1882.—I take pleasure in recommending Mr. Mincer's glasses as being of a very superior quality, and his method of fitting them to the eyes the best.

S. A. POWERS.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to any one in need of good glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.

DANIEL TODD, M.D.

We clip the following testimonials from the Daily Press relative to the merits of B. Mincer's glasses, who has sold a large number of spectacles in this vicinity, and in every instance has given entire satisfaction:

ANGOLA, Ind., Dec. 13, 1878.

This will recommend to you Mr. B. Mincer, who has made this place a point for sale of glasses; from his long practice in this particular business he has perfected himself so as to readily adapt glasses to any condition of the eyes, and I recommend him as a first-class, thorough optician.

L. S. B. WILLIAMS, M.D.

MORENCI, Dec. 2, 1881.

I take pleasure in recommending all persons who need glasses to aid the eye, to use the kind furnished by Mr. Mincer, who is capable of fitting the eye with the very best quality.

REV. J. CRABBS.

FAIRFIELD, Mich., Dec. 10, 1881.

Mr. B. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, has occasionally visited this county, and has fitted me with a pair of glasses for myself; also my wife, with which we are much pleased, and would not part with them, and we take pleasure in recommending him to the public as a thorough optician and will fit any eye.

J. H. LAVERTY, M.D.

DELTA, Ohio, April 26, 1882.

I take pleasure in recommending all persons who are compelled to use glasses for weak eyes or any other affected by age, or by the use of poor glasses, to try B. Mincer, optician. I have purchased of him a pair of glasses which are the best I ever used.

Diphtheria.

Quite a discovery in the treatment of diphtheria has been made. A young man whose arm had been amputated, was poisoned by diphtheria before healing took place, and instead of the matter from that disease being deposited in the throat, the greater portion appeared on the wounded arm, and the disease was very light and easily managed. Dr. Davis, of Mankato, profited by this, and in his next case of diphtheria blistered his patient's chest, and on the blistered part the chief deposits appeared. This was also an easy case. The theory of Dr. Davis is that diphtheria usually appears in the throat because of the thinness of the lining of the throat. Hence, when the blister breaks the skin upon any other part of the body, the disease appears there.

"I have no time to de[illegible] children," says the busine[illegible] with a sigh; for he really feels [illegible] ation of their society keenly. But the excuse is an insufficient one; he should make time—let other duties go, for no duty is more important than that he owes his offspring. Parents should never fail to give the child such sympathy in its little matters of life as will produce in its confiding mind that trust and faith which is a necessary element in paternal influence. Filial affection is a great safeguard against evil influences, as well as a great civilizer to its possessor. Do not forget, too, that the childish mind, in process of development, absolutely needs the cheerful and happy influences which are produced by amusements, as sure as the plant needs sun and light for its proper growth.

Philadelphia pays over $80,000 a day for oysters, and New York almost $200,000 every twenty-four hours. Boston and Baltimore together eat more oysters than New York. There are 3,000 acres occupied by oyster beds in Chesapeake Bay alone, while for 2,500 miles along the Atlantic coast oyster beds can be found. The Chesapeake beds turn out 25,000,000 bushels of oysters annually. Baltimore cans 20,000,000 bushels of oysters every year and has $15,000,000 invested in the business. American oysters are exported to Germany, France, England and other foreign countries. The Philadelphia Times estimates that the foreign and domestic oyster trade of this country exceeds $300,000,000 annually, and that we ship abroad 50,000,000 oysters every year.

English Ivy.

English ivy will succeed better in our dry, warm rooms than almost any other plant, and requires very little care. If 2-year-old plants are secured they will begin to run after that time. It is not necessary to give the plant a large pot or to change this often. Good, rich loam and plenty of water is all that is required. Move the pot as little as possible. Once a week wipe off all the leaves carefully with a large wet sponge, fastened to a long stick. As the ivy does not require sunlight it can be grown anywhere, and makes a charming frame-work for doors, windows and pictures. Sometimes it is planted in large tubs and trained up a stairway, forming a mass of green foliage from the hall below to the floor above.

Bran Tea.—A cheap and useful drink in colds, fevers, and restlessness from pain. Put a handful of bran in a pint and a half of water, let it boil rather more than half an hour, then strain it, and, if desired, flavor with sugar and lemon; but it is a pleasant drink without any addition.

Porridge.—When children are delicate, porridge is often preferable to bread and milk. Put two tablespoonfuls of grits or oat meal in the milk saucepan, wet to moisten with half a pint of milk; let it boil ten minutes keeping it well stirred, add a small piece of butter and a little sugar, and it is ready for use.

Irish Stew.—Cut up about two pounds of the neck of mutton into small cutlets, which put into a proper sized stewpan with some of the fat of the mutton, season it with half a tablespoonful of salt, a quarter of an ounce of pepper, the same of sugar, six medium sized onions, a quart of water; set them to boil and simmer for half an hour, then add six middling sized potatoes, cut them in halves or quarters, stir it together, and let it stew gently for about one hour longer; if too fat, remove it from the top, but if well done the potatoes will absorb all of it, and be very delicate; any other part of the mutton may be served in the same way.

To Stain Wood Brown.—Get an ounce of catechu and bichromate of potash. Then carefully break the catechu which is a blackish gum-like substance into small fragments, place it in a glass or earthenware vessel, with a piece of washing soda as large as a walnut, and pour upon it a pint of boiling water, and stir until dissolved. Put the bichromate in a bottle with a pint of cold water, and dissolve with occasional shaking. Paint over the wood-work to be stained, first with the catechu solution, and let it dry; it will be of a dull, dirty brown. When dry go over it with the solution of bichromate, and it will turn to a very rich chestnut brown. By varying the strength of the solutions, the depth of color will be varied. When quite dry, apply shellac, or other varnish. Very cheap, easily applied and satisfactory.

A lady of experience observes that a good way to pick out a husband is to see how patiently he waits for his dinner when it is behind time. Her husband remarks that a good way to pick out a wife is to see whether the woman has dinner ready in time.

Popular Education.

Accepting this as a fundamental maxim, that "Whatever should enter into the life of a nation should be taught in the public schools," let us consider some things that enter into the life of a prosperous people.

Man lives not by bread alone; and the culture of the heart only ensures a perfect life, either of an individual or of a nation. Hence, the schools of a country should not be irreligious or godless. Both by precept and example, the precepts of religion should be taught. The highest standard of morals should be enforced. None but men and women of the noblest character and purest life should be allowed to teach the youth; if religion and morality are to enter into the complex life of the nation, they must not be banished from the public schools.

If a nation prospers, industry, frugality and economy must enter into its life. Hence, these old-fashioned virtues should have a place in the schools. The young should be taught that an education fits them for work, not to live without work. In school, the young man should learn the value of time, and should be taught how to fill up the days and the years, as they pass, with profitable industry or substantial enjoyment; for true living is what is enjoyed, whether it be in the gratification of the present, or for that in the future which promises an enjoyment that more than counterbalances the self-denial of the present. Let the youth in our schools be taught that labor is Heaven's great ordinance for human improvement, and the prosperity of the nation cannot be checked by senseless theories of finance. Frugality, as opposed to a useless expenditure of money, should be inculcated. This must be mainly done by the state, in its expenditure of money for the erection of school buildings, in the cost of text-books, and in the general management of the schools. This should not descend to a niggard parsimony; but when, with borrowed money, school-houses are erected and furnished with an elegance far beyond that which is found in the homes of the people, is it not an encouragement to the young men of the state to go beyond their own means to build homes for themselves, provided they have a little credit?

The Queen of All.

Honor the dear old mother. Time has scattered the snowy flakes on her brow, plowed deep furrows on her cheeks, but is she not sweet and beautiful now? The lips are thin and shrunken, but those are the lips which have kissed many a hot tear from the childish cheeks, and they are the sweetest lips in all the world. The eye is dim, yet it glows with the soft radiance of holy love which can never fade. Ah, yes, she is a dear old mother. The sands of life are nearly run out, but feeble as she is, she will go further and reach down lower for you than any other upon earth. You cannot walk into a midnight where she cannot see you; you cannot enter a prison whose bars will keep her out; you can never mount a scaffold too high for her to reach that she may kiss and bless you in evidence of her deathless love. When the world shall despise and forsake you, when it leaves you by the wayside to die unnoticed, the dear old mother will gather you in her feeble arms, and carry you home and tell you of all your virtues until you almost forget that your soul is disfigured by vices. Love her tenderly, and cheer her declining years with holy devotion.

A Woman's Glove.

A woman's glove is to her what a vest pocket is to a man. But it is more capacious, and in nine cases out of ten it is much better regulated. A man will carry $200 in small change, four matches, half a dozen toothpicks, a short pencil, and other things, and yet not be able to find a nickel, or a match, or a toothpick or a pencil or a card when he wants it. Not so with a woman. She has the least bit of a glove, and in that she carries the tiniest hand, and a wad of bills, and the memorandum for her intended purchase of dry goods, and car tickets, and matinee checks, and may be a diminutive powder-bag. We have no idea how she does it—how she manages to squeeze these thousand and one things into that wee space. But she does it every time, and the glove never looks the least distended or ruffled. And when a woman wants any article concealed about that glove, she doesn't seem to have the least trouble in the world getting at it. All required is a simple turn of the wrist, the disappearance of fairy fingers, and the desired article is brought to light. It is a wonder that no savant can explain.

Madagascar.

Although Madagascar is known to be the third largest island in the world, its actual size and extent is not generally understood. It is easy to see how misconception on this point arises, for in maps the island is usually seen only in connection with Africa, and that great continent is so large that it dwarfs by comparison with itself everything in its near neighborhood, so that the really large island sheltering under its southeastern side appears but an inconsiderable appendage to its vast neighbor. If, however, we take a good-sized map of Madagascar, and put by its side the outline, to the same scale, of another country with whose dimensions we are familiar, such, for instance, as England, we begin to realize how important an island it is as regards size, being nearly 1,000 miles long by about 250 in average breadth, so that it is nearly four times as large as England and Wales.

A lady who has been spending the summer at Lake Chautauqua says that on one of the steamers that pass Fair Point, at the time when the great Sabbath-school convention was in progress, were three women, rather gaudily dressed and wearing diamonds enough to indicate they had plenty of money. Their conversation was carried on in a loud voice, and attracted considerable attention. In front of Fair Point stands a statue of Faith. "See that piece of statooway," said number one. "I wonder who it is. It must be Jupiter." "No" said number two, "it looks more like Venus.' "Well," said number three, 'anyway it's one of those people in the Bible."

To destroy the vitality of weed seeds in soil by baking will in a great measure destroy the fertility of the soil. A better way is to spread the soil out thinly in a warm place and keep it moist. In a few days most of the seeds will germinate, after which the soil should be stirred and allowed to become dry.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAR. 8, 1888.

The Educational News for March is at hand. It improves with every number.

A State Convention of Michigan cheese makers will be held at Adrian on the 13th and 14th of March.

The final solution of the Senatorial contest at Lansing seems to be generally satisfactory to all parties.

Jackson Patriot: Engineer Potter of the projected Toledo & Milwaukee railroad was in the city yesterday. He asserted that the name of the company had been changed to Michigan & Ohio, and that in a few days a working force of five hundred men would be employed on the road-bed in this state.

Dundee Reporter: An agricultural society has been organized at Tecumseh, and a fair will be held there this fall. A stock company was organized with a capital of $10,000, 30 acres of land has been purchased, and as soon as the frost is out of the ground a half mile track will be constructed and buildings erected. The fair will be a success, for Tecumseh don't do things by halves. Dundee must do the same thing before Monroe county will ever have a fair worthy of the name.

Adrian Record, March 1st, 1888: Frederick Avery, of this city, was installed as fireman on the old locomotive "Toledo," Israel Scrantom, engineer, which then run on the Erie and Kalamazoo railroad, between Toledo and Adrian. Ever since that time Mr. Avery has been railroading on the same line and extensions, and yesterday completed his 20th year of service. He served as fireman and engineer until 1861, since which time he has been conductor.

MICHIGAN'S NEW SENATOR.

We are indebted to the Free Press for the following biographical sketch of the Hon. Thomas W. Palmer.

Thomas W. Palmer was born in Detroit January 27, 1830. He was a son of Thomas Palmer, one of the pioneers of Detroit, who came here in 1812 and who was present at Hull's surrender of the city. His mother was a daughter of Judge James Witherell and a sister of Judge Benjamin F. Witherell. Mr. Palmer and Miss Witherell were passengers on the Walk-in-the-Water, the first steamboat on the lakes, on her first trip and also made their bridal trip on the same vessel.

At an early age Thomas W. entered the freshman class of the Michigan University, where he remained one year, but was compelled to abandon his studies owing to an affection of the eyes. He went to Lake Superior in the hope of restoring his sight, and was so far benefited as to be able to resume his studies, but was again compelled to leave, when, with five others, he left Ann Arbor in the fall of 1848 for a voyage to Spain. He traveled on foot throughout that country for some months, then visited South America, and came home by way of New Orleans. He engaged in business in Wisconsin in 1850-51. In 1852 he returned to Detroit and engaged in the real estate business. In 1855 he married Miss Lucia P., daughter of Chas. P. Merrill, one of the most prominent lumbermen of Michigan. From 1855 until Mr. Merrill's death, Mr. Palmer was engaged with him in the lumber and real estate business, and Mr. Palmer is still engaged therein in connection with several firms located at different points in the State.

Mr. Palmer, for a score of years, has been looked upon by his party as an available candidate for political office, but, while taking an interest in politics in general, did not, until within the past ten years, actively identify himself with them, having theretofore declined all suggestions that he be a candidate for office. In 1873 he was elected a member of the Board of Estimates of the city of Detroit; in 1876 he was an unsuccessful candidate for the nomination for congress in this district; but in 1878 declined the nomination, which was urgently pressed upon him. The same year he consented to be a candidate for the State Senate, and was elected. His career in the Senate made him many friends throughout the State. He was one of the leading candidates for the republican nomination for Governor in 1880, but last year in deference to the party usage which gave an Executive two terms, he persistently declined to be a candidate, although there was a very strong pressure brought to bear upon him and a decided disposition on the part of republicans throughout the State to break away from the custom and give him the nomination.

Mr. Palmer is one of the most finished orators of the republican party in this State. He is a man of scholarly tastes, extensive reading, and wide attainments. His courtesy and hospitality are proverbial throughout the State, and have contributed in no small degree to the wide-spread popularity which has made him Senator.

SORGHUM SUGAR.

Mr. John Richard, of Raisin, has furnished us a letter from a relative of his, John Heaney, of Burkley, Ill., which gives some valuable suggestions in regard to the manufacture of sorghum sugar.

I am in due receipt of your note speaking concerning the making of sugar at the Champaign sugar works. All that is told about it in newspapers as in general think is true. I have been at the works and saw the sugar swung out by the centrifugal, saw the lime put into the cold juice to defecate. After defecation I have seen the juice drawn off to the evaporator, where it is evaporated to a syrup, then pumped into a settling tank to be left until it settles, through bone black filters, bone charcoal, the bone charcoal is burned in a small furnace on the premises, then, after filtration, pumped or sucked into the vacuum pan or boiler, a large circular boiler about 10 feet high and nine feet in diameter, where the sugar boils as a fondant at from 100 to 120 according to the perfection of the vacuum. Of course boiling in a vacuum takes far less fuel than open pans or steam train, but as a good many now are able to use the bagasse as fuel it makes but little difference. The vacuum pan process makes much more sugar as boiling at so low a temperature prevents much of the crystallizable sugar from becoming converted into glucose or grape sugar. In the vacuum pan at Champaign they boil down 45 degrees Reaumur, making a very thick mush or melado. It is then taken out into pans, or what they call melado wagons, and left standing in a warm room for all the sugar crystals to form that possibly will, after which the mush is put into the centrifugal and swung out, or rather the syrup is swung out and the sugar crystals being too large to pass through the holes of the screen, are left in the centrifugal. That is all there is of it. The cane must be nearly ripe to get the most sugar out of it. Early Amber or early Orange are the best varieties. The early Amber cane comes in very early, after about ten days the early Orange ripens, and the season can thus be lengthened for the manufacture, from forty to sixty days.

I attended the convention of the Mississippi Valley cane growers at St. Louis. It was very interesting, and I learned much. Of course there is a good deal to learn. I am convinced that the present process of extracting the juice by rollers is wasteful. In the majority of cases there is not fifty per cent. of the weight of the cane extracted in juice. There should be at least twenty-five per cent. obtained. There were some parties at the convention who reported very large profits. One man from Fall River, Wis., reported and gave all the details, everything done. He made clear profit on 60 acres of $4500. Hon. Seth H. Kenney, of Morristown, Minn., reported about $4300 from 90 acres. Kenney is the originator of the Amber cane. A man from Hudson, Mich., was there named Dan Root. He said he knew you well. He also had samples of sugar made by a hand centrifugal just as good, as far as I could see, as any from Champaign. At Champaign they use no sulphur fumes, or fumes of burning sulphur, at all. The sulphurous fumes are used in case there has been too much lime used in defecation. Lime darkens the syrup but takes nearly all the acidity out of it. In the making of sugar the color of molasses does not make much difference. In this connection I should say that the bone coal filter takes any excess of lime out of the syrup at Champaign, and besides neutralizing any excess of lime, the filter cleans and clears the syrup of all impurities. The Champaign Co. got 8½ cents per pound for all the sugar they were able to make. I think at the convention they reported that the yield of sugar from 250 acres would be about 144,000 pounds. They never failed in any instance to make sugar, about 43 per cent of the melado crystalizing the first time. I presume you have also saw the report of the sorghum works at or near Rio Grande, New Jersey. They had one thousand acres of cane. They did not use the bone coal filter, but in place used the sulphur fumes, and all their works were on the pattern of works for the reduction of ribbon cane in Louisana. They were very successful last season. If anything they were more so than the Champaign works. There was also a Dr. Wilflelm from Kansas at the convention, who read a very interesting paper on sugar culture and manufacture. He has two large factories in Kansas now, and expects next season to start three more, making five. In these places he expects to raise 5000 acres of cane, and at these outside factories the cane will be made into syrup. He then will have a large refinery, central to the five factories, in which he will separate the sugar from the syrup. The cost of the whole arrangement will be $500,000. There were parties in Kansas, who, last season, had 1000 acres of cane, and from that down to 100 acres.

Kansas is a fine state for the business. The season is somewhat longer than here and land is cheaper. However, I think the parties at the convention from the farther north could show better results. What they in more southern clime made in length of season they lost in energy compared with those in more northern latitude. Thus probably making the matter even. Prof. Kedzie from Lansing, Mich., was also at the convention. He did not say much, but listened a good deal. I heard him tell Daniel Root, of Hudson, that he did not believe sugar could be made to pay only in large central factories. Mr. Root said in answer that he knew it could be made to pay on a smaller scale than Kedzie thought. A man by name of Ames is going in with Root next season and going to run on a larger scale. What little I did this season showed me that if rightly handled and carefully attended to there was considerable to be made at making syrup and sugar from sorghum. The hay company, of which I am one, have bought a building, with two boilers and an engine of 15 horse power, which we intend to use as a sorghum factory next season. We expect to raise about 50 acres of cane next summer, and farmers will raise, maybe, 100 acres more around here. We have not decided yet, if we will make sugar or not. The United States Commissioner of Agriculture was at the convention.

MICHIGAN STATE ITEMS.

Four students of the university died during February.

A. H. Bradley, an old resident of Battle Creek, died last week.

The Dakota fever is carrying away a good many Washtenaw county people at present.

Petoskey has voted at special election to build a steamboat pier by tax, and the work will proceed at once.

The Eureka car coupler company, with $100,000 capital, has just been organized at Grand Rapids.

Mrs. Jerome Tenyck, the wife of a prominent Cheboygan businessman, dropped dead of heart disease on the 1st.

H. W. Stearns alias Henry, received a four years' sentence to state prison at Kalamazoo the other day for perjury.

B. P. Wright, of railroad fame, has just given $23,500 for a farm of 201 acres, just outside the limits of Coldwater.

Ex-Sheriff Jeans and John H. East, both of Cassopolis, will go to Dakota this spring, taking the one a house and the other a barn.

Several thousand names have been signed to a petition in Grand Rapids, praying for the abolition of the police and fire commissioners' boards.

Capt. Bontecou, of Ypsilanti, and for several years prominent in state alliance temperance work, has bought the Petoskey Record.

The barn and two horses of S. E. Brown, of Muskegon, were burned last week; loss $700. Evidentally the work of an incendiary.

S. N. Vincent, postmaster of Lapeer 22 consecutive years having been appointed by President Lincoln—gave place last Saturday to John Abbott.

The steamers Wisconsin and Michigan, which are still stuck in the ice off Grand Haven, seem to be hooked to remain so until warm weather enough arrives to thaw the ice.

The old episcopal house of worship at St. Louis has been purchased by the catholics who will organize a church, while the episcopalians will build a new house.

A Mrs. Neuman, of Port Hope, Huron county, recently died and the usual funeral arrangements were made, but before they could be carried out the deceased awoke.

Frank Cox, of St. Clair, lost a cow a few days since, and on making an examination to ascertain the cause of death, found a common darning needle in the heart.

Mr. Nelson, of Eaton county, has just imported from Vermont 50 sheep, said to be the finest lot ever brought into Michigan. For one of the bucks $500 were paid.

Alfred Palmer, aged 29, dropped dead in Bryant's billiard hall, Eaton Rapids, last Thursday. He had been playing a short time before and seemed in perfect health.

Howell has raised the necessary $1,200 bonus in aid of the Detroit and Lansing telephone line, and will soon have all the benefits of telephonic communication.

A. T. Burgess, of Maple, Ionia county, has made himself a corn sheller that will shell as fast as two men can shovel into it, and it shovels so clean that a chicken could not live on what is left on the cobs.

A pair of American bald eagles have made their home near Stony Point, Monroe county, on the margin of Lake Erie, for many years, and it is believed they are nearly if not quite 75 years old.

Huron and Sanilac counties' sportsmen are finding a great deal of fault because the law in relation to the shooting of elk is not enforced. The only specimens of this noble game left in the state are said to be in those counties.

Near Coldwater a citizen lost a valuable hog, which was found drowned in a neighbor's cistern. Now he proposes to prosecute for the value of the swine, while the owner of the cistern will sue for damage to his rain water, and for the owner allowing the hog to run at large contrary to law.

The Reed City M. E. choir has a large organ, chime of bells, three cornets, one clarionet, one double base viol and a chorus of 12 voices, under the direction of Prof. Hovey, editor of the Reed City News, who was formerly with Theodore Thomas' orchestra.

The body of an unknown man about 45 years old, was found Friday afternoon by two young men who were hunting near the news cemetery grounds just east of Ionia. He had evidently been lying in the snow for three or four weeks, was poorly dressed and had probably frozen to death.

A tramp, having the appearance of an outlaw, with a blue shirt on and pants in his boots, entered several houses on Maple street, Battle Creek's tony avenue, and after assuring himself that the man of the house was not present, bulldozed the ladies into "lending" him money and valuable jewels.

FARMERS' CLUB.

Friday evening, March 2nd, the Farmers' Club met at George Griswold's. The roads were very disagreeable, but there was a good house and a very interesting meeting was held. The music and select reading was enjoyed, and the gentlemen became quite earnest in the discussion of the question—"Which is the most profitable crop to raise, barley, oats or corn?"

Mr. J. M. Schroter thinks if the properties put on the market as soon as harvested, barley would prove the most profitable, as the expense of raising was not great, was but little trouble and was a sure crop.

Mr. Horton considers corn decided the most profitable.

Mr. Griswold thinks, taking one year with another, barley would only pay expenses, but corn is a profitable crop.

Mr. J. Benedict says, if oats were given as good a chance in soil, preparing the ground, and using fertilizers, as corn, oats and barley would be more profitable crops than corn.

Mr. A. G. Hall had raised barley but did not consider it profitable for him. He raises a few oats every year for his horses, but when he looks for profits he considers corn the crop to raise, although it is expensive.

Mr. R. B. Gillespie considers corn the most profitable, and thinks the failure of the corn crop nearly as great a misfortune as the failure of wheat.

Mr. J. Rector thinks barley and oats could be dispensed with, but that there would be great distress without corn. He considers corn as profitable a crop as farmers can raise.

The last meeting of the winter will be held Friday evening, March 16th, at John Fisher's.

SYMPTOMS.

A THROBBY RESTLESS OR THE THROBBING PAIN which attacks, as for a time it RHEUMATIC AND GOUTY SUFFERERS.

SALICYLICA is known as a common sense remedy, because it attacks disease by its first cause, Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia, as little so many scientific specifics and disposed preparations only treat for all the effects.

It has been conceded by eminent scientists that our world applications, such as rubbing with liniments, lumbago and soothing lotions will not eradicate these diseases which are the result of the poisoning of the blood with Lactic Acid.

SALICYLICA works with marvelous effect on this acid and so removes the disorder. It is now exclusively used by all celebrated physicians of America and Europe. Highest Medical Academy of Paris reports 96 per cent. cures in three days.

REMEMBER
that SALICYLICA is a certain cure for Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia. The most intense pains are subdued almost instantly.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

Brother Gardner Delivers an Oration on Lawyers.

Detroit Free Press.

"Each day as I look over my paper," said the old man as the lights were turned up, "I see a case of embezzlement, robbery, breach of trust or misuse of yodder people's money. One day it am de cashier of a bank, de next day it am some confidential clerk or a bank president, or de treasurer of some corporation. It is an era of bleedin' an' snatchin' an' fraud. No man who has money to do have of a friend, or gallopin' boys sayin' no man who drifts upon another man knows what a day may bring forth.

"Who brings dese things to pass? Who profits by it? Who kills de offenders to escape?

"There was a single thought in the hall as the president paused a'ter locking up the clock. Samuel Slim was about to rise up and explain that he didn't mean to, when Pickles Smith hit him with the big end of a potato and Brother Gardner continued:

"I arraign de law of de country an' charge de lawyers, big an' little, wid bein' de direct cause of dis reign of knavery. Three men outer five ain't honest only unto der am a chance to make a haul by bein' dishonest. One man outer three will be dishonest on all occasions when dat am a chance to escape consequences. If dar was no law to punish dishonesty, we wouldn't find one man in twenty doin' de honest thing for principles' sake. It am de fear of consequences which keeps thousands of clerks an' cashiers an' treasurers honest.

"An' what do de lawyers say to ebery man who's fingers itch to make a haul? Dey might as well advertise at reg'lar rates dat dey will guarantee to clear 'em of de law for a certain sum. Let me steal $75,000 in cash an' nine-tenths of the lawyers of Detroit will be eager to defend me—to effect a compromise—to hush it up—to clear me of punishment. About de best legal talent in America makes a spec'alty of defendin' criminals. Any lawyer ain't looked upon as good just for prosecutin' attorney, while de werry keenest talent am reserved fur defense of thieves, burglars and odder law-breakers.

"Time after time men have stolen or embezzled, an' de lawyers have taken a sheer of de plunder to clear 'em. We've had half a dozen cases right yere within two y'ars, an' we am sartin to have mo'. Let me steal a ton of coal, an' up I go. Let me get my claws on $50,000 an' I doan' go up for shucks. I may be 'rested an' toted off to jail, but inside of a week de case am settled up, an' I walk de streets a hero. De lawyers return $10,000 of de money, pocket $9,000 an' han' me fifty as a reward fur bringin' 'em a fat case.

"Suppose it war' known dat ebery burglar fa'rly convicted would receive twenty years in prison, wid no possibility of pardon, would we have one burglary war' we now have two? Who makes burglary a payin' purfeshun? De lawyer.

"If a clerk who embezzled was sartin to receive a five or ten y'ar sentence, how many cases of embezzlement would you h'ar of in a year? An' who makes embezzlement a payin' bizness? De lawyer.

"If dat Rochester bank president ain sent to state prison for twenty years, what will be de effeck on older Rochester bank presidents? But he won't be. De lawyers have gathered to his aid, an' will defeat justice.

"I am spokin' what I believe to be de solemn truf, when I say to you dat law has become a farce, an' lawyers de middle-men between robbers an' de robbed. De question am how to break de law—not how to enforce it. It am not how to put a thief into prison, but how to keep him out. It am not how to punish dishonest officials, but how to gently squeeze out as much as dey kin restore, an' forgive the remainder. Let us 'rected to bizness, feelin' dat whatever crimes we commit we stan' two chances of goin' clear to one of punishment."

Fishing on Florida Keys.

American Angler.

I need not mention what you are to take in the way of comforts, luxuries and knick-knacks, but you will want plenty of guns and fishing tackle, not spoons, flies, etc., as used in the little streams through the interior, but genuine hooks and lines—not pin hooks and spool thread lines, but steel hooks from one-eighth to one-half inch in thickness, with always a small chain of five to six feet in length, which is to be fast to the hook, in case, as is often true, a shark should take hold. The bait generally used here is mullet; these fish do not readily bite at the hook, but may be had by casting the net which your boatman or guide will be sure to take along. Now, so far as fishing is concerned, you have but to wait for the flood tide, and be located at or near some "pass," and your fun begins.

Look out, now! See that large red fish making for the bait—your blood may curdle and hair stand on end for now you are "into business." We will say that you have been fishing two hours and have some twenty-five of the finest fish in the world, these ranging in weight from five to twenty-five pounds, and embracing many varieties, such as sheepshead, trout, pompano, red fish, and two or three small sharks, called cubs, shovel-nosed, etc. But as the fun is yet in store, you must clean these fish when they are caught, while the tide is ebb, that the blood and offal may be washed into the gulf.

As the tide begins to flow prepare for one of the greatest events of a fisherman's career. Bring the ax, cut a solid stake four to six inches in diameter and five to six feet long, sharpen and drill it into the ground two-thirds or three-quarters of its length; now get out the "business" line and the devil-hook, put on five or six pounds of this red fish, and all hands "stand by."

There! there! he's on, hold fast—keep the line from slipping or working up and let one man hold the top of the stake—let him worry a little—all hands now for a pull.

His head being out, the ax will be serviceable. This is a shark—a whale—the lion of the deep! One feels that he never wants to bathe in the surf again. We will take this fellow's jaw bone and dry it for a trophy—a keepsake, a frightful curiosity, plenty large for a small man to crawl through when open.

A Hero.

Dr. J. H. Hanaford.

He is a hero, an illustrious conqueror, who assails and conquers his prejudices, charges upon and routes his youthful errors and unfortunate tendencies, is brave in the great conflict between the animal propensities and the higher nature, restoring harmony by bringing the whole body-realm into subjection to the mind and conscience. No man ever waged a fiercer warfare than this, demanding the struggles of a life time.

SENATOR JONES' POKER GAME.

How he Won $75,000 at Cards in Half an Hour.

Stockton (Mo.)

George L. Waters, the colored janitor of the city hall, related an incident to stay to a Mail reporter concerning a big poker game in which Senator Jones of Nevada was a player. Waters had been in the employ of certain congressmen around the capitol at Washington for many years, and his statement may be accepted as true. It was several years ago, before the millionaire had become thoroughly posted in the ways of Washington society. Almost before he had comfortably settled in his seat in the senate he was introduced into the District club, of which Boss Shepherd was a prominent member. Poker at that time was the prominent recreation of the club, and Jones was induced to take a hand. Although a novice at the game, he retired from the game losser to the amount of $70,000. The senator, having a few silver mines at his back, pocket money was gone, and did not evince the least hesitation in checking or signing for the money. The next morning he telegraphed to one of the most expert card sharps in Virginia. Eight days afterward the gambler arrived in Washington, dressed in a very expensive suit of clothes and sporting a small fortune in the way of diamonds. Jones introduced the gambler to the club as a mining millionaire from Nevada, and the star-route frauds and navy thieves immediately made arrangements to pluck him. He accepted the invitation to play. The stakes ran high and the sharper's millions were well supplied with Jones' money. After the close of the tournament, the stranger rose from the table the winner of $300,000 at the game. It was a severe blow to the ringsters, but they saw the people of the United States pay it back to them indirectly and in short order they divided the swag with his friend and never set foot in the club-rooms again.

Nat Goodwin's Notions.

Spirit of The Times.

"I have had no time," writes Nat Goodwin, "to struggle with grammar and join McCullough and the other great tragedians in The North American Review in publishing my views on the subject of Success on the Stage. Besides, I prefer another medium of communicating the thoughts which dance too much for me in the world at large. To a beginner, I should advise one of two things. First, he may join a good old stock company, if he can find one in the woods anywhere, and remain a member of it for about forty years. By that time he will have so worked himself up as to receive a living salary, support stars and be prepared for a testimonial on the fiftieth anniversary, whacking up with the manager, of course. This reward of merit virtually amounts to a half clear benefit every fifty years. If very healthy and successful the actor may catch two of them and die. Second, if the beginner does not fancy that way, he can hire some variety show, purchase a sparkling comic song from some good writer; have it set to music; get W. Carleton, Charles Gayler, McDonald or McCaskey to write a plot around the song and he will be engaged for a forty week's season, and may be longer, at a high salary. But if the beginner takes the second way, he must never own that success was easy. I find that all the really great actors who have been boosted to the top of the tree by chance, notoriety or money, are very fond of referring to their days and nights of toil and struggle and of proving how very hard they work now. I have had toils and struggles and hard work myself; but it was generally after the performance was over, and I might better have been at home in bed. The midnight oil theory is beautiful; but I never saw it in practice, did you? It is so easy to study and struggle when you feel the Bank of California at your back. I believe than an actor should study acting; attend to his business like other people, and, when he draws a prize in the lottery of the profession, thank heaven for it, endeavor to deserve it, and keep quiet about the price of midnight oil, and his wrestles with the wick. The Review may copy."

The Grand Divisions of a Newspaper

Cincinnati Enquirer.

If you look at a newspaper you will observe that it is divided into a few departments, broadly distinguished from each other. These departments are: First, the record of events, as law, usually embracing and at the head of every news. Second, the list of prices current, or page of financial and commercial matter, or whatever pertains to trade throughout the paper. Third, the leader, that is, the expression of opinion on political affairs which the editor of the paper makes, whether he chooses to make it in long winded essays or in short, crisp paragraphs. Fourth, the general news, which modern convenience has divided into local, telegraphic, correspondence and miscellany—that is, selections from other newspapers, but which in point of origin are practically identical. Cincinnati news written for a Cincinnati paper is local; telegraphed to Chicago it becomes a dispatch; related in a letter to New York it becomes correspondence; clipped and credited, or unpedigreed, in a London paper, it becomes miscellany. Births, deaths and marriage notices were of old considered very important events, and they form a distinct and very prominent feature of the modern newspaper; but journalistic law now places them among those matters of purely personal interest, which should be paid for by the people who use them.

It's Natural.

Chicago News.

The west side is howling forward in an attitude of intense listening. A scandal, partly smothered, but threatening to break forth fiercely, is reported, in one of the churches, and expectation is on tip toe.

"What a shame," said one good brother to another yesterday, "what a shame that such a thing should get into the newspapers. I never could understand this disgusting curiosity."

"Neither," returned the other. "What's the row about the matter?"

And then these two old coons fell into the gossiping the case and to expressing opinions like a couple of ancient women at a tea party.

The Montreal Man's Experience.

A Montreal man sent several barrels of Canadian apples to Queen Victoria, Gladstone, Lord Dufferin and Gen. Wolseley. He received letters of acknowledgment from all except the Queen, whose secretary wrote: "Her Majesty commands me to say that she fully appreciates your kindness. In sending the apples, but it is a rule that favors of this nature cannot be accepted. However, on account of their perishable nature, the apples cannot be returned." What became of them was not explained.

Idleness.

Many young people think that an idle life must be a pleasant one; but there are none who enjoy so little, and are such burdens to themselves, as those who have nothing to do. Those who are obliged to work hard all day enjoy their short periods of rest and recreation so much that they are apt to think if their whole lives were spent in rest and recreation, it would be the most pleasant of all. But this is a mistake, as they would soon find out if they made a trial of life very irksome. One who never knew how to enjoy rest, for it implies a relief from previous labor, if his whole time were spent in idleness, we should find it more tiresome than the hardest day's work. Recreation is only valuable as it relends to the idle can know nothing of it. Many people, tired of business and idle, desirous of a life of enjoyment, find they generally find that they are not merry or happy as they were before they left their occupation to escape the miseries of indolence.

Beware of Them.

A good article that has achieved success, and attained a world-wide reputation by its merits and wonderful results, is always imitated. Such is the case with Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Already unprincipled parties are endeavoring to delude an unsuspecting public by offering imitations of this most fortunate discovery. Do not be deceived, but insist on having the true remedy, and take no other. Trial bottle free. Large size $1.

Charcoal for Fowls.

The following experiment, given in the American Cultivator, will bring fresh to mind what many know as to the value of charcoal, not only when fattening turkeys but other fowls: It will also be found a good corrective when used occasionally in winter when the fowls are confined to their quarters.

"Four turkeys were confined in a pen, and fed on meal, boiled potatoes and oats. Four others of the same brood were also at the same time confined in another pen, and fed daily on the same articles, but with a pint of very finely pulverized charcoal mixed with their food. They also had a plentiful supply of broken charcoal in their pen. The eight were killed on the same day, and there was a difference of a pound and a half each in favor of the fowls which had been supplied with charcoal, the being much the fattest, and the meat being greatly superior in point of flavor and tenderness."

Never Give Up.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility, disordered blood, weak constitution, headache, or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Fifty cents a bottle.

OBSTINACY AND IGNORANCE.—The obstinate man is generally an ignorant one, and a slave to his own opinions. His belief is proof against his reason. The slighter and more inconsistant his opinions are the faster he holds them, otherwise they would fall asunder of themselves; for opinions that are false ought to be held with more strictness and assurance than those that are true, otherwise they are apt to betray their owner before they are aware. He delights most of all to differ in things indifferent, no matter how frivolous they are, they are weighty enough in proportion to his weak judgment; and he will rather suffer self-martyrdom than part with the least scruple of his free-hold; for it is impossible to dye his dark ignorance into a lighter color. He is resolved to understand no man's reason but his own, because he finds no man can understand his but himself. To try to reason with such a man is labor wasted.

A COMPARISON.

During the past fiscal year of the village, from March 1st, '82, to March 1st, '83, a new plan was adopted in working out the street tax, the village keeping a team of its own to work on the streets. The following figures are obtained from official sources and can be relied upon as correct.

Hudson is figuring for a new railroad too. The Gazette of last week has this to say on the subject: A gentleman just returned from a trip thro' Canada, where he met a number of the higher officials of the Grand Trunk system, is the authority for the following statement: The Grand Trunk are looking for Southern business and have a great desire for Cincinnati connections. The scheme that they have dimly outlined is a line from Jackson, Mich., south through Somerset, Hudson, Fayette and so on to Cincinnati. The country through which the line would pass is a good one and capable of furnishing local traffic to a paying extent. A new route between Detroit and Cincinnati would then be opened, trains being run via South Lyon, Stockbridge and Jackson. It may be some little time before this line will be built, but it has been talked of, and very seriously too.

Clinton News: Merritt Martin, who works the old Halladay place, just north of town, met with a terrible accident last Thursday afternoon, the result of which will affect his whole future life. He was cutting feed with a power straw cutter. Something was going into the machine which he did not wish to and in endeavoring to take it out, his mitten caught in the knives which drew his right hand in and cut and mashed it in a horrible manner.

Morenci Observer: The present indications are that the county agricultural society cannot, for the lack of proper grounds, hold its next fair at Adrian, and that either Tecumseh or Morenci will be the place chosen for the purpose. As Morenci has the best fair ground in southern Michigan, the county fair can unquestionably be best accommodated here, but whether satisfactory arrangements can be made for the purpose is another question.

NEUTRALIZED

In what was a Prevalent Evil may be Shorn of its Power to Harm.

Malaria is a broad name for many diseases—all originating in blood poisoning. Bilious fever, the typhus and typhoid fevers and chills and fever are prominent members of the family. Malaria defies alike the builders, the plumbers and the physicians. Despairing of ordinary treatment, the latter almost unanimously recommend BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER as the greatest anti-malarial specific of the age. These plasters act upon the liver, spleen, bowels and kidneys.

Worn over the region of the liver, and upon the back over the kidneys, they ward off malaria like an armor. No other plasters do this.

When you purchase, satisfy yourself that the word CAPCINE is cut in the center of the plaster.

Leading Chicago Physicians express themselves as follows:

CHICAGO, July 16th, 1882.

I am an advocate for the wearing of Corsets, but if the ladies will persist in wearing them I think "SCHILLING'S HEALTH PRESERVING CORSET" the best and least injurious of any I have examined.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

MACON MURMURS.

Wm. Boyd, of Albion, is visiting his brother, John Boyd.

Lyman Davenport will leave the Lake Ridge House and move to Fowlerville about the first of April.

The young people had a very enjoyable time at I. S. Osborn's last Friday evening, it being the occasion of his retiring from housekeeping.

The farmers and their wives to the number of 24 filed in at J. W. Sherman's last week Wednesday afternoon in the form of a surprise picnic. You can guess at the rest.

The Wiggins' storm did not appear in all of its predicted severity hereabouts. It is barely possible that the "faith cure" had something to do in warding it off.

Edmund Hand died the 7th inst., after a lingering illness of over a year. A post mortem revealed cancer of the stomach.

Mrs. John Steele, one of our most respected and congenial citizens, died the 10th inst.

MACON CENTER CUTS.

The Free Will Baptists will hold an oyster supper at Mrs. Jane Collins' next Friday evening.

Miss Altie Thomas who has been confined to the house for some time with a lame foot is once more able to go out.

Several of our teachers, and some of the village pupils attended the examination last Saturday to find out the extent of their knowledge.

Elder Whitmore occupied the M. E. pulpit last Sunday afternoon.

Amandrus Heifu having purchased a farm near Caro, Tuscola county, will move his family to their new home this week.

Considerable shifting about among the villagers this spring

FRANKLIN FACTS.

The East Franklin literary adjourned without date on Friday evening last.

School dist No 1. has engaged the services of Miss Hattie Irish, of Adrian, for the spring term. Miss Lelia Van Valkenburg teaches Dist No. 9, and Geo. J. Tripp is retained in Dist No. 4

The second term of singing school closed on Thursday evening of last week. We understand Mr. Gordon intends to organize a class in Tecumseh.

Mr. Electus Rundell is recovering from a sickness which has confined him to his bed for several weeks past.

Rev. Mr. Cowan closed his labors with us last Sabbath. Mr. Cowan has made many friends here during his stay with us, and we regret that he is unable to remain longer.

The pulpit of the Congregational church was occupied last Sunday morning by Prof. Williams of Olivet college. The Prof. is working in the interest of the college and gave a glowing description of the founding, growth and condition of that institution. While many of the people of Franklin are desirous of obtaining an education yet few allow their ambition to carry them through a college course. In view of this fact we think a graded school at the Center would be a great benefit to the community, and think a movement in that direction would meet the approval and support of many of our citizens.

EAST TECUMSEH TATTLE.

School closed last Friday with an examination of the scholars in some of the branches they had been pursuing during the term; they did credit to themselves and showed to their friends that they had not been idle this winter.

If the Tecumseh correspondents of the Clinton News would take a little more pains to post themselves, they could report the items of East Tecumseh a little more correct, as the Literary Society nor any other society is not going to give a "Dramatic Entertainment at their School House on Monday eve next," but the scholars are to have an Exhibition on Tuesday eve. The Literary has nothing to do with it.

There was a good attendance at the Literary last Saturday evening, and a very good program was carried out. The following question will be discussed at the next meeting:

Resolved, That the U. S. senator should be elected by the people.

Affirmative—J. T. Boyce, Grant Garlinghouse, B. A. Garlinghouse.

Negative—A. S. Murphy, B. J. Garlinghouse, Sam Boyce.

The following questions are to be answered at the next meeting:

What voting rights do territorial representatives have in Congress?

What is the age of the world?

Was England ever a Republic, if so at what period?

Answered by Philip Kehoe.

Has Ireland the same privileges to the British government as Scotland?

Answered by B. F. DePuy.

What occupation had the Savior previous to entering the ministry?

Answered by Willie Boyce.

LATER.

The exhibition given by the scholars of East Tecumseh was a complete success. A small admission of 10 cts. was charged, which netted them $7.90 with which they purpose to purchase a good eight day clock.

A NEW BOOK.

"Bullet and Shell" is the title of a new war book published by C. G. G. Paine, of Detroit, Mich. It is written by Geo. F. Williams and gives a soldier's experience in the army of the Potomac. An agent will canvass this section at an early day for subscribers and he ought to secure many names for the work. The following extracts will give some idea of the character of the book:

A Bivouac in the Shenandoah.—The scene in the Valley at that moment was a very beautiful one. The sun had just dropped behind the hill-tops, and the air was cool, while a delicious breeze sprang up and came to us laden with the perfume of the fields and woods. The scattered fires among the camps were beginning to burn brighter as the shades of evening grew darker, and the warlike appearance of the landscape assumed a softer beauty. The tents, the fires, the shrill neighing of the cavalry horses, the hoarse challenges of the sentinels, and the occasional dropping shots on the distant picket-lines, gave active life to the picture.

A Confederate Field-Hospital.—During the afternoon we were gladdened by the appearance of Surgeon Donovan of the Pennsylvania Reserves, he having voluntarily come through the lines under a flag of truce to look after us. The doctor was a character. Short in stature, his red hair cropped close to his head, while his fiery beard was allowed to grow luxuriantly, he looked like any thing but a skillful surgeon. His uniform consisted of a velvet peajacket, and a pair of corduroy pantaloons, which fitted his well-formed legs and permitted his wearing a huge pair of tan-colored boots reaching to his waist. Making his rounds in a cheerful way that was very engaging, the doctor soon ascertained our condition, and selected those who must undergo immediate amputation.

LIST OF JURORS.

COUNTY CONDENSATIONS.

L. P. Wheeler is in Hudson this week with his "Rambles."

Ann Eliza Young held forth at Morenci last Tuesday evening.

Adrianites complain that their saloons are not closed on Sundays.

A number of Blissfield people contemplate a trip to Dakota this spring.

Will Schermerhorn, of Hudson, started for Council Bluffs, Iowa, last week.

Hudson is soon to have an amateur Operetta under the direction of Dr. Smart.

A Fairfield man estimates that at the current price of milk last season, it cost 27 cents a pound to make butter.

At the village election at Morenci last week it was decided by a large majority to build a $8,000 city hall.

Twenty persons, mostly young people, joined the Congregational church at Hudson one week ago last Sunday.

Adrian seems to have much trouble with the water works business. The "wire pullers" are again at work; this time in the shape of a local company. May the Lord have mercy on them.

The Seneca postoffice is in a dilema from the fact that the Wabash authoritives refuse longer to deliver mails there, so that at present the office is not connected with the outer world by any route.

As is illustrated by the loss of the Adrian Brick and Tile Machine Co. at Adrian last week, insurance pays good interest on the investment, as fire is likely to occur at any moment, no matter how great care is taken to prevent it.

Morenci Observer: Thirty-one years ago the Lenawee court house at Adrian was destroyed by fire.

You have a good memory, Bro. Allen but we doubt at the present outlook should you live thirty-one years longer that you could remember the building of another one.

Adrian Times:—John Kirchner, the Blissfield man who was arrested for not supporting his wife, was discharged to-day by Justice Turner, on his payment of all costs, and his solemn hope-to-die promise that he will attend strictly to his family duties in the future.

Morenci Observer. The remains of poor old Daniel Butts, a long time resident of Medina township, who died last week in the county poor house, not being claimed by any relative or friend, were sent to the dissecting room of the university at Ann Arbor.

Morenci Observer: Dr. Stevenson, who is quite extensively engaged in the honey business, reports that of the 72 swarms of bees with which he entered the winter he has 66 that come out in first-rate order, the loss being less than the average during the winter months.

The Post and Gazette, at Hudson, seem to feel edgewise towards each other. They are gradually paving the way for trouble, at least the articles in either paper have done nothing towards making peace in the village council, or to help the tax-payers of the village of Hudson.

Hudson Post: Prosecuting Attorney Salsbury has convicted Patrick Riley and his bar-tender, John Kernan, for selling liquor on Sunday. They have appealed to the Circuit Court. Salsbury has proved an able prosecutor, and his friends hereabout are much pleased with his record.

Hudson Gazette:—We hear it said some of the county supervisors do not take kindly to the proposition of the city of Adrian to be rigged up with a full complement of city offices in the new court-house by paying $15,000 towards the construction of the building. They seem to think Adrian will be getting to many oats for a shilling.

Blissfield Advance: There is some talk that the next Supervisor should be a resident of the village, and that village property should be assessed in proportion to farm property. It is claimed that farms which are now being held and sold at $100 and over per acre, are assessed at only about one-third that amount, while village property is assessed nearly its full value.—A change in the order of things is demanded.

Blissfield Advance:—Nine dollars and a half was paid Uncle Robert Pollard last Friday by the Lenawee County Mutual Protection Society, it being the amount of expenses incurred by Mr. Pollard for recovery of his team stolen by the thieves who went through the Post-office and Doan's jewelry store some time ago. Mr. Pollard has belonged to the association for thirty years and feels that it is a good institution and every farmer should be a member of it.

The latest thing in railroading is a grain elevator on wheels. It is a patent car about twice as large as ordinary freight cars, constructed with an apparatus that transfers its contents to cars on an adjoining track in short order. At a recent exhibition with these cars, four carloads of corn were transferred in 10 minutes, without wasting a handful of the grain. Railroad men and grain shippers are of the opinion that these transfer cars will come into general use, and prove a great convenience to both railroads and shippers.

LIFE.

The following remarkable compilation is a contribution to the San Francisco Times from the pen of Mrs. H. A. Deming. The reader will notice that each line is a quotation from some of the standard authors of England and America. A NIGHT WITH WOLVES.

It was about thirty-five years ago that my father, then a noted civil engineer, was chosen to survey a road between Detroit and Lansing. It was literally work in the wilderness. My father, who was a domestic man, became tired after a few months of his loneliness, and resolved to have his wife and children with him.

He took a furlough, came on to Baltimore, and started back with us in two days, giving my mother but little time for preparation. But he was a driving, hot-tempered, as well as an affectionate man, and never felt that any obstacle was of sufficient importance to stand in the way of any whim or wish of his own.

Such fiery energy is a useful quality, no doubt, but when carried to the extreme, as in my father's case, is likely to bring discomfort, and possibly misery, into business relations and the home circle.

It was early in December when we approached the end of our journey, having but thirty miles to make before reaching Lansing.

The weather was bitterly cold, and the snow lay deep upon the ground. At the last village in which we stopped my mother desired to remain a day or two, that the children might rest. There was three of us. Mary aged nine, myself, a big boy of six, and the baby, scarcely two months old.

But my father conscious of no fatigue himself, could not enter into the feelings of weak children.

Nonsense, Jane! he said; after this long journey to stop just at the door of home! I have a cosy little house for you. We will push on and reach Lansing by nightfall. Think how pleasant it will be to rest in your own house with bright fires and a good supper to welcome you.

My mother made no further objection, and we continued our journey. The stage lumbered heavily through the snow, and it was nealy dark when we stopped for supper at an inn, still nearly fifteen miles distant from Lansing.

When supper was over, my mother seated herself with the children at the blazing fire, when my father's voice was heard outside blustering angrily.

Why have the horses been put away? he shouted to the landlord.

I did not suppose it possible for you to go on to-night, Col. McLure.

What business had you to suppose anything about it? What should hinder me from going on? cried my father.

Save your anger for your slaves, Colonel, said the landlord, coolly. There is nothing to hinder you, but there is much to hinder a delicate woman and children. It's not likely you'll reach Lansing until morning, the snow is so deep, and the track is hard to find.

My mother went out and called, softly, Charles, let me speak to you a moment! She was a gentle, weak little woman. Charles, cannot we stay here all night? I am so tired, and the children—let us stay; and her eyes filled with tears.

You always were a lazy little thing, pulling her playfully by the ear, Go; bundle up! We'll be off in ten minutes, and be at home before nine o'clock.

Colonel! The landlord beckoned him aside. I did not wish to speak of it before Mrs. McLure, but the roads between here and Lansing have been infested with wolves all winter.

Bah! wretched little cayotes! You know there's no more danger in them than in so many rats. It's only a poor trick to bring custom to your tavern, Joe.

Stop there, colonel; not another word, sir!

The landlord turned away. He was a man of much rectitude and good sense, and he was justly offended.

Put the horses to the coach? said the hostler. Does the Colonel know?

He does not choose to listen, said the landlord; but he'll be wiser before morning. Hitch up the horses.

You must not think my father intentionally hard or cruel; but he was an old army officer, used to having his own way, and to disciplining weaker people than himself.

We drove on slowly. The night was dark and cold, but my mother wrapped Mary and me up in cloaks and buffalo skins, and held the baby close to her breast, and we were comfortable enough.

Snug?—little man? called my father from time to time. Feet warm, Jane? Little Mary's sound asleep, God bless her! It's not such a frightful journey after all, eh? I don't want you to think I am too hard on you.

You hard, Charles! said my mother, who could not bear that he should blame himself. You are always right, dear.

My father after that soon went to sleep. He did not waken for a couple of hours, and then only because the stage coach stopped.

Lansing, eh! Here we are? Why, this is the middle of the woods! he cried, jumping out. What ails you, Sam? What are you stopping here for? he said to the driver.

Well, to tell the truth, stammered Sam, I've lost the way. I don't get the bearings just right.

I'll soon find it for you.

No, you'll not, Colonel, said Sam, decisively. You never were in these woods before. Just you keep inside, and mind your own business. This is my business.

My father was too good a disciplinarian not to understand the force of the statement. He sat still, though impatient and scolding, while Sam got down and tramped through the intermiddle rows of black pillared trunks, seeking vainly for some landmark.

They're all as confounding alike as—he muttered, scrambling into his seat. If only the stars would out!

How far have you come?

Ten mile—or meble five. This hyar snow [illegible] hesitated Sam. Gee up up now! whipping up his four horses with a faint show of energy.

They made a start and then stopped, the leaders giving a neigh of terror.

Heaven help us! cried Sam. A far-off cry, like shrill yelps, was heard. My father started up.

Don't be uneasy, Jane, he said quietly I am going out on the box with Sam. Keep the children quiet, if possible. Don't let the baby cry.

What is it, Charles?

Oh, no matter! Lynxes catamounts some miserable wood vermin.

The next moment he was beside Sam. Drive for your life. They are no cayotes—they are the great gray wolves!

I know it; they have been in the woods all winter.

That's what Joe meant?

Yes, when you wouldn't listen.

But it was no time for recrimination. The horses, urged by terror, needed no whipping. They dashed forward. The coach, racking to and fro, dashed violently at times against the trees. The cries of the wolves drew nearer. They were upon us! They leaped upon the coach, hung upon the boot, ran yelping alongside.

My father had placed a pair of pistols in Sam's hands. Both men fired alternately. But they had to stop to load, for it was before the day of revolvers.

One fierce red-eyed brute sprang upon the window, from which little Mary, escaping from my mother had thrust out her head. My father fired, and he fell back on the yelling pack below. They stopped a moment to tear him to pieces, and for that moment the coast was clear.

Then they came back with fresh fury. One of the horses gave a yell, human in agony.

It's Susy! cried Sam. They've torn her throat. The mare was one of the leaders. My father drew his knife, and with great risk, crept along the pole between the running wheel-horses, and cut the traces and reins of the two leaders. The dying horse dropped on one side of the vehicle, and the other leader broke from him and fled through the woods.

These two'll not take us in, said Sam.

No. But we'll fight every inch.

The wolves had gathered about the fallen mare. The moon began to rise, and showed their number. My mother declared there were thousands of them. But she was not in a condition to count very accurately.

The two wheel-horses dragged the coach about half a mile. Then the pack came up again, leaped on their haunches, and tore the poor brutes so that the flesh hung in great strips.

Cut down another horse. That will keep them back ten minutes, said Sam, with white lips and staring eyes. He had fought silently and bravely. But he was thinking now of his wife and baby.

That would be to burn our ship with a vengeance, said my father. What would we do then?

Bring the women and children to the top of the stage and fight until our ammunition's gone.

I have two charges left.

Then we are lost!

At that moment my mother, who had not uttered a sound before, cried out. A wolf had leaped half into the window, and was scratching to get into the coach. My father shot him dead. He was not likely to miss his mark with that shot.

And now the black swarming beasts sprang headlong on the horses. They staggered and fell.

It is all over, muttered my father.

But my mother, who had been praying inside, was not so sure of that. Just then came a frightful noise of shouts, horns, guns firing, dogs barking. The wolves paused, pricked their ears—turned, and suddenly scattered through the woods.

The freed leader had fortunately outrun the wolves, and had reached Lansing and coming to the hotel, his bloody sides and cut traces had told the story. In five minutes, every man and boy in town was out to hunt wolves.

We were but two miles from the village, so that we slept in our own house that night after all, and from every other house in the town some little token of good-will was sent to make our sleep the happier.

My father was a changed man from that day—a tender, considerate husband and father. So that the night with the wolves brought a blessing in the morning, as the dark hours in life often do.

Curious Bibles.

Certain editions of the Bible, owing to the errors they contained, have received many odd names. What is known as the "Breeches Bible" (Geneva 1560), was so called because Genesis iii., 7, was translated: "They sewed fig leaves together and made breeches," instead of "aprons" as in the English version now used. In the Treacle Bible (1568), Jeremiah viii., 22, was made to read: "Is there no treacle in Gilead," instead of "balm," and in 1609 the word was changd to "rosin;" "balm" was first used in 1161. The "Vinegar Bible," printed in Oxford in 1717 by John Basket, derives its name from the heading of Luke xx., which was made to read: "The parable of the vinegar." The book had many other errors from which it has also been called, after the printer's name, "A Basket of errors." In 1631 a Bible was printed in England, and in 1632 another appeared in Germany, both of which made the seventh commandment read: "Thou shalt commit adultery," the word "not" being omitted. It has very appropriately been called the "Wicked Bible."

Celluloid.

Celluloid is a composition of fine tissue paper and camphor, treated with chemicals by a patented process. A rather common impression that it contains gun-cotton is a mistake, which arises from confounding it with collodion. Celluloid, it is said, is entirely non-explosive, and burns only when in direct contact with flame. When crude it looks like transparent gum, and its color is a light yellow-brown. It can be made as hard as ivory, but is always flexible, and can be moulded into any conceivable form. With equal ease it can be colored in any hue desired, the color running through the entire substance and being therefore indelicable. Celluloid has made great inroads on the business of the ivory manufacturers, it makes a strong claim, that in durability it is much superior to ivory, as it sustains hard knocks without injury and is not discolored by age or use. Great quantities are used for piano and organ keys. Billiard balls are made of celluloid at half the price of ivory, and are more durable and true in shape.

Large amounts are used for combs of every variety, for the backs of brushes and hand mirrors, and for all kinds of toilet articles for which ivory has been employed. Among many other articles in which celluloid takes the place of ivory or india rubber, are whip, cane and umbrella handles, every kind of harness trimmings, foot rules, chessmen, and the handles of knives and forks.

The freedom of celluloid from sulphur, and the natural flesh color which can be imparted to it, have caused it to be extensively substituted for india rubber in the manufacture of dental blanks, or the gums and other attachments of artificial teeth, and is superior for pencil cases, jewelry, etc., where gold mountings are used, as it does not tarnish the metal.

Celluloid can be mottled so as to imitate the finest tortoise-shell, and in this form it is used for combs, card cases, cigar cases, match boxes, pocket books, napkin rings, jewelry, and all kinds of fancy articles. Instead of amber it is made into mouth-pieces for pipes, cigar holders and musical instruments, and is so much like the material of flutes, hageolets and clarionets. For drumheads it is said to be superior to parchment, as it is not affected by moisture in the atmosphere. As a substitute for porcelain, celluloid is used for dolls' heads, which can be hammered on the floor without danger of fracture. Beautiful jewelry is made of it in imitation of the most elaborately carved coral, reproducing all the shades of the genuine article.

One large establishment is employed exclusively in making optical goods, using celluloid in black of tortoise-shell, etc., etc., for frames of spectacles, eye glasses and opera glasses. It is also extensively used for shoe tips instead of metal tips, having the appearance of patent leather, is also used for insoles. Large quantities of thimbles are made from it, and it is said to be the best material known for emery wheels and knife sharpeners.

Another branch of celluloid manufacture has been developed which promises to reach enormous proportions. This is the use of celluloid as a substitute for linen or paper shirt cuffs, collars, etc. It has the appearance of well starched linen, is sufficiently light and flexible, does not wrinkle, is not affected by perspiration, and can be worn for months without injury, and is easily cleaned with soap and water. From six to twelve thousand dozen collars and cuffs are made each week, and orders are coming in from all parts of the country. It has been lately used for watch cases, and there seems to be no limit to uses of this most wonderful product.

Raisins, Foreign and Domestic.

The United States is the greatest raisin consuming country in the world, and uses annually more raisins than the whole of Europe. This market is only supplied from Spain, the raisins known as the "Malagas" being considered the best. They come from a comparatively narrow strip of country in the south of Spain, which has hitherto been regarded as surpassing all other regions for raising raisins of that character. The annual yield of Malaga grapes averages 2,250,000 boxes of twenty pounds each. It sometimes reaches 2,500,000 boxes, and last season 2,000,000 were marketed. Of this enormous yield the United States takes fully one-half, on which it pays a duty of 2½ cents per pound. The American raisins are made from a white grape, the "Muscat of Alexandria," to the raising of which the soil and climate of a large portion of California are so well adapted. The vine begins to bear somewhat in the second year, although the full bearing is not developed until it is five years old, and continues to bear for half a century, and sometimes for seventy-five years. In the cultivation of raisin grapes, American grape-growers have little to learn of Spain, but in the curing and packing of grapes a lack of experience is still felt. The raisins are not cured by any artificial process, however, but in a comparatively simple manner. The grapes are laid on gravel beds, and are exposed to the sun for ten or twelve days in August or September, when they are ready for packing, having turned from white to brown, and gradually changed to their familiar dark color of the raisins of commerce. The white sugar which is generally found attached to the raisins sold in the market is entirely a natural product of the grape, and comes on with age—first appearing, as a rule, when the raisins are about two years old.

Society and Solitude.

A correspondent writes that she thinks her health would be much better if she did not get so lonesome, and asks if lonesomeness is not the cause of a morbid condition bordering on disease? To which we answer, that man naturally seeks society and also solitude. A harmonious change from one to the other is essential to the best health. Where there is too much society he is apt to wear out prematurely. It is not easy to arrange life so as to have just enough of each. If every hour brings a swarm of company, the result upon the moral nature is unfavorable. If, on the other hand, man is too much isolated from his fellow men, his social nature suffers, and the mental faculties are not properly developed. Lonesome people who live in the country should make friends of nature; animals, plants, and trees. These become to them, in a certain sense, society. A horse and dog make very good friends indeed, and rarely give offense.

There is one curious featnre about the many attempts to assassinate royal dignitaries in Europe, and that is that the men selected to do it were all such poor shooters.

A Shiftless Farmer.

So long as it pays to have a suit of clothes to wear or a meal of victuals to eat, farming pays; and when I hear so many farmers (if they deserve the name of farmers) complain that it does not pay, I think there is something wrong somewhere.

Not long since I called upon a gentleman who claims to be a farmer. As he has lived on the same farm for over forty years, he ought to be one if he is not. On going into his barn, I found half a dozen native cows. I asked him how his crops thrived.

Oh! very well; they are all I have to depend on, and if it was not for them I could not get a cent from my farm. I asked him why he did not keep more cows. He said that was all he could keep with what other stock he had. So, of course, I wished to see his other stock, supposing he had some young stock; instead of that I found three old horses, and a yoke of oxen. There was evidently something wrong here, and I could not help remarking to him that, as his farm was suitable for a horse team, if he could dispose of the lot, and get two good cows, they would do all of his work, and he would save enough for four more cows than he was now keeping, thereby adding over $200 yearly to his income.

Then we looked into the barn cellar where he kept his hogs. There were two of them about fifteen months old, and they would dress about two hundred and fifty pounds each. He said it did not pay to raise pork.

"Confound hogs!" said he "they root so they can't grow any," and so saying he threw a stick at one of them that was in the act of rooting up a large stone from the bottom of the cellar. I suggested to him to put fifty loads of muck into the cellar, and the manure, as fast as it accumulated, for the hogs to work over; but he said he had no time, and could not get money to pay a hired man. That was enough to satisfy me that it did not pay him to farm.

It is just such men as this who always complain that farming does not pay. But why don't they give up the farm and engage in some other business, if it pays so poorly? The fact is they would make a failure of any thing they undertook, no matter what, for a man who is successful in one business will be in another if he understands it, and a man should never take the management of a farm unless he understands it in all of its branches and one that understands and likes it, you will never hear say it does not pay. I have heard men say, "I would not give my farm for a whole city, if I had to live there, for you cannot breathe anything but coal gas, or see anything but brick walls." Such men will always make farming pay; and have no difficulty in raising steers that will dress from five to seven hundred at two years old, or pigs that will dress three hundred at six months old.

What Every House Needs.

One of the worst faults of our very faulty modern achitecture, as applied to houses, is found in the fact that our architects do not take into their plan the possibilities of sickness in the family. Now no house is properly constructed that has not in it a room or rooms expressly designed for the accommodation of the sick and infirm. This room should, in the first place, have a warm, sunny exposure. The window light should be ample, and command the widest possible view. The first essential in a sick room is a good, liberal fireplace. Through it, and by means of the warmth which it generates, the whole room is kept in its athospheric conditions wholesome and pure. Not only so, but a slow, burning fire, with its lights and shades, its rising sparks and glowing brands, its curling and many colored smoke, and its changeful embers, furnishes ceaseless diversion to the sick one who lies watching it. Nothing is more soothing and quieting than the influence which subtly steals into the senses of him who gazes dreamily into the gentle flame. It is a companionship itself. The walls, too, should have their proper adornments. Pictures that suggest quiet and peace, and the free fresh life of nature outside, should be on them. A bracket, with its vases of flowers; a green clambering vine, clinging ambitiously to the ceiling; a library case filled with familiar books; curtains that soften the light while admitting it—all these are helpful to one who lies in weakness, and can take no more of life than what a little room reveals. The object of the construction and location of a sick-room should be to give perfect accommodation and protection to the invalid, while at the same time it suggests the beauty and freedom of being unconfined—the life and animation of the great out-door world beyond.

Respect Your Mother.

Despise not your mother when she is old. Age may wear and waste a mother's beauty, senses, strength and estate but her relation as a mother is as the sun when it goes forth in its might, always in the meridian, and knoweth no evening. The person may be gray-haired and wrinkled, but motherly devotion is always in its bloom. It may be autumn—aye, winter—but with the mother it is always spring. Alas! how little do we appreciate a mother's tenderness while living. How heedless are we in youth of all her anxiety and kindness. But when she is dead and gone, when the cares and coldness of this world come withering to our heart, then it is that we think, with bitter tears and unavailing regret, of the mother we have lost.

Gold is a good conductor of electricity, has a higher fusing point than silver, requiring very nearly 2,300° Fah. to melt it, while it is not acted upon by mineral acids, such as nitric, which dissolves silver. It is however attacked by any of the halogens, such as fluorin, chlorin, bromin and iodin, or the acids of any of these elements. The most ready and usual solvent is a mixture of nitric with two parts of hydrochloric acid, which by reason of its capacity to attack the king of metals, is called aqua regia, or royal water.

Muller tells us in the fourth book of his "Dorians," that in Lesbos, and some other parts of Greece, each under the lead of some woman of distinguished genius for the cultivation of poesy, music refinement, and grace of manners, and the other elegant arts, girls were sent from distant cities, and even from foreign lands, to be educated in these societies. Sappho was the head of one of them. She calls her house "The House of the Servant of the Muses."

Mr. A. Kiefer—Dear Sir: My wife has for several years been a great sufferer from periodical attacks of Neuralgia in the head, severe in the most eminent physicians had tried in vain to cure her, but they could only give temporary relief.

About two years ago she commenced using the Taxaline and is gratified to state that since then she has had no return of those terrible attacks. I attribute the restoration to health entirely to the use of Taxaline, and in conscience I would say to all who suffer that excellent medicine give Taxaline a trial. Yours, etc., [illegible]

There is nothing that so takes the starch out of a young man, who has been wedded about a year, as to have to go to a store where there is a girl clerk that he used to keep company with, and enquire for those large sized safety-pins.

An unknown but evidently married paragrapher says that when a woman combs her back hair into two ropes, holds one in her mouth until she winds the other on her tuck comb, and then finds that she has lost her last hair-pin she feels that her sex need two months—one to hold hair in, and one to make remarks with.

Henry Smith did his California gold mining in a peculiar way. He was a watchman in the Government Mint. At the close of each day's work, the employees were thoroughly searched before going out of the building, and all of the precious metal on the premises was carefully locked up. Then Smith went on guard for the night. In one of the rooms under his charge was a strong iron tank, in which granules of gold were placed to be washed. An iron cover was securely locked on, but through a small hole ran a rubber tube to cary a stream of water. Smith unscrewed the tube every night, and, with a narrow spoon, removed a small quantity of gold. The loss was so small in each instance as to be undiscovered, and it was only when the thief was caught selling the metal that he was suspected. He confesses that he has made $20,000 in two years by his operations.

You Must Pay.

Those who subscribe to a church building fund can be compelled to pay. A case has been decided in the Court of Appeals. To the claim of the church, the delinquent offered certain technical objections, founded on an alleged lack of organization, proper appointment of treasurer, and defective wording in the subscription paper—objections which at first were sustained by the lower courts, but on being taken to the Court of Appeals the judgment was reversed, and a verdict found for the church for the entire amount, with interest and costs. The case is an important one, as showing that our highest courts are disposed to uphold the rights of churches against refractory subscribers who make large promises and then refuse to keep them, hiding under some petty technicality to escape their just obligations.

It is to be presumed that subscriptions towards a pastor's salary would come under the same ruling.

London.

London is spread over about seven thousand square miles. There is one death there every six minutes, and one birth every four. The growth of the population is at the rate of seventy-five thousand a year, or two hundred and five each day. The total length of streets in London is about seven thousand miles; there are built every year about nine thousand new houses, by which the length of the streets is increased by twenty-eight miles. In the jails there is an average of seventy-five thousand prisoners. The foreign-born residents of London number about one hundred thousand; but 34 per cent. of the whole population were born out of the city.

A SHORT SERMON.—The ascent of Jack and Jill to fetch the water from its fountain head leads us to consider: 1. The attraction of the heights. 2. The upward impulse of the sense of want. 3. The profit of pursuit. 4. Misdirected efforts. 5. By this memorable catastrophe, we are led to consider—the penalty of overloading. In conclusion, this authentic history indicates that no man rises or falls in the world by himself. When Jack fell down, Jill came tumbling after. Momentous issues hang on every step we take in life. The false step by which we fall is certain to involve some one else in our disaster. Therefore ought we to be ever mindful of our goings, that our footsteps may not slip like those of Jack and Jill.

WHY?

Why does the bud that is fair to its breaking
Wake sweeter smiles than the fully blown rose?
Why does the dream on the verge of awaking
Stir deeper truths than a deeper repose?

Why does the love that is broken with parting
Lift itself higher by the fullness of pain?
Why is the incomplete rapture of starting
More an ecstasy than the ecstasy attain?

Why? For a boundless, unsatisfied longing
Lies deep down in a warm human heart,
Ever with this are the spirit-tides thronging,
Ever by these the heaven-tones impart.

Grow with our spring—we can follow you wholly
Only as far as our instincts are lent;
Slumber as fast that is hidden and holy,
We have not seen it—we are not content.

A STEP TOWARD FORTUNE.—About forty years ago, a poor woman living in Philadelphia, managed to eke out a miserable existence by selling molasses candy. One day, her candy was scorched. The woman was in despair. The loss was a serious one in a trade whose profits were counted by pennies. She was quick-witted, however, and ready with expedients. She cracked some walnuts, mixed the kernels with the candy, and wrote a placard, "The new nut candy, one cent a cake." The children dropped in on their way to school. The candy was liked. They came back for more the next day. The fame of the cheap confection spread from one school to another. The maker shrewdly confined herself to making that. Presently she took a larger shop in the alley. In a year or two she moved again, but this time it was into one of the principal streets. Now, her walnut candy is sold all over the country. Some years ago, she sold out her business, and retired with a handsome fortune. Now she lives in a stately house which stands in a grove of walnut trees; carved panels representing walnut boughs decorate the dining room; and on her carriage, instead of a coat of arms, is a bunch of walnuts just bursting from the husks.

Carats of Gold.

As pure gold is so very soft—too soft, indeed, for any practical purpose—it is alloyed with copper or silver, the first alloy producing a reddish color, and the second a pale yellow gold. Our gold coin, like that of France, Belgium and Holland, contains one-tenth of both copper and silver, mostly copper. For jewelry, the alloy differs with the quantity, and is estimated by what are called carats. A carat is the 24th part of any given quantity. Thus, when gold is called 24 carats, it means that it is all gold; when 20 carats, that of every 24 parts, 20 are gold. 18 carats is the most common alloy used by jewelers, and keeps as well as pure gold. 12 carats is only half gold, and is a low alloy, which is apt to tarnish more easily, and lose its luster, requiring more frequent cleaning.

Visible Improvement.

Mr. Noah Bates, Elmira, N. Y., writes: "about four years ago I had an attack of billious fever, and never fully recovered. My digestive organs were weakened, and I would be completely prostrated for days. After using two bottles of your Burdock Blood Bitters the improvement was so visible that I was astonished. I can now, though 61 years of age, do a fair and reasonable days work." Price $1.00.

The preaching that draws more attention to itself than to the truth is always bad. The pernicious sensationalism is that which makes a congregation think more of the speaker's peculiarities of style and eccentricities of manner than of the religion he sets forth. When a congregation praise the preacher more than they praise God, they have been poisoned instead of fed on the Bread of Life.

Small Comfort.

When you are continually coughing night and day, annoying everybody around you, and hoping it will go away of its own accord, you are running a dangerous risk—better use Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, an unfailing remedy in all such cases.

The worst thing that can be said of the house-fly is that it sometimes bothers the minister so while he is preaching that it makes it appear to the congregation that he is winking at one of the sisters in the gallery.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAR. 13, 1883.

The little end of Wiggins's storm undoubtedly struck this latitude last Sunday.

The Michigan legislature ought to settle down to work now. They have squandered about enough valuable time.

Detroit is now happy. The Langtry has invaded that city, broke the usual number of gentlemen's hearts, and gracefully retired.

The new tariff bill seems to be a big swindle. Many luxuries are placed on the free list, while the tariff is increased on many necessities.

The Providence Star says: Not a single state legislature has yet struggled with the toy pistol. Has the Star not heard of the Ferry boom rang in this state?

The flood reached the lower Mississippi valley last week and the mighty river was ten miles wide at Hickman, Miss. It was feared that the overflow would exceed that of last year.

Some of the Republican organs profess to be dissatisfied with the Union state ticket. They will discover however when the votes are counted that it possesses good running qualities.

Judge Kelley and the Pennsylvania manufacturers are said to be very happy over the new tariff. A good many people however are not so happy. When the next congress meets the people will have their innings.

With the exception of Gov. Blair for the Judgeship, the Republican State ticket seems to give general satisfaction. Austin Blair is a man of ability but he is not fitted for a Judge either by natural qualifications or by previous training. His nomination for that place was a blunder.

The death of Gov. Stephens, of Georgia, removes from the arena of politics one of the ablest men of the entire South. He literally died in the harness. Although on the wrong side of the rebellion—as nearly all the southern leaders were—still he has been eminent in his public services, and will rank in future history among the foremost of American statesmen.

The new senator, Thomas W. Palmer, is well spoken of by men of all parties who have a personal acquaintance with him, and he will undoubtedly fill his new position with credit to himself and with honor to the state. Although he is a high tariff man, still he is a great improvement upon Ferry. It was evident from the outset that no free trade Republican could be elected.

It is expected that the reductions in internal taxation that have been made will cut off about $6,000,000 between now and the 30th of June next, which will be the end of the fiscal year, and the reduction of revenue from internal taxation for the ensuing fiscal year will be about $40,000,000, over one-half of which, or $22,000,000, will be on tobacco and cigars. The banks and the tobacco smokers and chewers are the chief beneficiaries of congressional action.

The more the new tariff bill is examined the more it becomes apparent what a piece of patch work it is. A correspondent says: Had not the conference committee adjusted the sugar scale so as to please Louisiana Congress would have adjourned with nothing done. But when the bill was sweetened with what is practically a prohibitory rate on sugar of the grade Louisiana produces, the scene shifted. Senator Kellogg reversed himself and his vote carried the day in the senate.

The way protection protects labor is illustrated in this little telegram which appeared in the Evening News of the 8th inst:

A queer meeting of manufacturers and workingmen to organize for "protection" of American industries against pauper made goods or pauper labor was held at Jefferson hall, Brooklyn, last night. So wide a diversity of opinion was shown that it was impossible to tell whether the sentiments of the majority were for "protection" or free trade. The final speech was made by a cigarmaker, who said his trade is the best "protected" in the world, and men earn an average of $7 a week, while bricklayers, who are not "protected," earn $4 a day.

OUR TEXAS LETTER.

GREENVILLE, TEXAS,
March 7th, 1883.

EDITOR HERALD:—Tempus Fugit. Some time has fled since I last wrote you a letter. No doubt my neglect to do so has been a relief to yourself and your readers, but as I am feeling just now vexed with the "whole world" and needs a humor to enter into "amicable relations with the rest of mankind" I made up my mind to afflict you with a letter. Firstly, it will not be very long, secondly, it will not be at all interesting, thirdly and lastly, you'll be glad when you've read it through—if indeed you proceed to such an extremity.

As the weather always furnishes a people to talk about when one has nothing else, I will launch my conversational boat upon that sea and tell you that the part of the "Sunny South" has not been so sunny since last fall, as you might suppose. In all my time here I have not experienced such a cold, wet and disagreeable winter as this. We have had three falls of the "beautiful" this winter. The time of falling was short—only a few hours; the time it remained was the same. Its arrival and departure were very much the same as the coming and going of a poor relation or a mother-in-law; we regretted to see the arrival, and rejoiced at the departure. Very little has been done yet in this section in the planting line. On account of so much rain and cold very few planters have corn planted. As a general thing corn planting is finished before this time. We will have a few days of balmy weather, and we think that spring has come to remain, that no more Northers will visit us, when all of a sudden a blizzard will come sweeping down on us that seems to almost freeze the marrow in our bones. Yes, it may truthfully be said that "Winter still lingers in the lap of Spring." I'll tell you what I would do if I was spring, before old winter should linger so long in my lap, if there was no other way to make him get off, I'd try that trick that most school boys are familiar with. I'd slip a bent pin under him. I think he'd arise to explain."

To-night as I was perusing the HERALD I fell into a revery as to the time fled since I last set foot upon the streets of Tecumseh, since I last met and greeted any of its citizens. Years have come and gone, have rolled away from the shores of time and mingled with the vast ocean of eternity. The memory of the time fled alone remains—the time fled is gone from us forever. Among all the papers received by me, and they are numerous, no one of them comes to hand more regularly or meets with a heartier reception than the Tecumseh Herald. I scan its well filled pages closely. Often names familiar meet my gaze calling up memories of the past, of which some are pleasant, some otherwise. I like to read the correspondence from different parts of the county. In reading them I am often carried back by memory to places familiar, brought in contact with persons whom I knew in former times.

On the fourth page of your issue of Feb. 22, I notice a paragraph which says that a movement is on foot to secure the pardon of Wm. M. Godley who was sentenced to the state prison for life a few years ago for throwing his mother-in-law down stairs at Adrian." Now I am not so much astonished that Godley (Godless would be a more appropriate name perhaps) should have thrown his mother-in-law down stairs—it is very probable there were mitigating circumstances which prompted him to the act, but why he should have thrown her at Adrian is not so clear to my mind. The fact that such deep, bitter, venemous feelings wrankled in his heart toward Adrian as to prompt him to throw his mother-in-law at her is a good and sufficient reason why the citizens of that place should have had him safely lodged within the walls of the state prison.

In the local column of the same issue mentioned above, is an item which says: "Evans creek and the Raisin got rather high and noisy last Saturday." Well if Evans Creek and the Raisin were alone engaged in the "high" and "noisy," Tecumseh certainly does not present the appearance especially on Saturdays—which I have witnessed there in times past. Evans creek and the Raisin were not the only ones engaged in a "high" and "noisy" many times, and their mouths did not emit such nauseous smells as mouths of persons engaged in a "high" and "noisy."

But I must close my letter or my Firstly will not hold good; my secondly, I claim to have fully established; my Thirdly I leave with you. My kind regards to all, and especially to the Farmers' Club.

TEXAS.

N. B.—In the 22d. Feb. issue, bottom first page you say: "Wheat is still going up." You fail to inform your readers where wheat is going up to. During my residence in Tecumseh, often I visited the flouring mills in that vicinity, especially the Globe Mill, and one thing I noticed particularly: the more wheat went up, or perhaps more properly speaking, was elevated, the more flour came down.

THE UNION STATE TICKET.

The Democratic State Convention met at Lansing last week Wednesday, and the Greenbackers met on Thursday in the same city. The Democrats nominated John W. Champlin, of Grand Rapids, for Judge, and Arthur M. Clark, of Saginaw, for Regent, and adopted the following platform:

The Democracy of Michigan, assembled in convention, although believing that a canvass for the election of Judges of the Supreme Court and Regents of the University does not necessarily involve the discussion of political subjects, yet deem this to be an opportune occasion for affirming their renewed devotion to the principles which are the traditional doctrines of the Democratic faith.

Therefore, it is resolved:

1. That we congratulate the people of this State that in the last political campaign the conservative electors, constituting the Union party, were enabled by the assertion and advocacy of sound principles, to achieve a notable and decisive political triumph in the election of a Governor and six members of Congress in this State in which the Republican party has so long held complete power.

2. That we affirm anew our unalterable adherance to the Democratic principles of home rule, a tariff for revenue only, civil service reform, purity in the administration of the government, economy in public expenditure, opposition to monopolies and exclusive privileges, opposition to political assessments, and to the interference of the Federal Government in the elections or local affairs of the States.

3. That we ask the attention of the people of this State to the unwarranted expenditure of the time of the Legislature and the money of the people in the prolongation of the recent contest for the election of a United States Senator, and invoke the public reprobation upon the scandals connected with that contest, exposed by the evidence given before the investigating committee of the Legislature. For these we hold the Republican party of this State responsible.

4. That we feel an assured confidence, that by united and faithful political work, and by renewed advocacy of the principals hereinbefore referred to, a new victory, worthy the last, can be achieved by the Union party in the coming campaign in the election of their candidates for Judges of the Supreme Court and Regents of the University.

5. That the action of the Republican majority in Congress in defying the popular demand for a reduction of oppressive taxation and for the removal of the burdens of the tariff, so decisively expressed in the last election throughout the country, deserves our condemnation, and we extend to the Democratic Senators and Representatives in Congress who have faithfully labored for these purposes our hearty thanks for their efforts to accomplish these aims against the powerful influences of monopolies and the protected and priveleged classes.

The Nationals placed in nomination John R. Sherwood, of Kalamazoo, for Judge, and Charles J. Willett, of Gratiot county, for Regent. The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That we reaffirm the National platform adopted in Chicago in 1880 and the resolutions of the National Greenback State Convention that convened in Grand Rapids last year.

2. That when a party becomes so much rent by feuds and torn by factions that its majority voice is disregarded at the dictation of a notorious corruptionist and spends two months at enormous expense to the people in the election of a United States Senator, it is evidence that it has passed the days of its usefullness, and should be laid aside as an engine of mischief.

3. That we denounce as the crowning infamy of the last Congress its act relating to revenue, the plain design of which is to relieve monopolies and banking capital of taxation, stop the payment of the bonded debt and perpetuate the burdens of labor.

4. That as the best possible reform of the civil service we favor the choice by direct vote of the people of all Federal offices possible of election especially President and Vice President, Senators and postmasters.

5. That we are in sympathy with all movements against monopolies, and keeping in view the preservation of our own party organization we would advise a full representation from Michigan at the convention called to meet in Chicago July 4 next.

Peterson's Magazine for April is already on our table, as welcome as the flowers of Spring, and quite as fresh and beautiful. The embellishments, as usual, are very fine, particularly the steel-plate, "A Modern Cindrella"; the colored steel fashion plate; and the colored pattern in crewels—a bunch of dog-daisies. But the specialty of the number is its stories, which, though always superior in "Peterson," are better this month than ever.

The 46th annual meeting of the Michigan Press Association will be held in the city of Detroit on March 29th and 30th inst. The session will be called to order on Thursday evening, March 29, at 8 o'clock, when after appropriate opening exercises, the annual address will be delivered by Melville E. Stone, editor of the Chicago Daily News and one of the leading journalists of the west of the younger and more modern school.

The Detroit Free Press, of to-day, prefaces its storm notes with a display heading as follows: "In Canada there Dwells a Man, who is Most Wondrous Wise; The Weather he Can Spre Fore-tell by Gazing at the Skies; Quoth He—Beware, ye Mariners, and ye that on Land Dwell; For the Wildest Gale that ever Blew, will Soon Come Fierce and Fell; But alack and alas, for the Weather Prophet's Trade; The Greatest Blow We've Felt was the Blow by Wiggins Made."

Spring is billed to begin next Tuesday at 6 o'clock P.M.

The Mason News says J. W. Chapin has left at this office a piece of the press which Wilbur F. Story, present publisher of the Chicago Times, brought to Mason to print the tax sales with something over 40 years ago. The law abiding citizens of Mason thought the printing of the tax sales belonged to John Child, then publishing a paper here, and not to Mr. Story, who was running a bookstore in Jackson, so they pied Story's type and broke his press.

Exchanges report this style of swindling now being successfully worked on the unsuspecting grangers: "A farmer receives a circular through the mails stating that a new and improved variety of winter wheat has been discovered and that the seed will be furnished him free of charge until a full crop is raised, on condition that he sends one dollar to pay for postage and packing. After the farmer sends his dollar he hears nothing further from the money or wheat."

The telephone poles for the Hudson extension have already been shipped and work has already been started on this line. The poles for the direct line from Adrian to Toledo are already to ship, and will be sent out as soon as Blissfield either comes to the front with her bonus or fails. But whether it will go through Blissfield must be determined by the amount of script raised there. The work of the telephone company in this state during the coming season will more than double what has already been done, and it is not at all improbable that during the coming year, through lines will be constructed between N.Y. city and Chicago. We clip the following from the Evening News of March 13:

NEW YORK March 13. Cleveland & New York were yesterday afternoon connected by telephone wire. For several hours gentlemen in the office of the postal telegraph co. in this city spoke and sang before an improved telephone of the Baxter patent, and a party in Cleveland did the same, and their voices were more distinctly heard in New York than is usually the case between connected telephones in the city. Prof. Elisha Gray, inventor of the telephone, conducted the experiments. He said their success was due to the superior conductivity of the compound wire in use, composed of a steel core surrounded by copper. Jas. R. Keene was one of the party and conversed with friends who had been called to meet him.

It is refreshing in these cheap days of postage, with a prospect of still cheaper rates, to look over a lot of old relics in the shape of letters written fifty or sixty years ago, before envelopes were thought of, and when the postage on half a dozen letters, was enough to bring visions of bankruptcy to a man of modern income, and yet often hear people sigh for the good old days of yore.

Some genius cut out, year by year, the quaint and curious phrases and the result was very amusing on reading them: "Wanted—A house by a family in good repair." "Two young women want washing." The fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of H. T. Luce and wife was celebrated in a quiet way at their residence on the 13th inst. One of the items of peculiar interest was the attendance of every member of their family—six children and ten grandchildren, all of whom are living, death having never visited any of their families during all of these fifty years. Other relatives and friends were present enjoying and rejoicing with them on the occasion. An original poem read by one of the daughters, recalling some of the incidents of the past, was evidently enjoyed by all; touching in tenderest sympathy the hearts of those more closely related.

WIGGINS' STORM.

Every paper in the country that we have picked up during the last week, from the Chicago Times to the Adrian Record, has contained an editorial about Wiggins and his storm, which did not come to pass, and it is with a trembling hand and faltering heart that we attempt to do our duty in regard to this matter, giving the necessary details to this great event which, in substance, did not happen, and besides this, try and stand by Wiggins a little in his recent sad affliction and bereavement. It must be a hard trial for a man who has set his heart on seeing all the property in this great and beautiful country destroyed by a storm, to sit still and see everything move on just as peacefully as ever. He must feel just as the angry citizen does who jumps out of bed at two o'clock in the morning when the fire bells ring, rushes to town thinking, of course, his place of business is on fire, and then feels almost mad at himself and all who are near him to find it nothing but John Brown's old cow shed that is on fire. But we have a word of consolation for Wiggins, and although the fact brings tears to our eyes, and means hard work for days to come. There has been a deluge, and on March 9, 10 and 11, A.D. 1883, the HERALD received more spring poetry than was ever known before in its history, and the worst of it is the pretty verses still continue to come. We have been obliged to rent an extra box in the postoffice, and bring our mail over in a push cart, and if this fair weather continues, let the Lord have mercy on us, or there will be a double suicide and the parties will be Wiggins and the editor of this paper, but it is against the principles of the HERALD to shirk any duty that can be fulfilled by hard labor, and we have carefully read the contents of all the communications and at the close of this article take the liberty of printing a specimen, just to show you kind readers, what the festive newspaper man sometimes has to contend with. Do not be imprudent, but take one verse a day, and by the fifth day you will be able to stand the shock of the last verse.

Under the Snow.

Under the snow,
The decoy snow,
And hidden down deep,
Where the little grasses sleep,
And quietude doth keep
Her solemn watch,
A wee a tiny little plant,

Under the snow,
The icy snow,
It lifted its head;
It awoke to life from the dead,
And daintily tho' fed,
It sweetly bloomed,
A pansy 'neath the snow.

Under the snow,
The pure white snow,
It coiled and it grew;
And its purple, deep and new,
With center spots the hue
Of yellow gold,
So richly blended with the white,

Under the snow,
The silver snow,
Earth's modest screen,
And unnoticed and unseen
By all, in rich green
And purple deep,
And yellow gold, it clothed itself

Under the snow
Of many years,
And hidden down deep
Where the memories may sleep,
Where angels vigil keep Immortal youth
Reviving in the bloom of spring.

Under the snow,
The silver snow,
Think not there is death,
Tho' the years may pass in a breath,
Yet an immortal wreath
Entwines the heart,
Tho it may sleep, it cannot die.

A BIG BLAZE AT ADRIAN.

Last Friday afternoon a fire broke out in the Adrian Brick and Tile Machine shop which resulted in the total loss of the building and contents. The following details of the fire are taken from the Record:

The scenes at the fire were of the most exciting nature, for although the fire department responded promptly, Hook and Ladder company arriving at the scene even before the alarm was heard. The buildings were large and constructed of wood, and the great danger was in the firemen being unable to control the flames and keep them from communicating with the valuable adjacent property.

At one time, when it was found that one of the steamers refused to work, the excitement became intense, for it seemed certain that the Metcalf block would burn, as the cornice and roof was already on fire. The firemen and citizens put forth every effort to stay the ravages of the flames; a lead of hose was carried to the top of the Metcalf building, and when at half-past four the steamer commenced work, there was a feeling of relief for at that time, all the exposed points were well guarded, and by the excellent management and indomitable courage of the firemen, it was soon evident that the fire would be confined to the foundry.

Sickles' livery stable, a large wooden building standing in the rear of the foundry, and only a few feet away, did not burn, although all the stock, carriages, and everything of any value was removed.

When the Metcalf block took fire, work was immediately commenced to remove the goods, and trucks and wagons were employed to draw them away. They were mostly stored at the opera house and Dean's opera house, and a very large portion of the immense stock was taken out. The goods in Pennock Bros'. Novelty store were also removed to a very large extent, and of course all more or less damaged.

Metcalf's loss from damage to building and goods could not be accurately estimated this morning, but it was thought that it will run anywhere from $6,000 to $10,000, while Pennock Bros'. loss will probably reach $500. There was no insurance on the foundry buildings or any of the machinery or patterns, and of course they are a total loss to the company. The buildings and most of the machinery and patterns was the property of James Farrar, who leased to the company. About $3,000 worth of new machinery has lately been put into the shop by the company. The total loss to the company will not fall much short of $20,000, at least $12,000, of which will be sustained by Mr. Farrar, who, although he has been in active business here for thirty years, can illy afford to lose such an amount, and has the sympathy of the community. The Adrian Brick and Tile Machine Company was in a most prosperous and flourishing condition and by the fire yesterday afternoon thirty-three men are thrown out of employment, twenty-eight of whom are heads of families, which is serious to the men as well as the city at large. Mr. Farrar told us this morning that he could not say what would be done about rebuilding, as all of the other members of the company were out of the city on business, but it seems to be the belief that the shops will be immediately rebuilt, at least it is generally hoped that such will be the case.

OUR FAIR.

In answer to a call in last week's HERALD the stockholders of the Fair Association assembled at the Council Building last Wednesday afternoon. Nearly all who subscribed to the stock were present, and the following business was transacted: Meeting called to order by A. D. Hall, chairman, and report of soliciting committee called for. The report showed that about $5,000 in stock had been subscribed. Motion was made to organize a stock company, and the motion was unanimously carried. At this period of the meeting many remarks were made which showed that the enterprise was very favorably received.

The committee on constitution reported and their constitution was adopted with a few amendments. Under the constitution the following nine directors were duly elected to serve one year:

Rollin—I. N. Hathaway.
Washtenaw Co.—J. M. Cress
Franklin—W. S. Osborn.
Macon—J. W. Baker.
Raisin—D. P. Anthony.
Clinton—F. C. Rector.
Tecumseh—Minor Davidson.
" Village—A. W. Mill, J. F. Hiskey.

The same committee who are now soliciting stock were instructed to keep on in the good work. The meeting then adjourned.

Immediately on the adjournment of the stockholders, the directors of the Farmers' Association of Southern Michigan held a meeting, and elected officers of the association to serve till the 3d Tuesday in Jan., '84:

President—I. N. Hathaway, Rollin.
Vice President—A. W. Mills, Tecumseh.

Secretary and Treasurer will be appointed at a future meeting.

The business is now fairly started and all it needs is a little good earnest work to sell all the required stock, and make one of the best fair associations in Michigan. In looking over the subscriptions we see that Tecumseh village is represented to the amount of $2,300, and the work here is not nearly completed yet. Let all who have capital help a little and the amount will soon be raised.

The town has been quite dull since last Saturday, from various causes, but mainly on account of the absence of five of Tecumseh's fairest young ladies, who started on the aforesaid day to take in the village of Toledo. At latest accounts only one of them have returned and there is a good deal of anxiety about them. Also we fear for Toledo, less this little town, not being used to their ways, may suffer the loss of many a young man's heart, taking in earnest what of course is only a mild flirtation on the part of the young ladies, however we hope for the best and trust the quartette will soon return to reclaim their native town.

This bit of good advice from the Ann Arbor Argus is applicable to other towns as well: The practice of smoking cigars for drinks and cigars in saloons, and apples candies, &c., in other places, is becoming altogether to prevalent, and ought to be suppressed, more especially where boys are permitted to congregate. It is a habit very likely to grow, and, in the end, make gamblers of those who indulge in it originally as a harmless amusement. The law is plain on this subject, and is violated daily in very many places in this city as an inducement to sell goods.

Being out late at night with no restraint sends boys to the penitentiary and girls to hasty marriages and dens of infamy. Know where your boys and girls are.

Gentlemen: I have been troubled with rheumatism for two years. I tried all the best advertised cures and remedies, and many eminent physicians without relief. The last Doctor I visited recommended Dr. Rush's Blood Root Oil. I purchased a large bottle to try it, and applied it. In two hours I was relieved, and now am entirely well. Its effects are wonderful, and I believe it is the only thing in the world which will cure rheumatism.

Miscellaneous Recipes.

Vinegar Candy.—One cup of vinegar, two cups of white sugar and nuts. Boil the vinegar and sugar until it will break brittle when dropped in cold water. When done add the nuts. Pour in a buttered dish and cut before it hardens.

Blackberry Jam.—Take one pint of water to prevent burning, then wash and strain, to every pound of pulp add half a pound of clean brown sugar; cook as you would jam, stirring to prevent it burning. It can be six or eight hours in the fire. It is a nice addition for lunch.

Pickled Pigs' Feet.—Don't cry them make the pickle sweet will come too porky. Just add a little lump of butter in the pickle keep it hot. Wash them nice in the first place and put in a kettle of water, put in salt and let them cook until soft, enough salt in the water to bear the spider on with one, then take off the cover and let them dry down they begin to brown.

Pudding Sauce.—Three pints milk boiling, thickened with two tablespoonfuls of flour, two eggs, salt, butter, sugar well together, stirring all the time in a vessel set in boiling water. When it thickens, pour into a dish and cover with the whites of the eggs, beaten to a stiff froth, and a little more sugar added of powdered sugar. Brown in the oven; flavor with lemon or anything you choose. To be eaten cold.

To Keep Milk from Turning.—In Swedenborg, in Saxony, where the cold water system is carried out in large dairies, an apparently effectual plan has been hit upon for preventing their milk "turning" in tempestuous weather. A thin iron wire chain is passed through the milk pans, the ends of which are kept constantly in cold water. Dr. Fleischmann of Baden, testifies to the practicability of this method, for, he observes, authorities on this subject maintain that milk is less sensitive to the electricity of the air than to the temperature that surrounds it more immediately. The fact that milk kept in enameled or tin vessels is less liable to turn sour in hot weather speaks well for this new theory.

An Awkward Messenger.

Once, when Mme. Rentz and her female minstrels were performing in San Francisco, a well-known Front street merchant—one of the front orchestra-seat brigade, whose head was more clear than level—waited around the stage entrance to the Standard Theatre after the performance, trying to conceal a handsome bonpoint under his ulster.

For a long time he kept peering at the different specimens of Mme. Rentz's sex, as they came out of their dressing rooms, as they put on their rubbers and trotted away in the rain. After waiting patiently for about an hour, he approached an individual with a red scarf and a shawl to match, who stood smoking a cigar at the entrance, and said:

"Can you tell me, sir, if Miss Osborne has gone home yet?"

"Oh, yes; been gone half an hour," replied the sought-for party cheerfully. "Some shows for her?"

"Well—er—mum—yes."

"I'll give you to her—give her later," said the obliging man.

"Will you? That's very kind, surely."

"Oh, not at all," said the man, smelling the bouquet with the air of a connoisseur. "Anything else?"

"Well—ahem!—yes. Just give her this pair of earrings."

"Certainly. What name shall I say?"

"Just say that 'Baby Mine'—she'll understand—sends love, and says 2.30, at the same place to-morrow."

"I'll just make a memo. of that," said the red-tie man, writing on his shirt-cuff. "2.30, same place, to-morrow. All right. Anything else?"

"No, that's all. Sure you'll see her this evening?"

"Oh, certain."

"And you'll get a chance to speak to her when there is no one around?"

"Oh, dead sure! You see, I'm her husband!"

'Baby Mine' fainted, and was sent to his home in a hack.

The Apple Tree Borer.

This pest has proven a rather formidable one in some parts of the country, but formidable as it is, there seems to be remedies and preventatives for its ravages. A writer in the Country Gentleman gives his remedies as follows:

"Carefully remove all sprouts, suckers and grass from the roots of the tree. Keep the bark near the surface smooth and clean by frequent scouring and rubbing with the naked hands. Do this at least once a week in May and June. This will brush off the eggs and destroy them. Another method is to take a pint of sulphur, a gallon of soft soap, and enough tobacco water to make the mixture of the consistency of paint. Apply this with a brush, in May or June, on the body of the trees at the surface and two or three inches below. It will be a good thing for our farmer friends who are contemplating setting orchards, to bear these facts in mind at the proper time. The borer is the larvae of a beetle called by naturalists Saperda Vitata. It deposits its eggs on the body of the tree at the surface, the heat of the sun hatches the egg, and the little grub works its way into the tree, making a crooked passage way and sapping its very life. The chips ejected by these grubs may often be found at the spot where the grub entered the tree, and sometimes a few drops of dark, discolored sap may be seen oozing from the orifice. Once in the tree the grub soon kills it, and thus it would seem that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Consumption of Coffee.

America is fast becoming, if she is not already, the greatest coffee-consuming country on the globe. Coffee is no longer a luxury, but a necessity of the humble home as well as the abode of the rich. We import annually, in round numbers, 300,000,000 pounds of coffee, the value of which is $25,000,000. This is every year increasing, in a greater ratio than that of any nation on the globe. Our increase during the last twenty-five years has been 8½ per cent., against 2½ per cent. for Europe. The substitutes for coffee which have met with such favor in other countries are not popular in America. We can hardly understand now how the world got along before the days of coffee. The Greeks and Romans never got a scent at this glorious beverage for even centuries after it was used in Ethiopia and Abyssinia. During the sixteenth century it was carried down to Egypt from Arabia, and about the same time it was introduced over Europe.

A Pleasing Woman.

What is more charming than an agreeable, graceful woman? Here and there we meet one possessing the fairy-like power of enchanting all about her; sometimes she is ignorant herself of the magical influence, which is, however, for that reason only the more perfect. Her presence lights up the home; her approach is like a cheering warmth; she passes by and we are content; she stays a while and we are happy. To behold her is to love; she is the aurora with a human face. She has no need to do more than simply to be; she makes an Eden of the home; paradise breathes from her; and she communicates this delight to all without taking any greater trouble than that of existing be her there. It is not here an inestimable gift?

SECOND CHILDHOOD.—The hardest thing in life is to grow old gracefully. We fight the battle of time inch by inch, and try to smother out the crows' feet and wrinkles; and yet there is no period of life more enjoyable or more revered than a kind-hearted and light-hearted old age. What more disgusting sight is there than that of an old man who is so patched up by art that if he should give himself a good shake he would fly all to pieces, trying to play the Romeo, and what more appalling sight than that of an old lady trying to cheat her years by means of rouge, powder and various other chemicals which a good bath would quickly dispose of and trying to play the coy Juliet? Ten second childhood is vastly more foolish than our first.

SALTPETER FOR SQUASH BUGS.—To destroy bugs on squash and cucumber vines, dissolve a tablespoonful of saltpeter in a pailful of water, put a pint of this around each hill, shaking the earth, so that it will not spread much, and the thing is done. The more saltpeter the better for vegetables, but the sooner death to insect life. The bugs burrow in the earth at night, but fail to rise in the morning. No danger of killing any vegetable with this, a too enfeebled solution applied to weeds makes them grow wonderfully.

Save the tin fruit-cans, and convert them into tasteful flower-pots in the following manner: With a can-opener cut off any rough or projecting portions of the cover, leaving a narrow rim to project inward. With a pair of pliers, or a small hammer, bend this rim down. This gives firmness to the top of the can. Punch three or four small holes in the bottom of the can. Then paint it with varnish made of gum shellac dissolved in alcohol, and colored with lampblack and a little yellow ocher, to give a dark brown color. The cans may be ornamented by pasting on them little medallion figures or pictures. They are handsomer than the ordinary flower-pots, require less watering, and keep the plants free from all insects, owing to the iron rust on the cans.

There is one field of work which the progressive American women do not seem to seriously think of entering, yet it is one in which they could accomplish much more than in many they enter from choice, or are forced into by circumstances. I mean the business of a druggist. Dexterity, neatness, order, and indeed all the qualities essential in a good druggist, are pre-eminently present in women.

A Blessing To All Mankind

In the times when these newspapers are flooded with patent medicine advertisements, it is gratifying to know where to procure that will certainly cure you. If you are Bilious, blood out of order, Liver inactive, or generally debilitated; there is nothing in the world that will cure you so quickly as Electric Bitters. They are a blessing to mankind, and can be had for only fifty cents a bottle.

Civility is to a man what beauty is to a woman. It creates an instantaneous impression in his behalf, while the opposite quality excites as quick a prejudice against him. It is a real ornament, the most beautiful dress that a man or woman can wear, and worth more as a means of winning favor than all of the jewels ever worn.

Life's a Conundrum.

When judiciously used, Burdock Blood Bitters are in themselves a remedy for all the evils arising from impurities of the blood, which never fail to make the patient long lived and happy. Price $1.00.

Permanent Cure Guaranteed.

Five years established and never known to fail in a single case, acute or chronic. Refer to all prominent physicians and druggists for the standing of Salicylica.

SECRET.

THE ONLY DISCOVERY OF THE CONSTITUENT WHICH EXISTS IN THE BLOOD OF RHEUMATIC AND GOUTY PATIENTS.

SALICYLICA is known as a common-sense remedy, because it strikes directly at the cause of Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia, while so many so-called specifics and supposed panaceas only treat locally the effects.

It has been conceded by eminent scientists that ointments, liniments and soothing lotions will not eradicate those diseases which are the result of the poisoning of the blood with Uric Acid.

SALICYLICA works with marvelous effect on this acid and so removes the disorder. It is now exclusively used by all celebrated physicians of America and Europe. Highest Medical Academy of Paris reports 95 per cent. cures in three days.

REMEMBER

that SALICYLICA is a certain cure for Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia. The most intense pains are subdued almost instantly.

Give it a trial. Relief guaranteed or money refunded.

Thousands of testimonials sent on application.

Indian Trappers, Hudson Bay.

About the first of November, when the animals have got their winter coats, and fur is "in season," the Indian trapper lays out his trapping walk for the winter, along which he places a line of traps from ten to fifteen miles in length. Once or twice a week he makes the round of this walk, and gathers such furs as may be caught. Most of the finer furs are taken by means of the wooden dead-fall and steel traps of various sizes, the larger fur-bearing animals being either shot, caught in snares, or killed by the poisoned bait.

Toward the latter end of March the Indian trappers leave their hunting grounds, and make a journey to the forts with the produce of their winter's toil. Here they come, moving through the forest, a motley throng. The braves march in front, too proud and lazy to carry anything but their guns, and not always doing even that. After them come the squaws, bending under loads, driving dogs, or hauling hand-sleds laden with meat, furs, tanned deer-skins, and infants. The puppy dog and inevitable baby never fail in Indian lodge or procession. The cheerful spectacle of the two packed together upon the back of a woman is not of infrequent occurence. Day after day the mongrel party journeys on, until the fort is reached. Then comes the trade. The trader separates the furs into lots, placing the standard valuation upon each. Then he adds the amounts together, and informs the trapper that he has got sixty or seventy "skins." At the same time he hands his customer sixty or seventy little bits of wood, so that the latter may know, by returning these in payment for the goods for which he really barters his furs, just how fast his funds decrease. The first act of the Indian is to cancel the debt contracted for advances at the beginning of the season; then he looks round upon the bales of cloth, blankets, etc., and after a long while concludes to have a small white capote for his toddling boy. The price is told him, and he hands back ten of his little pieces of wood, then looks about him for something else. Everything is carefully examined, and with each purchase there is a contest over the apparent inequality between the amount received and that given. In the Indian's opinion, one skin should pay for one article of merchandise, no matter what the value of the latter may be. And he insists, too, upon selecting the skin. The steelyard and weighing balances are his especial objects of dislike. He does not know what medicine that is. That his tea and sugar should be balanced against a bit of iron, conveys no idea of the relative values of peltries and merchandise to him. He insists upon making the balance swing even between the trader's goods and his own furs, until a new light is thrown upon the question of steelyards and scales by the acceptance of his proposition. Then, when he finds his fine furs balanced against heavy blankets, he concludes to abide by the old method of letting the white trader decide the weight in his own way; for it is clear that the steelyard is a very great medicine, which no brave can understand.

When the trapper has spent all his little pieces of wood, and asks for further advances, he is allowed to draw any reasonable amount; for contrary to the rule in civilized life, a debt is seldom lost save by the death of the Indian. He may change his place of abode hundreds of miles, but he still has only a Company's post at which to trade. The Company has always been a cold friend to him and his, and he pays when he can. He knows that when he liquidates his old debt, he can contract a new one just as big. No attempt was ever made to cheat him, and there never will be. When he is ill he goes to the nearest fort, and is cared for and attended until he recovers. When he does his duty well he gets a present, and he never performs any labor without receiving fair compensation. Such humane treatment strongly binds the Indian and half-breed to the Company.—Harper's Magazine.

Formation of Dew.

Dew is a sign of fine weather, and is never seen except under a cloudless sky. Wind and clouds are sure preventatives of dew, from the simple reason that clouds are able to retain some of the solar heat; and, as they can give forth warmth, the radiation from the earth is checked, and a warmer temperature preserved. Wind evaporates the moisture as fast as it appears; and if the wind is westerly, there is little dew or cloud to be seen. The contrary is observed with an easterly wind, but a west wind blows over a vast expanse of land, and having lost its vapor, dries up any moisture it may come across; whereas an east wind crossing the Atlantic, is full of vapor and sheds dew on all sides. These remarks, of course, apply chiefly to particular localities, but the influence of a west wind may be seen in the Spring. Dew is more copiously deposited in Spring and Autumn than in Summer, as there is usually a greater difference in those seasons between the temperature of day and night; in Spring, however, there is a small deposit of dew when a west wind prevails; but in Autumn, during the soft influences of south and east winds, the earth is covered with moisture. It has also been observed that there is a greater formation of dew between sunset and midnight.

Mr. George Dines, who has made extensive experiments and observations on the formation of dew, finds that the depth of deposit in England in an evening rarely exceeds a hundreth part of an inch; and that the average annual depth of the deposit upon the surface of the earth does not exceed an inch and a half.

About Water.

No water that has stood in open vessels during the night should be used for drinking or cooking. By exposure to the air it has lost its "aeration," and has absorbed the dust-germs floating in the apartment. If convenience requires water to be kept in vessels for several hours before use, it should be covered, unless the vessels are tight. Wherever practical, all distributing reservoirs should be covered. Filtering always adds to the purity of water. Drinking water should not be taken from lakes or rivers on a low level. Surface water, or water in lakes, pools, or rivers which receive the surface wash, should be avoided as much as possible. Do not drink much water at a time. More than two tumblerfuls should not be taken at a meal. Do not drink between meals unless to quench thirst, as excess of water weakens the gastric juice and overworks the kidneys. Excessive potations, whether of water or other fluid, relax the stomach, impair its secretions, and paralyze its movements. By drinking a little at a time the injury is avoided.

He Heard Too Much.

Lewis Gaylord Clark, the editor of the Knickerbocker Magazine used to tell the following story with great delight:

Some two miles up the river from St Johnsbury, Vt., is a primitive sort of village called "The Center." Here, not long since, the rustic youth of the vicinity congregated for a dance. "And dance they did," said our informant "with an action unknown to your city beaux and belles. One interesting man having imbibed too freely, became "fatigued" in the course of the evening and wisely concluded to retire for a short rest.

A door ajar near the dancing hall revealed invitingly a glimpse of a comfortable bed, of which he took possession with the prospect of an undisturbed snooze.

It happened, howbeit, that this was the ladies' withdrawing room, and no sooner had he closed his eyes than in came two blooming damsels and began arranging their disordered ringlets, the dim light of the tallow candle not disclosing the tenant of the bed. The girls had tongues, like the rest of their sex, which began running in this wise:

"What a nice dance we're having! Have you heard anybody say anything 'bout me, Jane?"

"About you! Why, Sarah, I heard Joe Flint tell Sam Jones that you was the prettiest girl in the room."

Whereupon the dear things chuckled and fixed up a little more, and made off to the ball room. They had hardly reached the door when our half-conscious friend raised himself on his elbow, and, quite intelligibly, though slowly, inquired:

"Have you heard anyone say anythin' 'bout me, gals?"

Fancy their feelings at this juncture.

Do the Dying Suffer Pain?

People do not like to think of death. It is an unpleasant subject; but it constantly obtrudes itself, and there has been much speculation as to whether mental or physical pain attend the final act. Observation teaches us that there is little pain of either kind in dying. Experience will come to us all one of these days, but it will come too late to benefit those who remain. It seems to be a kind provision of nature that, as we approach the dreaded event, our terrors dimmish, and the coward and hero die alike—fearless, indifferent or resigned. As to physical pain, Dr. Edward H. Clarke, in "Visions," says: "The rule is that unconsciousness, not pain, attends the final act. To the subject of it, death is no more painful than birth. Painlessly we came; whence we know not. Painlessly we go; whither we know not. Nature kindly provides an anæsthetic for the body when the spirit leaves it. Previous to that moment, and in preparation for it, respiration becomes feeble, generally slow and short often accompanied by long inspirations, and short expirations, so that the blood supply is less and less oxygenated. At the same time the heart acts with corresponding lethargy, producing a slow, feeble and often irregular pulse. As this process goes on, the blood is not only driven to the head with diminished force and in less quantity, but what flows there is loaded more and more with carbonic acid gas, a powerful anæsthetic, the same as that derived from charcoal. Subject to its influence the nerve-centers lose consciousness and sensibility, apparent sleep creeps over the system; then comes stupor, and the end."—New York Express.

Old Books and Ozone.

It is known that ozone, when properly applied, is a most effective and convenient agent for restoring books or prints which have become brown with age, or been smeared or soiled with coloring matter—only a short time being required to render them perfectly white, as if just from the press, and this without injuring in the least the blackness of the ink. An example given of the result produced in this way is that of a book of the sixteenth century, upon a page of which several sentences had been painted over, by the monks of that day, with a black shining coloring matter, in order to make them illegible, and of which no trace of a line could be detected. After thirty-six hours' treatment with ozone, the coloring matter was entirely destroyed, the most careful scrutiny of the page failing to disclose the fact that any of the lines had once been painted over. Writing ink may readily be discharged with ozone, especially if the paper be subsequently treated with dilute chlorhydric acid to remove the oxide of iron.

A Few Don'ts.

When you are out to dinner, or tea, and the hostess invites you to the table, don't wait for the invitation to be repeated, as it is not only impolite on the part of the guests but many of the tempting dishes lose their relish. I had company a few days since, and they were called three times before they made their appearance in the dining room.

When you are out calling with one of your thirsty children—and this is their usual condition—your friend kindly offers to get you a glass, don't say "the dipper is good enough, don't trouble yourself." This is no trouble to the neat housekeeper, for she has a strong preference that you use the glass, for various reasons.

When you have spent a day with a friend who does her own work, and she has exerted every nerve for your pleasure, after she has washed her china, and her work done up, don't expect her to sit at the piano or organ all the evening and play until she is ready to fall from the stool. And during the day (unless invited by her) don't go into her kitchen and ask a hundred questions. There are very few whom we welcome in our kitchen. Old-fashioned housekeepers seldom do this. Only those who devoted upon girls know not the annoyance of this terrible intrusion.

Randolph on the Bible.

The following is the language of John Randolph concerning the Bible: "I was raised by a pious mother (God bless her memory,) who taught me the Christian religion in all its requirements. But alas! I grew up an infidel; if not an infidel complete, yet a decided deist. But when I became a man, in this as well as in political and all other matters, I resolved to examine for myself, and never coin my faith to another man's sleeve. So I bought that Bible; I pored over it; I examined it carefully; I sought and procured those books for and against; and when my labors were ended I came to this irresistible conclusion: The Bible is true. It would have been as easy for a man to have written Sir Isaac Newton's treatise on optics as for uninspired men to have written the Bible."
